MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: JOHN M. POINDEXTER JM

SUBJECT: Tokyo Summit: Introductory Briefing Materials for Weekend Reading

Issue

To begin your preparation for the Tokyo Economic Summit, the attached memorandum has been prepared describing the Summit and highlighting major economic issues (Tab A).

Facts

Your Personal Representative for the Economic Summit, Allen Wallis, has prepared a short briefing paper (in conjunction with your other Sherpas, Stephen Danzansky of the NSC and David Mulford of Treasury) on the Economic Summit as an introduction to the issues you will be seeing as part of the Summit preparation process in the coming weeks.

Discussion

The Tokyo Economic Summit (May 4-6) will be similar in format to the most recent Summits. The principal economic issues will be: domestic economic policies, exchange rate issues, international trade and LDC debt problems. Briefing materials on the first two of these core economic topics, domestic economic policies and the international monetary system, are included in the attached memorandum. These issues will be taken up in greater detail in your meeting with the Summit White House Group on Monday, April 7, additional briefing sessions and the final briefing book on the Summit.

Recommendation

OK No

— That you review the attached introductory briefing memorandum prepared by your Personal Representative for the Economic Summit, Allen Wallis.

FROM: Allen Wallis AW

SUBJECT: Initial Briefing Package on the Tokyo Economic Summit

With your departure for Bali and the Tokyo Economic Summit now just three weeks away, this memorandum (prepared in consultation with my "Sherpa" colleagues, Assistant Secretary David Mulford of the Treasury and Stephen Danzansky of NSC) will describe how the Summit fits into your overall Asian trip, and outline events in Tokyo. In addition, I have attached background papers on the economic situation in the Summit countries and international monetary issues. These last two issues will be updated for your final briefing book in light of discussions at the IMF Interim Committee meeting next week and the OECD Ministerial the week after. I also understand that Beryl Sprinkel will be briefing you on the U.S. economy in late April, and will coordinate that briefing with other pre-Summit meetings.

The Asian Trip

On April 26 you depart on Air Force 1 for Bali, with stopovers in Honolulu and Guam. While in Bali, you will meet with Indonesian President Soeharto, and you will also participate in a meeting with Foreign Ministers of the six ASEAN countries -- Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, and Thailand. Your discussions in Bali will focus on regional political issues, and will take place mainly on May 1.

You will travel to Tokyo for the Economic Summit on May 2, while Mrs. Reagan departs for separate meetings on narcotics in Malaysia and Thailand. Your working schedule in Tokyo begins on May 3, with bilateral meetings with other Summit leaders and a proposed afternoon speech before the American Chamber of Commerce in Japan.

The Summit itself will follow the pattern of the last few years. It will begin on Sunday, May 4 with an afternoon arrival ceremony, reception, and working dinner. The first meeting on May 5 will be a morning session for Heads of State and Government, followed by a working luncheon with Foreign Ministers. (To accommodate Dutch Prime Minister Lubbers' participation in the Summit as President of the EC Council, there will be nine participants in Heads-only meetings instead of the usual eight.) In the afternoon, there will be a plenary session including both Foreign and Finance Ministers. That evening, Heads will again have a working dinner, after which their Personal Representatives will begin their all-night drafting session on the Summit Communique. Negotiation of the Political Declaration will be handled by Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs Roz Ridgway.

The next morning, May 6, Heads of Government will meet briefly to finish their private discussions and consider the Communique; they will be joined for the rest of the morning and at luncheon by Foreign and Finance Ministers. That afternoon the Summit will conclude with a joint press conference at which Prime Minister Nakasone will read the Communique and Political Declaration. In the evening the Emperor and his wife will host a banquet at the Imperial Palace.

Tokyo Summit Issues

Economic and political issues for the Tokyo Summit will be outlined in your meeting with the Summit White House Group next Monday. In brief, the Summit will cover all the usual economic topics: domestic economic policies, exchange rate issues, international trade, and LDC debt problems. In addition, there will be some "specialized" issues, such as a review of the manned space station project, cooperation in high-technology and education. Prime Minister Nakasone is personally interested in the last two areas.

When we met with you in January, you agreed that we should request that time be set aside for a "free-form" discussion during the morning meeting on May 5. The original idea behind this proposal was to leave room for unstructured and personal discussions, and to fight the tendency for bureaucracies to try to program every word in advance. While the other countries accepted our proposal, their Personal Representatives are uneasy about the idea of a discussion whose contents are not prearranged, and they have asked us repeatedly what you might want to discuss during that hour. Neither we nor any other country has volunteered a topic yet; however, this would be a reasonable time for Prime Minister Nakasone to raise his ideas about education, or for Prime Minister Thatcher to discuss problems posed by an aging society. As you know, we have suggested two issues which you might wish to raise: the future of the Soviet economy, and the need for fundamental reform of agricultural policies. Briefing sessions have been arranged for you to meet with outside experts, should you decide to pursue either (or both) of these topics.

Background Papers

I have attached two short papers for you on the economic situation in Summit countries and on the international monetary system. The paper on Summit economies outlines the economic environment in which the Tokyo Summit will occur and suggests our main objectives for the discussions of economic performance and policies. The paper on the international monetary system provides background on issues which will be discussed at the April 9-10 meeting of the IMF Interim Committee. The outcome of those discussions will influence Summit treatment of monetary issues. Secretary Baker will update you on that meeting before you leave for Asia, and we will incorporate the results in your final briefing material.

