Biography

Linton Forrestall Brooks is an American government official who served in the Reagan and George H.W. Bush Administrations and as the Under Secretary for Energy for Nuclear Security from 2002 to 2007.

Born in Boston on August 15, 1938, Brooks graduated with a B.S. in physics from Duke University (1959), and an M.A. in government and politics from the University of Maryland (1972) and is a distinguished graduate of the Naval War College (1979).

Brooks served as an officer in the United States Navy, commanding the nuclear-powered attack submarine Whale and retiring after a 30+-year career as a Captain.

Brooks then joined the Reagan White House National Security Council staff as part of the Defense Programs and Arms Control Directorates. He remained with the NSC until the end of the Reagan Administration.

Joining the State Department, Brooks was the Deputy Head of the U.S. Delegation to the Nuclear and Space Talks (NST), 1989-1990. In 1990 he was awarded the rank of ambassador and in 1991 he became the Head of the Delegation and Chief Strategic Arms Reductions (START) Negotiator. In this capacity, he was responsible for final preparation of the START I Treaty, signed by Presidents Bush and Russian President Mikhail Gorbachev in Moscow on July 31, 1991.

In July 1992, Brooks was appointed to be an Assistant Director of the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency at the Bureau of Strategic and Nuclear Affairs. In this capacity he assisted with the final preparation of the January 3, 1993 START II Treaty.

Leaving government service at the end of the George H.W. Bush administration, Brooks served the remainder of the decade as a Vice President and Assistant to the President for Policy Analysis at the Center for Naval Analyses.

On July 19, 2001, President George W. Bush nominated Brooks to the new position of Deputy Administrator for Defense Nuclear Nonproliferation, National Nuclear Security Administration, (NNSA) a newly created part of the Department of Energy. Brooks was named as acting administrator in July 2002 by President Bush when the first NNSA administrator, John Gordon, took an assignment at the National Security Council. Bush nominated Brooks to be administrator and Under Secretary of the Department of Energy for Nuclear Security on February 4, 2003, and he was confirmed by the Senate on May 1, 2003. The NNSA is responsible for the United States nuclear weapons infrastructure.

Brook's 2003-2007 tenure at NNSA was a tumultuous one, characterized by efforts to accelerate weapons modernization programs while sidelining nonproliferation advocates, a controversial decision to privatize nuclear weapons laboratories, and concerns over security lapses. Brooks was ultimately asked to resign by Energy Secretary Samuel Bodman in January 2007 after failing to report a series of major security breaches at the nuclear weapons labs.

Since then, Linton Brooks has worked as an independent consultant on national security issues. He is currently a non-resident senior adviser at the Center for Strategic and International Studies for the Project on Nuclear Issues. He is a distinguished research fellow at the National Defense University, and an adviser to four of the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) national laboratories. Brooks is also a member of the U.S. State Department's International Security Advisory Board (ISAB).

Brooks is married with two children and lives in Virginia.
