PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: ARRIVAL CEREMONY
PRIME MINISTER CARLSSON OF SWEDEN
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1987

It is a pleasure to welcome Prime Minister Carlsson and Mrs. Carlsson to the United States. I welcome you, Mr. Prime Minister, with great warmth and respect, as the representative of a country with whom Americans share many fundamental values: We are both deeply committed to the system of democracy; we are both committed to the protection of the fundamental rights of the individual; and we are both committed to pursuing a world that is prosperous, and at peace.

Our shared values reflect historical bonds and the fact that Swedes and Americans have mingled for centuries. Next year will mark the three-hundredth anniversary of the founding by your countrymen, Mr. Prime Minister, of a small colony named New Sweden near what is now Wilmington, Delaware. Those brave settlers helped turn a wilderness into a great Nation. Even more, they brought with them the hardy virtues and pioneer spirit that became so much a part of our national character.

The Swedish pioneers of Wilmington, Delaware, were followed by over a million Swedes who came here between the 1840's and 1920's. Today some five million Americans proudly claim Swedish origins. History suggests our countries have always been close, politically and also in spirit. When this was still a very new Nation, in 1783, a Treaty of Commerce and Friendship was signed with Sweden. It was among the very first treaties of the United States of America. Over the years since, our governments have always remained on amicable and cooperative terms, and our peoples have developed and maintained commercial and personal relationships that have strengthened both our Nations.

All this reflects a commonality of spirit and a shared sense of decency of which we can take great pride. Americans will never forget that by a special act of Congress, our country has officially adopted a remarkable Swede, a hero of moral and humane people the world over. I refer to Raoul Wallenberg, the Swedish diplomat who in the second World War saved thousands from the Nazi terror. That Wallenberg is now a citizen of both our countries is a bond between us and should be an inspiration to our peoples. Let us join in insisting that if there is a new openness in the Soviet Union, that the Soviet leadership give the world an accounting of this moral giant, Raoul Wallenberg.

Today our friendship is especially vigorous. Many thousands of our countrymen visit back and forth each year, conducting business, pursuing the arts, studying -- and often competing successfully in sports, as Mr. Borg can testify. Our governments maintain a good and sturdy dialogue on a range of mutual interests. The late Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige visited Sweden in May, where he announced that the United States is eliminating some export license requirements for high technology goods bound for Sweden. This summer, Swedish Trade Minister Gradin came to Washington for a positive round of discussions on global and bilateral trade issues. And in June, my wife Nancy visited Stockholm, where for three days she exchanged views with those who plan and run Sweden's enlightened programs to combat drugs.

Your visit now, Mr. Prime Minister, renews our political, bilateral discussions at the highest level. Dialogue between our governments has improved and deepened in recent years, and we are determined to ensure that it continues to improve. I look forward to discussing with you, Mr. Prime Minister, the major issues of the day and examining how, as modern industrialized democracies, we can meet the challenges we will face in the future. Sweden and the United States face similar obstacles, though in ways we have chosen different paths. Yet, as friends, we value each other's views, and our talks today will be of great value.

I am particularly looking forward to our exchange of views on issues concerning world peace and nuclear arms reductions. The people of the United States continue to carry a heavy burden of defense spending in order to preserve peace and to maintain both our freedom, and the security of the entire community of free democratic nations. We have, in recent years, taken a decisive lead in seeking balanced and verifiable arms agreements with the Soviet Union, agreements that will reduce both the level of nuclear weapons and the threat of their use. Our strength, and our determined search for peace, go hand in hand. Much progress has been made as of late, and we remain optimistic.

As a neutral nation, Sweden is not a partner in our pursuit of a free and peaceful world. Nevertheless, we recognize and appreciate that Sweden provides amply for its own strong defense, and works vigorously for the cause of peace. We respect that, Mr. Prime Minister. The great Swedish leader and a renowned international statesman, Dag Hammarskjold once said, "Only he who keeps his eyes fixed on the far horizon will find his right road." Today, the people of the United States and Sweden have their eyes fixed on the horizon. We are not waiting for a better tomorrow. We are busy building a better tomorrow.

