SUBJECT: Williamsburg Summit Follow-up: Key Themes

The Williamsburg Summit has been a significant success. The President, together with his Summit-nation colleagues, achieved important progress on economic, political and security issues.

Although the Summit is officially over, it is essential to maintain momentum from that meeting. Thus, as officials from U.S. agencies and departments address Summit results, they should put special emphasis on the following key themes from the Williamsburg Declaration:

- The success of the Summit reflected, and was a product of, inspired collegial leadership (from a public diplomacy standpoint it will not be helpful to single out any one Summit partner's performance as stronger or weaker than any of the others).
- The Summit reaffirmed our shared democratic values.
- We made real progress in reinforcing our economic and security ties.
- The informal approach to the discussions enhanced both the quality and spontaneity of the Summit leaders' exchange.
- We resisted Soviet efforts to drive a wedge between us by committing ourselves to maintaining security, while seeking real arms reductions.

FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY

FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY

- The work done at Williamsburg is directly relevant to the generations who will follow. The West is tackling long-standing challenges head-on, not settling for quick fixes.
- Williamsburg confirmed commitment to the convergence of our economies toward low inflation and sustained growth, thereby generating greater employment opportunities.

For additional and more detailed guidance, it may be useful to draw on the attached background, which carries inter-agency clearance and has been made available to our overseas missions.

Key Results of 1983 Williamsburg Economic Summit

-- The Williamsburg Summit was a clear success from U.S. viewpoint and, we believe, for all the participants. Our assessment is best expressed in the President's final statement after he read the declaration: "Our meeting has shown a spirit of confidence, optimism and certainty--confidence that recovery is underway, optimism that it will be durable and certainty that economic policy and security ties among us will be strengthened in the future."

-- The President considers the Summit to have been a signal success for all the participants.

-- The atmosphere was relaxed and informal. Each of the leaders was able to address the issues each felt was most important, and the degree of consensus achieved was particularly striking.

-- They quickly agreed that a successful strategy depends on our ability to recognize the linkages within the international economy and to act across a broad range of policies so that the program is coherent, reinforcing the links rather than tearing them in different directions.

-- It is also worth stressing that their point of reference and departure was much broader than their concerns about economic issues as such, important as they are.

-- The President has emphasized that the work of the Summit did not begin or end at Williamsburg; it is a long-term process which addresses the most pressing concerns of the successor generation and lays a solid foundation for the kind of world free peoples cherish.

-- What really assures the cohesion of this group of countries is their unity as free democracies, marked by the values they share and their dedication to the promotion and defense of their freedoms and values. Thus, all recognize the fundamental fact, brought out early in the joint statement, that the prosperity they seek is more than material gain, and that this prosperity itself contributes to the defense of shared values and their freedom.

-- In practical terms, this fundamental principle is what underlies their recognition of the relationships between prosperity and security, and between security and certain aspects of our economic relations with the East. This restatement of the security dimension in East-West economic relations is one of the more constant aspects, both of this summit and our relationships.

-- On the action program itself, it may help to see the strategy in three broad components reflecting our relationships among ourselves, the interrelationships within the world economy, and our relationships with the rest of the world.

-- As regards the relationships among ourselves, the most important actions from our viewpoint are those which the leaders decided to take to strengthen the consultative process, begun last year at Versailles, to help each of us bring about greater convergence in economic performance toward sustained non-inflationary growth.

-- Movement toward such convergence is the key to achieving more stability in exchange rates.

-- In the annex published with the declaration, we have laid out the procedures to be used in the consultative process. After reaffirming the direct linkage between exchange market stability and policies designed to bring about greater convergence, it describes the policy areas which are to be examined and makes it clear that the purpose is to determine whether the policies being pursued in the short term are or are not likely to achieve the medium-term objective. If those policies are more likely to produce divergence than convergence, and in particular if one country is pursuing more inflationary policies than others, the group can propose corrective action for consideration by the diverging country. The value of this process is that it is multilateral but limited to those countries with greatest responsibility for the system; it uses the IMF director as a catalyst for analysis and debate, and it is comprehensive, considering all significant aspects of economic policy, thus permitting coherent policy suggestions.

