WPC HAS SEEN

Dear Mr. Clark:

Having accompanied Sadanori Yamanaka, the former Minister of International Trade & Industry, to the recent Summit Conference in Williamsburg, I was greatly appreciative of the hospitality you extended to former Minister Yamanaka, despite your busy schedule.

As Minister Yamanaka recently resigned from his post for reasons of health, I am writing this letter of thanks on his behalf. It was so sudden that it took all of us by complete surprise. Mr. Sousuke Uno would undoubtedly prove to be an able successor.

Former Minister Yamanaka was extremely touched by and grateful for the barbecue party you held for him. Both Prime Minister Nakasone and former Minister Yamanaka were, I am told, convinced of the great success of the Williamsburg Summit, which saw a candid exchange of opinions among the leaders of the participating nations under the leadership of President Reagan.

Speaking with you over the savory barbecue, the former Minister realized the extraordinary efforts you have made and became even more firmly convinced of the importance of mutual understandings between the U.S. and Japan.

It is our intention at MITI, now under the leadership of newly-appointed Minister Sosuke Uno, to continue to spare no efforts towards the further development of the economic relationship between the U.S. and JAPAN,

Wishing you good health and further prosperity, and thanking you again, on behalf of former Minister Yamanaka.

Sincerely yours,

All the stops pulled out for posh state banquet

Associated Press May 31, 1983

Williamsburg, Va. The main course was quail and the key entertainment was opera Monday at a dinner ending the three-day summit of leaders of the major industrial nations.

First Lady Nancy Reagan arrived by helicopter in Williamsburg yesterday afternoon, a few hours before the official dinner at the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Center.

JUN 16 1983

RUDY HELP US PUT MINNESOTA ON THE WORLD MAP !

Above is the Gourmet Menu served to the Heads of six foreign countries on the last day of the summit meeting.

California goat cheese was featured as well as Florida citrus sherbet and three California wines.

Why wasn't the quail stuffing labeled MINNESOTA Wild Rice?

According to the latest DNR Report, Minnesota grows more wild rice than any other state. Minnesota has more wild rice stands than any other state, amounting to 15,000 to 30,000 acres. During a good rice year, 150 large harvestable stands grow in Minnesota.

A truly gourmet menu should include MINNESOTA WILD RICE. Priced at $5.00 a pound in Minnesota, it sells on East and West coasts for $10.00 to $15.00 a pound. A Real Delicacy.

The very depressed state of Minnesota needs National and International recognition. What better way to promote our state's interests than to feature Wild Rice on future important gourmet menus, served in delectable ways?

The Wild Rice Research and Promotion Council is developing recipes for the uses of the nutlike wild grain. Have the White House Chef write to Univ. News Service, S-68 Morrill Hall, 100 Church St. S.E., Mpls. Mn. 55455. Phone (612) 373-7517.

Dear Jude:

Thanks for sending me one of your "Big Picture Specials." I'm sorry this reply has been delayed, but you can be sure that the views in your letter have received close attention.

The latest economic news is a striking confirmation of the success of supply-side economics. I feel in my bones that our present robust recovery will stay strong for a good while to come.

We do intend to provide international leadership in economic affairs, as you suggest, and I think the Summit was a success for America in that respect. All the major industrialized nations are showing a new consciousness of the need for unity, which I think will pay big dividends down the road.

Again, thanks for writing and warmest regards,

Sincerely,

RONALD REAGAN A

MEMORANDUM FOR DUNCAN CLARK

FROM: Martin Feldstein MF
SUBJECT: Response to Jude Wanniski

I'm not sure how to deal with the Wanniski letter since this is a new type of issue for me. Realistically, the question is whether the President should give a boost to Wanniski and his not-very-good consulting firm. I assume the President's letter will be widely quoted as an endorsement. It should also be borne in mind that Wanniski made some of the wildest claims for the original program, claims that have proven false and rather embarrassing.

I would suggest though that you either:

- (1) send the letter to CEA for a reply. (We'd be polite and brief.) or
- (2) send a shorter version of the proposed letter, deleting the sentence, "As one of the prime intellectual founders of supply-side economics, you have every right to feel vindicated and, in fact, to take a bow."

The President
The White House
Washington, D. C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

As the Williamsburg Economic Summit meeting approaches, the international press corps seems to be cooking up a showdown between the U.S. and France, between you and M. Mitterrand. No doubt M. Mitterrand's aides and supporters in France, as well as many of your aides, including Cabinet secretaries, are helping to stir this pot. But there's no need for conflict and there is every opportunity for you to display leadership in rising above it.

What's going on? Herewith, a Wanniski Big Picture Special:

Your administration has been dominated by monetary issues and so has the politics in the rest of the world. Monetary turbulence caused problems for Presidents Nixon, Ford and Carter, but the great swings in the value of the U.S. dollar have swamped all other considerations these past three years.