I look forward to our discussions, Mr. Prime Minister. We appreciate your visit and bid you and your wife welcome. Your visit here is most welcome.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: ARRIVAL CEREMONY
PRIME MINISTER CARLSSON OF SWEDEN
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1987

It is a pleasure to welcome Prime Minister Carlsson and Mrs. Carlsson to the United States. I welcome you, Mr. Prime Minister, with great warmth and respect, as the representative of a country with whom Americans share many fundamental values: We are both deeply committed to the system of democracy; we are both committed to the protection of the fundamental rights of the individual; and we are both committed to pursuing a world that is prosperous, and at peace.

Our shared values reflect historical bonds and the fact that Swedes and Americans have mingled for centuries. Next year will mark the three-hundredth anniversary of the founding by your countrymen, Mr. Prime Minister, of a small colony named New Sweden near what is now Wilmington, Delaware. Those brave settlers helped turn a wilderness into a great Nation. Even more, they brought with them the hardy virtues and pioneer spirit that became so much a part of our national character.

The Swedish pioneers of Wilmington, Delaware, were followed by over a million Swedes who came here between the 1840's and 1920's. Today some five million Americans proudly claim Swedish origins. History suggests our countries have always been close, politically and also in spirit. When this was still a very new Nation, in 1783, a Treaty of Commerce and Friendship was signed with Sweden. It was among the very first treaties of the United States of America. Over the years since, our governments have always remained on amicable and cooperative terms, and our peoples have developed and maintained commercial and personal relationships that have strengthened both our Nations.

All this reflects a commonality of spirit and a shared sense of decency of which we can take great pride. Americans will never forget that by a special act of Congress, our country has officially adopted a remarkable Swede, a hero of moral and humane people the world over. I refer to Raoul Wallenberg, the Swedish diplomat who in the second World War saved thousands from the Nazi terror. That Wallenberg is now a citizen of both our countries is a bond between us and should be an inspiration to our peoples. Let us join in insisting that if there is a new openness in the Soviet Union, that the Soviet leadership give the world an accounting of this moral giant, Raoul Wallenberg.

Today our friendship is especially vigorous. Many thousands of our countrymen visit back and forth each year, conducting business, pursuing the arts, studying -- and often competing successfully in sports, as Mr. Borg can testify. Our governments maintain a good and sturdy dialogue on a range of mutual interests. The late Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige visited Sweden in May, where he announced that the United States is eliminating some export license requirements for high technology goods bound for Sweden. This summer, Swedish Trade Minister Gradin came to Washington for a positive round of discussions on global and bilateral trade issues. And in June, my wife Nancy visited Stockholm, where for three days she exchanged views with those who plan and run Sweden's enlightened programs to combat drugs.

Your visit now, Mr. Prime Minister, renews our political, bilateral discussions at the highest level. Dialogue between our governments has improved and deepened in recent years, and we are determined to ensure that it continues to improve. I look forward to discussing with you, Mr. Prime Minister, the major issues of the day and examining how, as modern industrialized democracies, we can meet the challenges we will face in the future. Sweden and the United States face similar obstacles, though in ways we have chosen different paths. Yet, as friends, we value each other's views, and our talks today will be of great value.

I am particularly looking forward to our exchange of views on issues concerning world peace and nuclear arms reductions. The people of the United States continue to carry a heavy burden of defense spending in order to preserve peace and to maintain both our freedom, and the security of the entire community of free democratic nations. We have, in recent years, taken a decisive lead in seeking balanced and verifiable arms agreements with the Soviet Union, agreements that will reduce both the level of nuclear weapons and the threat of their use. Our strength, and our determined search for peace, go hand in hand. Much progress has been made as of late, and we remain optimistic.

As a neutral nation, Sweden is not a partner in our pursuit of a free and peaceful world. Nevertheless, we recognize and appreciate that Sweden provides amply for its own strong defense, and works vigorously for the cause of peace. We respect that, Mr. Prime Minister. The great Swedish leader and a renowned international statesman, Dag Hammarskjold once said, "Only he who keeps his eyes fixed on the far horizon will find his right road." Today, the people of the United States and Sweden have their eyes fixed on the horizon. We are not waiting for a better tomorrow. We are busy building a better tomorrow.