-- In our view, this process subsumes the separate invitation to finance ministers to "define the conditions for improving the monetary system." We regard the achievement of greater convergence as perhaps the most important condition. Once those conditions have been defined, we can consider the part, if any, that a monetary conference might play.

-- The second set of interrelationships addressed in the action program are those among the world trade and financial systems.

-- Here, too, a coherent set of policy guidelines, designed to follow up and reinforce the commitments we have all recently made in the IMF, GATT and OECD, will help us to assure that we will come to effective grips with the major trade and financial problems we face in the months and years ahead.

-- These actions implicitly recognize certain key interrelationships in the world economy:

- the link between sustainable growth and the open trading system.
- the link between open markets and the availability of financing.

-- In effect, growth will be choked off if we do not act to keep our markets open and look toward increased trade liberalization in the future; and trade cannot grow without adequate financing available.

-- In this regard, our trade and financial relations with the developing countries are absolutely fundamental to their recovery and to the sustainability of ours.

-- The declaration outlines both short and longer-term aspects of a strategy to deal with interrelated trade and financial problems of the developing countries.

- In the short term, it reaffirms our common strategy for assuring orderly economic adjustment in countries with debt management problems, through provision of private and official financing in support of effective adjustment programs; our commitment to early ratification of IMF and GAB increases, and underscores the need to reverse protectionism and maintain open markets.

- In the longer term, the declaration signals the need to work for further trade liberalization, especially with and among LDCs, to examine proposals for a new negotiating round in GATT for this purpose, and to ensure that aid is targeted particularly toward the poorer countries and such priority sectors as food production.

-- Finally, as regards our relationships with the rest of the world, two aspects can be stressed:

-- First, those with the developing countries. In addition to our agreement on assuring an adequate flow of resources to the poorer countries there is agreement on the basic approach our countries will take to the UNCTAD conference in Belgrade this month, with particular emphasis on our desire for constructive and practical cooperation and results.

-- The second aspect of our relations with others is our agreement to pursue the work begun this winter in OECD, COCOM and NATO to develop a broader consensus among ourselves and with other Western countries on our economic relations with the East.

Dear Mr. Darmon:

~~It was a pleasure to meet you at President Reagan's International Summit of Industrialized Nations in Williamsburg.~~ The Summit seemed to be quite a success. Congratulations!

I Can't Believe It's Yogurt's participation in the Summit was a success as well. Everyone loved our frozen yogurt. We were proud to be able to make a contribution to President Reagan's efforts toward economic progress. Also, we appreciate President Reagan's support of entrepreneurial businesses. I Can't Believe It's Yogurt firmly believes the entrepreneur is fundamental and vital to economic stability and growth.

I hope all has been well with you since the Summit. The task of Assistant to the President is formidable, yet I am sure, quite exciting. I wish you the best of luck in your career.

Have a great summer. I have enclosed an I Can't Believe It's Yogurt T-shirt for you to enjoy. It is both fun and comfortable to wear.

Please contact me when you are in Dallas. As a native Dallasite, I would be glad to give you information on where to go, etc.; or perhaps I could treat you or your group to dinner.

Also, watch for our stores in the future as we expand into your area.

Best regards,

Julie Brice

Cabinet Line Message to Prime Minister Thatcher (C)

Dear Margaret,

It was good news to hear you can make it to Williamsburg for part of the Economic Summit meeting. Knowing you are involved in a tough election campaign, I appreciate your taking time to come. I will be glad to meet with you on Saturday afternoon after you arrive. It will have to be a short meeting because of our schedules, but I look forward to it. (U)

I understand you would like to talk to the press on Sunday evening before your departure. I think you should, and we are working to get permission from the other participants. ~~(C)~~

We have done everything possible to make this Summit a successful and harmonious one. We should strive for this objective in the meetings themselves and particularly in the joint statement which I will make to the press at the conclusion. This joint public statement will be drafted after your departure. I may need your help Sunday afternoon when we instruct our personal representatives to draw up the first draft of the joint statement. Although we have worked hard with the French to identify common ground, they may press for a different type of joint statement from the one you and I and Helmut Kohl will prefer. ~~(C)~~

