MEMORANDUM FOR WILLIAM P. CLARK

THROUGH:

CHARLES P. TYSON

FROM:

HENRY R. NAU/ARN JAMES M. RENTSCHLER/J.M. DENNIS G. BLAIR DB

SUBJECT:

Overall Approach to the Versailles/NATO Summits

The preparations for the Versailles and NATO Summits are now underway and proceeding along separate tracks in the bureaucracy. We (along with Chuck Tyson) are coordinating closely to ensure that the developments in these two areas are brought together at this level. We sent you recently a lengthy memo on procedural matters relating to both the Versailles and NATO Summits. This memo treats the substantive interrelationship of the two Summits.

The memos at Tab I lay out a number of questions concerning this interrelationship and ask Secretaries Haig and Regan, along with Secretary Weinberger, to coordinate and produce a joint analysis of these issues. (McFarlane recommended that the Haig memo request coordination with Weinberger.) The memo asks for a paper that might be used for an NSC discussion of our overall strategy toward the Versailles and NATO Summits. The purpose of the paper is to force some hard thinking about what defines success in the case of the two Summits and what flexibility we may have between various foreign policy issues (e.g. defense and economic) and between foreign and domestic policy issues to achieve our objectives. We would envisage addressing the results of this exercise during a Senior White House Group meeting on or about April 2.

RECOMMENDATION: That you sign the memos at Tab I to Haig and Regan.

Subject: Memos to Don Regan and Al Haig on the Big Picture of the Summits

In the attached package, the staff asks you to send memos to Don Regan and Haig asking them to focus on the "big picture" of what our goals are for the two summits and how we can achieve them.

That is a worthwhile motive, but I wonder whether, at this point after a substantial amount of work is underway on goals themes etc. whether this won't do more to confuse than to enlighten.

If you decide to go ahead with the memos, I suggest that you delete the one to Regan. In it you ask him what our goals are for the NATO summit. That is not in his purview. I recommend instead that you let it go at sending the one to Haig, asking him to coordinate with Regan and Cap.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE HONORABLE DONALD T. REGAN
The Secretary of the Treasury

SUBJECT: Overall Approach to the Versailles/NATO Summits

The Versailles and NATO Summits confront us with a four-fold challenge:

- to demonstrate a common alliance perception of the threat to the security of the West and common political resolve to deal with this threat;
- to reaffirm shared Western values especially with the successor generation in Europe;
- to strengthen Western defense capabilities;
- to restore economic confidence and growth in the midst of the worst recession in postwar history.

We need to think about the interrelationship of these four aspects of the challenge and structure them in a rational, overall approach to these two Summit meetings:

1. What do we seek to achieve specifically at the NATO Summit (i.e. what would make the NATO Summit a success from our point of view?)
 - political unity and resolve primarily, including political cooperation toward third areas?
 - security (defense, arms control, etc.) objectives primarily?
 - shared value objectives related more broadly to what we are defending?
 - all of the above and if so with what relative priority?
2. What do we seek to achieve specifically at the Versailles Summit (i.e. what would make this meeting a success from our point of view?)

- trade objectives primarily, both multilateral objectives in the Western trading system and restraints in the East-West trading system;
 - domestic policy objectives primarily, either renewed confidence in our policies or some attempt to influence the direction of the policies of our allies;
 - both and/or other goals and if so with what relative priority?
3. How do our objectives at each Summit relate to one another?
- Do concrete steps in the security and economic policy area take precedence over more psychological objectives in the area of political resolve or shared values?
 - Conversely, do constraints on what we can achieve in concrete security or economic areas lead us to give higher priority to political or shared value objectives?
 - Do our objectives at one Summit take priority over those at the other and require some flexibility in one area to achieve our objectives in the other?
4. How do the objectives we seek at the Versailles and NATO Summits impact on domestic economic and security issues or, conversely, what are the implications of domestic issues (e.g. the budget situation) for formulating and achieving our objectives at the Summits?
- consequences of budget issue being resolved or not being resolved before the Summits;
 - relationship between our domestic actions on defense expenditures and our objectives with respect to allied defense expenditures;
 - etc.

REGARDING: Versailles Summit

I have received three drafts of the energy paper for the Versailles Summit (latest attached). I commented on both earlier versions, and it is apparent that no note was taken of my comments, nor those of others who saw it from OMB or CEA.

My comments related primarily to the general autarchist tone of much of the writing, an overly great tendency to support diplomatic rather than market solutions, and a number of specific items which appear to be overly interventionist.

In particular, you might note:

- o Page one, paragraph two - "Government action" where "economic concerns are threatened."
- o Page two, point I and II and page three, point (iii) - "Marginal economic costs" for electric pricing is a tricky issue we may hesitate to commit on here. Also, do we need yet another nuclear study.
- o Page four, point (v) - This still looks like greater subsidies for third world lending.
- o Page four, point III (ii) - Some would dispute the analysis of 1979. Loss of Iranian production had large and profound long-range consequences.
- o Page five, same point as above - Implication that "high governmental level" meetings will solve energy situations.
- o Page five, point IV, first "--" and third "--" - Sounds like we should invest and develop regardless of price.
- o Page six, eighth "--" - World Bank changes again.
