PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PRIME MINISTER CHIRAC OF FRANCE
STATE DINNER TOAST P 6:46
TUESDAY, MARCH 31, 1987

Mr. Prime Minister, Madame Chirac, Mr. Foreign Minister, honored guests, ladies and gentlemen: Welcome to the White House and, if I may, to this splendid spring evening. We've spoken today of the challenges that confront our two great nations. This -- well, this evening, Nancy and I would like to invite you to relax. Mr. Prime Minister, Madame Chirac, you will always be welcome friends in this house.

No one can live in this house for long without feeling the vibrant spirit of our French and American forebearers -- of Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin, of Lafayette and Rochambeau. And I just have to believe they would be proud to know that the common commitment to freedom that served as the foundation of our friendship so long ago remains alive in the White House tonight.

But even as we look to the legendary figures of the past, we look as well to the major French and American figures of the present. Certainly there are many here tonight -- many who personify the bonds between us -- in diplomacy, in culture and commerce, in entertainment and science. Just this week, we reached a landmark in medical cooperation, with an important agreement regarding AIDS research -- an agreement recognizing that French and American scientists stand together in the forefront of the battle against this tragic disease. To you all -- physicians, diplomats, so many others -- welcome.

This evening, too, Nancy and I cannot help but recall our own travels to France during these last 6 years. I remember especially ~~of~~ meeting with my Summit colleagues in the halls and gardens of Versailles Palace -- a place of immense beauty, a place so alive with the history of France. I think of standing on Normandy Beach, with the channel waters behind and the cliffs above, thinking of the men who fought and died on that terrible day nearly 43 years ago, when the fate of the free world hung in the balance -- the men who fought and died for freedom.

As is only befitting close friends, Mr. Prime Minister, our discussions were frank and constructive. We covered East-West issues, arms control, the struggle against terrorism, regional conflicts -- a broad agenda. We discussed our differences on trade issues -- and how to narrow those differences in ways that would advance the economic well-being of our peoples. I know that you continued those discussions through the day with Secretary Shultz, Secretary Weinberger, and Secretary Baker. As always, our discussions were able to take almost for granted certain shared values.

Yet these values -- liberty, democracy, the dignity of each individual -- these values are sacred. And nowhere are they more important or more in evidence today than in the strength of the Atlantic Alliance, and in the unshakable commitment of the United States to the defense of Europe. So it is that even as we seek to negotiate arms control and other agreements with the Soviet Union, we will continue to consult closely with our European allies. Our message is clear -- to friend and foe alike:

America stands with Europe.

Permit me now to invite you all to join me in raising a glass in friendship. To France -- and to our honored guests,
Prime Minister Chirac and Madame Chirac.

No one can live in this house for long without feeling the vibrant spirit of our French and American forebearers -- of Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin, of Lafayette and Rochambeau [ro-shom-BOH]. And I just have to believe they would be proud to know that the common commitment to freedom that served as the foundation of our friendship so long ago remains alive in the White House tonight.

But even as we look to the legendary figures of the past, we look as well to the major French and American figures of the present. Certainly there are many here tonight -- many who personify the bonds between us -- in diplomacy, in culture and commerce, in entertainment and science. Just recently, we reached an important agreement regarding AIDS research -- an agreement recognizing that French and American scientists stand together in the forefront of the battle against this tragic disease. To everyone -- eminent guests all -- welcome.

PRIME MINISTER CHIRAC OF FRANCE
STATE DINNER TOAST

MR. PRIME MINISTER, MADAME CHIRAC,
MR. FOREIGN MINISTER, HONORED GUESTS, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: WELCOME TO THE WHITE HOUSE
AND, IF I MAY, TO THIS SPLENDID SPRING
EVENING. WE'VE SPOKEN TODAY OF THE CHALLENGES THAT CONFRONT OUR TWO GREAT
NATIONS. THIS -- WELL, THIS EVENING,
NANCY AND I WOULD LIKE TO INVITE YOU TO RELAX. MR. PRIME MINISTER, MADAME CHIRAC,
YOU WILL ALWAYS BE WELCOME FRIENDS IN THIS HOUSE. AND BY THE WAY, I HOPE YOU ALL ENJOYED THIS EVENING'S DINNER WINE.
YOU SEE, IT WAS PRODUCED IN CALIFORNIA --
AS PART OF A JOINT FRENCH-AMERICAN VENTURE.
BUT NO ONE CAN LIVE IN THIS HOUSE FOR LONG WITHOUT FEELING THE VIBRANT SPIRIT OF OUR FRENCH AND AMERICAN FOREBEARERS -- OF THOMAS JEFFERSON AND BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, OF LAFAYETTE AND ROCHAMBEAU.