I look forward to our discussions, Mr. Prime Minister. We appreciate your visit and bid you and your wife welcome. Your visit here is most welcome.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PRIME MINISTER CARLSSON OF SWEDEN
STATE DINNER TOAST
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1987

Prime Minister Carlsson, Mrs. Carlsson, ladies and gentlemen, welcome to the White House. Nancy told me much about the warmth and goodwill so evident in Sweden during her June visit. We both have looked forward to this opportunity to express our appreciation, and to return the hospitality so graciously extended to her.

I welcome you, Mr. Prime Minister, as long overdue friends. Sweden, while quite some distance in miles, has never seemed very far away to me. As a boy in Southern Illinois, I had neighbors with names like Hanson and Lund, and it was not a very long walk to Steinberg's Hardware Store.

This morning, in the course of our discussions, I realized anew what I have long known: that Sweden and America share the same basic values, and the same hopes for a more peaceful and prosperous world. We often pursue our similar goals through different means, but our democratic traditions have bred in us both an appreciation for diversity, and an understanding that there is often more than one way to achieve a goal. (Here, is there a Swedish saying like more than one way to skin a cat, or other? This would be an appropriate place to lay out a quote or refer to folk wisdom.)

Today, we welcome our guests with special warmth because this is not merely the visit of a Prime Minister, on an official trip, but also somewhat of a sentimental journey. In 1960,

Mr. Prime Minister, early in your married life, you went to Northwestern University in Illinois, where you attended graduate school, and Mrs. Carlsson worked in the University library -- a hard-working young couple building a future together. I am happy to note that the still young Carlssons next month will celebrate their thirtieth wedding anniversary. Please accept the warm congratulations of both Nancy and myself. I understand you will be visiting Northwestern again this Saturday, and I wish you a most pleasurable return to this special place.

Mr. Prime Minister, our countries have been friends as long as the United States has been a country. Today we have had the opportunity to reaffirm the bonds of affection between our peoples and to talk of the issues we, as the leaders of two free Nations, face in the world. Prime Minister and Mrs. Carlsson, I raise my glass to you in friendship, and with a hearty skol.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: ENTERTAINMENT THANK YOU TO MARILYN HORNE

Marilyn, your American operatic debut had critics assured that the future of American opera was "indeed bright." In the years since, you've thrilled audiences both here and abroad, bringing you a truly international following. A major force in the revitalization of the works of Handel and Rossini, you were the first artist to bring Handel to the Met. You are one of the few vocalists in the world who can sell out a house for recital appearances -- I can certainly see why.

Marilyn Horne, Martin Katz, thank you for being with us tonight. And congratulations on twenty-one seasons together.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PRIME MINISTER CARLSSON OF SWEDEN
STATE DINNER TOAST
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1987

Received SS
1987 AUG 34 PM 7:25

Prime Minister Carlsson, Mrs. Carlsson, ladies and gentlemen, welcome to the White House. Nancy told me much about the warmth and goodwill so evident in Sweden during her June visit. We both have looked forward to this opportunity to express our appreciation, and to return the hospitality so graciously extended to her.

I welcome you, Mr. Prime Minister, as long overdue friends. Sweden, while quite some distance in miles, has never seemed very far away to me. As a boy in Southern Illinois, I had neighbors with names like Hanson and Lund, and it was not a very long walk to Steinberg's Hardware Store.

This morning, in the course of our discussions, I realized anew what I have long known: that Sweden and America share the same basic values, and the same hopes for a more peaceful and prosperous world. We often pursue our similar goals through different means, but our democratic traditions have bred in us both an appreciation for diversity, and an understanding that there is often more than one way to achieve a goal. (Here, is there a Swedish saying like more than one way to skin a cat, or other? This would be an appropriate place to lay out a quote or refer to folk wisdom.)

Today, we welcome our guests with special warmth because this is not merely the visit of a Prime Minister, on an official trip, but also somewhat of a sentimental journey. In 1960,

Mr. Prime Minister, early in your married life, you went to Northwestern University in Illinois, where you attended graduate school, and Mrs. Carlsson worked in the University library -- a hard-working young couple building a future together. I am happy to note that the still young Carlssons next month will celebrate their thirtieth wedding anniversary. Please accept the warm congratulations of both Nancy and myself. I understand you will be visiting Northwestern again this Saturday, and I wish you a most pleasurable return to this special place.