Although we will try to accommodate legitimate French concerns, and we do not wish to embarrass Francois Mitterrand, we must insist on a joint statement which has a tone of realistic optimism, and we must resist a call for a new Bretton Woods conference. ~~(C)~~

I hope I can count on your support in these issues, and that my sherpa, Allen Wallis, can count on Robert Armstrong's support during the drafting sessions. ~~(C)~~

Good luck with your election campaign. I look forward to seeing you on Saturday. If there is any way your schedule would allow you to stay through Monday, it would be a great help to me. (C)

FROM: ERIC I. GARFINKEL Eric

SUBJECT: Williamsburg Summit

The following talking points on "Combatting Protectionism in International Trade" have been prepared (in draft) by the National Security Council staff for the President's use at the Williamsburg Summit:

- o We all in difficult economic times feel increased domestic pressures to protect our own businessmen and workers.
- o We have all had to compromise as a result of these pressures. We have all had to make some arrangements which restrict trade. It is a hard political fact of life.
- o As recovery strengthens, we must avoid protectionist actions. If we do not, our recovery itself will be impeded and we will all suffer. Trade is essential to a strong recovery.
- o In the United States, we may run a $70B trade deficit, and we will have a Presidential election in 1984. Yet we will not give in to partisan politics and protectionist pressures.
- o It is also vital for LDC debtor nations to have access to our markets if they are to manage their debt.
- o We must do more with GATT, making it adapt to the emerging issues of the 80's. Issues such as trade in high technology products and services.
- o Our agreements or arrangements on steel, or on automobiles, or on agricultural products, must be seen as short-term measures which we should aim to remove as soon as possible.
- o Our goal should continue to be trade liberalization.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE 1983 SUMMIT (c)

I have invited the Summit countries to the annual Economic Summit in Spring 1983, in Williamsburg, Virginia. This Directive clarifies the responsibilities of various agencies in preparing for this Summit meeting. (U)

I. Preparations with Other Governments - "Sherpa" Team

On the recommendation of the Secretary of State, I have appointed Allen Wallis, Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, to be my Personal Representative for the preparation of policy aspects of the Summit meeting. In addition, I have designated Michael McManus, in the White House, to be my Coordinator for Administration of the Summit meeting. Together with Henry Nau, Senior Staff Member of the National Security Council, and Beryl Sprinkel, Under Secretary for Monetary Affairs in the Department of the Treasury, these individuals will direct the overall preparations for the Summit and act as official hosts for the U.S. in the appropriate preparatory meetings. (U)

II. Preparations within the U.S. Government

The President's Personal Representative will chair an Interdepartmental Group (IG Summit) of the Senior Interdepartmental Group for International Economic Policy (SIG-IEP), consisting of representatives at the Under Secretary level from the Vice President's office, the Departments of Treasury, Defense, Agriculture, Commerce and Energy, Director of Central Intelligence, USTR, NSC and CEA. The IG and SIG will have responsibility for reviewing policy preparations for the Summit, and providing general Cabinet guidance on issues. These groups will also prepare the briefing materials and coordinate U.S. participation in other international meetings where Summit issues will be discussed. The SIG-IEP will coordinate with the Office of Cabinet Affairs and the Domestic Cabinet Councils to discuss Summit issues, as appropriate, in these fora as well. (c)

In carrying out their direct responsibilities for the Summit, the President's Personal Representative and the Summit Coordinator for Administration will report to a Summit White House Group (SWHG) chaired by William Clark, the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs, and Michael Deaver, the Deputy Chief of Staff. The Summit White House Group will have primary responsibility for all matters relating to the Summit, and will provide recommendations to me for decisions. These recommendations will be reviewed, as necessary, by the National Security Council expanded to include the agencies represented on the SIG-IEP. (C)

Thanks so much for the striking moments of the williamsburg Summit.

But it is I, and people all over the world, who thank you. You carried a difficult and in many respects momentous meeting to an outstanding conclusion. You carried it a personal tour de force (if I may use a French expression).

You have my thanks and admiration and respect

Yours