AND I JUST HAVE TO BELIEVE THEY WOULD BE PROUD TO KNOW THAT THE COMMON COMMITMENT TO FREEDOM THAT SERVED AS THE FOUNDATION OF OUR FRIENDSHIP SO LONG AGO REMAINS ALIVE IN THE WHITE HOUSE TONIGHT.

BUT EVEN AS WE LOOK TO THE LEGENDARY FIGURES OF THE PAST, WE LOOK AS WELL TO THE MAJOR FRENCH AND AMERICAN FIGURES OF THE PRESENT. CERTAINLY THERE ARE MANY HERE TONIGHT -- MANY WHO PERSONIFY THE BONDS BETWEEN US -- IN DIPLOMACY, IN CULTURE AND COMMERCE, IN ENTERTAINMENT AND SCIENCE. JUST RECENTLY, WE REACHED AN IMPORTANT AGREEMENT REGARDING AIDS RESEARCH -- AN AGREEMENT RECOGNIZING THAT FRENCH AND AMERICAN SCIENTISTS STAND TOGETHER IN THE FOREFRONT OF THE BATTLE AGAINST THIS TRAGIC DISEASE. TO EVERYONE -- EMINENT GUESTS ALL -- WELCOME.

I THINK OF STANDING ON THE BEACHES OF NORMANDY, WITH THE CHANNEL WATERS BEHIND AND THE CLIFFS ABOVE, THINKING OF THE MEN WHO FOUGHT AND DIED ON THAT TERRIBLE DAY NEARLY 43 YEARS AGO, WHEN THE FATE OF THE FREE WORLD HUNG IN THE BALANCE -- THE MEN WHO FOUGHT AND DIED FOR FREEDOM.

AS IS ONLY BEFITTING CLOSE FRIENDS, MR. PRIME MINISTER, OUR DISCUSSIONS WERE FRANK AND CONSTRUCTIVE. WE COVERED EAST-WEST ISSUES, ARMS CONTROL, THE STRUGGLE AGAINST TERRORISM, REGIONAL CONFLICTS -- A BROAD AGENDA.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PRIME MINISTER CHIRAC OF FRANCE
ENTERTAINMENT THANK YOU
TUESDAY, MARCH 31, 1987

Thank you, Dionne, for a typical Warwick performance -- one that started on a peak and went up.

In a career spanning two decades, Dionne, you've had hit after hit -- "Walk On By," "Anyone Who had a Heart," "Do You Know the Way to San Jose?" the list goes on and on. Your current hit features a melody at once lovely and energetic, lyrics both fun and meaningful -- "That's What Friends Are For." It is characteristic of your generosity that the proceeds are being donated to the American Foundation for A.I.D.S. Research.

And tonight -- well, what a performance. If you'll forgive me, Mr. Prime Minister, Madame Chirac: I believe that what Dionne shared with us tonight is best described in French. Joie de vivre.

Dionne Warwick, our deepest thanks.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PRIME MINISTER CHIRAC OF FRANCE
TUESDAY, MARCH 31, 1987

Mr. Prime Minister, Madame Chirac, Mr. Foreign Minister, honored guests, ladies and gentlemen: Welcome to the White House and, if I may, to this splendid spring evening. We've spoken today of the challenges that confront our two great nations. This -- well, this evening, Nancy and I would like to invite you to relax. Mr. Prime Minister, Madame Chirac, you will always be welcome friends in this house.

No one can live in this house for long without feeling the vibrant spirit of our French and American forebearers -- of Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin, of Lafayette and Rochambeau. And I just have to believe they would be proud to know that the common commitment to freedom that served as the foundation of our friendship so long ago remains alive in the White House tonight.

But even as we look to the legendary figures of the past, we look as well to the major French and American figures of the present. Certainly there are many here tonight -- many who personify the bonds between us -- in diplomacy, in culture and commerce, in entertainment and science. Just this week, we reached a landmark in medical cooperation, with an important agreement regarding AIDS research -- an agreement recognizing that French and American scientists stand together in the forefront of the battle against this tragic disease. To you all -- physicians, diplomats, so many others -- welcome.