Mr. Prime Minister, our countries have been friends as long as the United States has been a country. Today we have had the opportunity to reaffirm the bonds of affection between our peoples and to talk of the issues we, as the leaders of two free Nations, face in the world. Prime Minister and Mrs. Carlsson, I raise my glass to you in friendship, and with a hearty skol.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PRIME MINISTER CARLSSON OF SWEDEN
STATE DINNER TOAST
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1987 1007 / 100 34 P 7:25

Prime Minister Carlsson, Mrs. Carlsson, ladies and gentlemen, welcome to the White House. Nancy told me much about the warmth and goodwill so evident in Sweden during her June visit. We both have looked forward to this opportunity to express our appreciation, and to return the hospitality so graciously extended to her.

I welcome you, Mr. Prime Minister, as long overdue friends. Sweden, while quite some distance in miles, has never seemed very far away to me. As a boy in Southern Illinois, I had neighbors with names like Hanson and Lund, and it was not a very long walk to Steinberg's Hardware Store.

This morning, in the course of our discussions, I realized anew what I have long known: that Sweden and America share the same basic values, and the same hopes for a more peaceful and prosperous world. We often pursue our similar goals through different means, but our democratic traditions have bred in us both an appreciation for diversity, and an understanding that there is often more than one way to achieve a goal. (Here, is there a Swedish saying like more than one way to skin a cat, or other? This would be an appropriate place to lay out a quote or refer to folk wisdom.)

Today, we welcome our guests with special warmth because this is not merely the visit of a Prime Minister, on an official trip, but also somewhat of a sentimental journey. In 1960,

Mr. Prime Minister, early in your married life, you went to Northwestern University in Illinois, where you attended graduate school, and Mrs. Carlsson worked in the University library -- a hard-working young couple building a future together. I am happy to note that the still young Carlssons next month will celebrate their thirtieth wedding anniversary. Please accept the warm congratulations of both Nancy and myself. I understand you will be visiting Northwestern again this Saturday, and I wish you a most pleasurable return to this special place.

Mr. Prime Minister, our countries have been friends as long as the United States has been a country. Today we have had the opportunity to reaffirm the bonds of affection between our peoples and to talk of the issues we, as the leaders of two free Nations, face in the world. Prime Minister and Mrs. Carlsson, I raise my glass to you in friendship, and with a hearty skol.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PRIME MINISTER CARLSSON OF SWEDEN
STATE DINNER TOAST
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1987

Prime Minister Carlsson, Mrs. Carlsson, ladies and gentlemen, welcome to the White House. Nancy told me much about the warmth and goodwill so evident in Sweden during her June visit. We both have looked forward to this opportunity to express our appreciation, and to return the hospitality so graciously extended to her.

I welcome you, Mr. Prime Minister, as long overdue friends. Sweden, while quite some distance in miles, has never seemed very far away to me. As a boy in Northern Illinois, I had neighbors with names like Hanson and Lund.

This morning, in the course of our discussions, I realized anew what I have long known: that Sweden and America share the same basic values, and the same hopes for a more peaceful and prosperous world. We often pursue our similar goals through different means, but our democratic traditions have bred in us both an appreciation for diversity, and an understanding that there is often more than one way to achieve a goal.

Today, we welcome our guests with special warmth because this is not merely the visit of a Prime Minister, on an official trip, but also somewhat of a sentimental journey. In 1960, Mr. Prime Minister, early in your married life, you went to Northwestern University in Illinois, where you attended graduate school, and Mrs. Carlsson worked in the University library -- a hard-working young couple building a future together. I am happy to note that the still young Carlssons next month will celebrate their thirtieth wedding anniversary. Please accept the warm congratulations of both Nancy and myself. I understand you will be visiting Northwestern again this Saturday, and I wish you a most pleasurable return to this special place.

Mr. Prime Minister, our countries have been friends as long as the United States has been a country. Today we have had the opportunity to reaffirm the bonds of affection between our peoples and to talk of the issues we, as the leaders of two free Nations, face in the world. Prime Minister and Mrs. Carlsson, I raise my glass to you in friendship, and with a hearty skol.