THE ECONOMIC SITUATION IN SUMMIT COUNTRIES

This fourth year of economic expansion may well be one of the strongest. Oil prices have declined sharply; inflation is at its lowest level since 1967; interest rates are falling; and exchange rates have moved into a much more sustainable configuration, promoting adjustment of trade and current account imbalances. We estimate that real growth in Summit countries will be in the 3-1/2 to 4 percent range this year and next, with inflation under 3 percent. The aggregate growth number, however, masks substantial differences among countries. Relative to recent experience, the Japanese economy may be quite weak, reflecting the adverse impact of yen appreciation on exports and export-related investment. In the near-term this may outweigh the pro-growth effects of lower oil prices. The four major European economies, particularly Germany and France, will be strong compared with recent performance.

The outlook for the U.S. current account deficit has improved as well. At current exchange rates and expected growth rates, the U.S. deficit is likely to remain in the $120 billion range in 1986 and fall to under $100 billion in 1987. Japanese and German trade surpluses will grow in 1986, as falling oil prices outweigh the negative effects on their trade balances of their currencies' appreciation. Declines in their surpluses are forecast for 1987 as the U.S. trade position strengthens.

Unless foreign growth performance improves significantly, the U.S. trade account will begin to deteriorate again in late 1987. This is why our key economic objective for the Tokyo Summit is to urge other Summit countries to strengthen their domestic sources of growth, such as consumption and private investment. This will allow them to grow with less reliance on exports to the United States, give us a better opportunity to increase our exports to them, and in Europe's case, help reduce record high unemployment.

At the Summit we can stress two ways of strengthening foreign growth. In the short-term, governments should pass on the benefits of falling oil prices to oil consumers, rather than taxing them away. This will ensure that the full growth and inflation gains are realized. Italy, France and Japan may be tempted to limit the benefits to consumers. Over the medium term, governments need to take advantage of the stronger growth environment to adopt politically difficult structural reforms that will boost growth and employment potential. Efforts over the past year to make economies more market-oriented and thus more efficient have been marginal. While stronger growth may reduce unemployment slightly in Europe in 1986, the improvement will not be lasting unless labor and capital markets are further deregulated and tax reform to improve work incentives is pursued. Japan also seriously needs to enact tax reform to remove artificial incentives to save and disincentives to spend and invest. The Japanese and Europeans claim they are making significant progress on the structural front but policy changes to date have been few.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY SYSTEM

Interest in strengthening the international monetary system remains strong, despite the exchange rate changes since the Plaza Agreement. There remains substantial concern, both on the Hill and internationally, about exchange rate volatility, protectionism, and the question of an international monetary conference. This interest has been heightened in the aftermath of your State of the Union directive that Secretary Baker "determine if the nations of the world should convene to discuss the role and relationship of our currencies."

Discussions on strengthening the monetary system are proceeding in the IMF, which has been reviewing two reports on the functioning of the international monetary system -- the G-10 industrial country report which was commissioned at the Williamsburg Summit, and that of the G-24 developing countries.

The central focus of efforts to improve the monetary system relates to the development of arrangements to achieve greater exchange rate stability through improving coordination of economic policies by major countries. There is a general consensus to strengthen surveillance, including the IMF's ability to promote sound policies. Beyond that, a wide range of proposals has been made, and no consensus has emerged.

- o The French have supported establishment of a system of target zones, in which exchange rate fluctuations would be limited to agreed ranges. The British, Germans, and Japanese oppose this proposal.
- o Another approach involves the possible establishment of a range of quantitative indicators against which countries' economic performance could be measured. Significant deviations in performance with respect to the indicators could act as a trigger for consultations.

Strong reservations regarding the possibility of an international monetary conference have been raised by the Germans, Japanese, British, and the Canadians to a lesser extent. They fear such a conference could become highly politicized, create unrealistic expectations concerning fundamental reforms, and result in pressures by less developed countries for financial concessions.

These issues will be reviewed in early April in a series of meetings, including the G-10 and the IMF Interim Committee. We are keeping our options open at this time, and no decisions regarding an international monetary conference will be taken until after the April meetings at the very earliest.

[NOTE: Updated background and talking points to be supplied after April meetings.]

the Cabinet Room

The first meeting of the Summit White House Group (SWHG) has been scheduled with the President for Monday, April 7. The purpose of the meeting is to review progress on preparations for the Tokyo Economic Summit (May 4-6), and to highlight important related policy issues.

To date, all Summit preparations have been overseen by a Summit White House Working Group (SWHWG) that has reported to you by memorandum on January 16 and March 17. The SWHWG has been made up entirely of White House and NSC staff. Except for the brief meeting held in January when the President met with the Sherpas, next Monday's meeting will be the first planning session in which State and Treasury will participate. It will be an important meeting to bring the President up-to-date and to fully involve appropriate agencies.

The proposed agenda and list of participants for this meeting are attached at Tabs 1 and 2, respectively. Following previous practice, at Tab A is a memorandum from John Poindexter, as co-chairman of the SWHG, convening Monday's meeting with the President and transmitting the agenda to Summit White House Group members. A briefing memorandum will be sent in advance of the meeting.