This evening, too, Nancy and I cannot help but recall our own travels to France during these last 6 years. I remember especially of meeting with my Summit colleagues in the halls and gardens of Versailles Palace -- a place of immense beauty, a place so alive with the history of France. I think of standing on Normandy Beach, with the channel waters behind and the cliffs above, thinking of the men who fought and died on that terrible day nearly 43 years ago, when the fate of the free world hung in the balance -- the men who fought and died for freedom.

As is only befitting close friends, Mr. Prime Minister, our discussions were frank and constructive. We covered East-West issues, arms control, the struggle against terrorism, regional conflicts -- a broad agenda. We discussed our differences on trade issues -- and how to narrow those differences in ways that would advance the economic well-being of our peoples. I know that you continued those discussions through the day with Secretary Shultz, Secretary Weinberger, and Secretary Baker. As always, our discussions were able to take almost for granted certain shared values.

Yet these values -- liberty, democracy, the dignity of each individual -- these values are sacred. And nowhere are they more important or more in evidence today than in the strength of the Atlantic Alliance, and in the unshakable commitment of the United States to the defense of Europe. So it is that even as we seek to negotiate arms control and other agreements with the Soviet Union, we will continue to consult closely with our European allies. Our message is clear -- to friend and foe alike:

America stands with Europe.

Permit me now to invite you all to join me in raising a glass in friendship. To France -- and to our honored guests,
Prime Minister Chirac and Madame Chirac.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PRIME MINISTER CHIRAC OF FRANCE
STATE DINNER TOAST P 6:46
TUESDAY, MARCH 31, 1987

Mr. Prime Minister, Madame Chirac, Mr. Foreign Minister, honored guests, ladies and gentlemen: Welcome to the White House and, if I may, to this splendid spring evening. We've spoken today of the challenges that confront our two great nations. This -- well, this evening, Nancy and I would like to invite you to relax. Mr. Prime Minister, Madame Chirac, you will always be welcome friends in this house.

No one can live in this house for long without feeling the vibrant spirit of our French and American forebearers -- of Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin, of Lafayette and Rochambeau. And I just have to believe they would be proud to know that the common commitment to freedom that served as the foundation of our friendship so long ago remains alive in the White House tonight.

But even as we look to the legendary figures of the past, we look as well to the major French and American figures of the present. Certainly there are many here tonight -- many who personify the bonds between us -- in diplomacy, in culture and commerce, in entertainment and science. Just this week, we reached a landmark in medical cooperation, with an important agreement regarding AIDS research -- an agreement recognizing that French and American scientists stand together in the forefront of the battle against this tragic disease. To you all -- physicians, diplomats, so many others -- welcome.

This evening, too, Nancy and I cannot help but recall our own travels to France during these last 6 years. I remember especially of meeting with my Summit colleagues in the halls and gardens of Versailles Palace -- a place of immense beauty, a place so alive with the history of France. I think of standing on Normandy Beach, with the channel waters behind and the cliffs above, thinking of the men who fought and died on that terrible day nearly 43 years ago, when the fate of the free world hung in the balance -- the men who fought and died for freedom.

As is only befitting close friends, Mr. Prime Minister, our discussions were frank and constructive. We covered East-West issues, arms control, the struggle against terrorism, regional conflicts -- a broad agenda. We discussed our differences on trade issues -- and how to narrow those differences in ways that would advance the economic well-being of our peoples. I know that you continued those discussions through the day with Secretary Shultz, Secretary Weinberger, and Secretary Baker. As always, our discussions were able to take almost for granted certain shared values.

Yet these values -- liberty, democracy, the dignity of each individual -- these values are sacred. And nowhere are they more important or more in evidence today than in the strength of the Atlantic Alliance, and in the unshakable commitment of the United States to the defense of Europe. So it is that even as we seek to negotiate arms control and other agreements with the Soviet Union, we will continue to consult closely with our European allies. Our message is clear -- to friend and foe alike:

America stands with Europe.

Permit me now to invite you all to join me in raising a glass in friendship. To France -- and to our honored guests,
Prime Minister Chirac and Madame Chirac.