When the dollar is linked to gold, its value cannot change from one period to the next in a way that gives windfall losses or gains to either debtors or creditors. That is, the dollar price of gold can't rise (inflation), benefitting debtors at the expense of creditors. The dollar price of gold can't fall either, deflation benefitting creditors at the expense of debtors. The gold standard is equivalent to the golden rule, by which debtors do unto creditors as they would have creditors do unto them, and vice versa.

Without a golden rule of this kind vis-a-vis money, the issue is politicized. The voters are asked to decide whether they want debtors to benefit at the expense of creditors (inflation) or vice versa (deflation). Democrats and political parties of the left around the world generally represent debtors; Republicans and political parties of the right generally represent creditors.

When we left gold in 1971, it was John Connally, a Democrat, who persuaded Nixon to devalue the dollar, to inflate. This benefit to debtors caused creditors to put up interest rates to defend themselves against further monetary manipulations.

The Ford administration was characterized by deflation, with William Simon, Greenspan and Burns acting on behalf of the creditor class at the expense of debtors (many of whom, in not being able to pay, went bankrupt, bringing recession and heightened unemployment).

The voters rejected further deflation by turning to Carter and the Democrats, who again "talked down the dollar," devaluing it and bringing on another burst of inflation and soaring interest rates. The price of gold soared in 1980, signaling even greater inflation. The voters turned to you for relief.

In the monetary squeeze of 1981-82, the price of gold tumbled, dropping from $625 at your election to less than $300 last June. This severe dollar deflation deflated the entire world, the dollar being the invoice currency for 70% of world trade. Just as no country could escape the impact of our dollar inflations, none could escape the impact of our deflation. The OECD countries still have 35 million unemployed, perhaps half the result of the U.S. deflation of 1981-82.

This is the backdrop to Williamsburg. It also serves as the backdrop for your decision on Volcker.

Of the seven heads of state who will assemble at Williamsburg, Mitterrand, who came to power in the middle of 1981, is the most clearly aligned with the debtor interests worldwide. Thusfar, you are the most clearly aligned with creditor interests worldwide. Your respective aides and supporters are forcing conflict along these lines.

Mitterrand's position in calling for fixed exchange rates and a "new Bretton Woods" is a bit deceptive in that he, like American Democrats who are pushing a new Bretton Woods (Felix Rohatyn, etc.), wants first a devaluation of the dollar to a "more realistic" level. That is, we should first have another surge of inflation and then fix exchange rates so that the creditor class cannot deflate again. Mitterrand, like the American Democrats, also urges higher taxes in the U.S. to reduce U.S. claims on the capital markets. The U.S. can borrow from Frenchmen, but we can only tax Americans.

Your opportunity at Williamsburg is to reject the idea that you represent the creditor class and to suggest to Mitterrand that he doesn't represent the debtors of the world. You are both elected by all the people, debtors and creditors, and Williamsburg gives you a chance to elevate that idea. Furthermore, you have the opportunity to suggest to the world that you understand American monetary and fiscal policies have an impact on the rest of the world via interest rates and the exchange rates, and you reject beggar-thy-neighbor monetary and fiscal policies.

The monetary issue is central, though, and you can concede to Mitterrand that the floating dollar, which floats from inflations to deflations, has had damaging effects on the world economy, and the U.S. stands ready to take that into consideration in the future, but that the process of stabilization should not begin with one more round of inflation or one more round of austerity. Stabilization should begin right now.

In this connection, you can see the forces arrayed around the Volcker reappointment. Volcker, favoring fixed exchange rates and international market intervention to keep prices stable -- no inflation or deflation -- is the international choice for your Fed appointment. Greenspan, the contender, is the choice of the floaters, the monetarists, the Old Guard GOP creditor class forces. Greenspan favors a return to gold only after another grand surge of creditor-class deflation (Mitterrand's mirror image).

Henry Kissinger, I think, understands this in a way that George Shultz does not, because Shultz, who floated the dollar in 1973, can't accept the fact that he was one of the architects of the world's current economic malaise.

Kissinger says, and I agree with him, that we can't expect Williamsburg to produce technical reforms. All we can hope for is that a new philosophy emerges, a philosophy of U.S. international leadership in global economic affairs instead of the narrow, isolationist positions we've had since 1971.

These are my concerns. These are also my hopes. I believe Williamsburg can be a milestone in your Administration and can secure the economic growth that will secure you a second term, if you choose to seek re-election.

Sincerely, as ever,

Jude Wanniski

SUBJECT: Support for the Williamsburg Summit

USIA provided a variety of helpful efforts to support our success at the Williamsburg Summit. I wanted to use this opportunity to thank you and your staff for this outstanding contribution.

The annual survey of public opinion in Western Europe and Japan, conducted by Curt Gorder and his people, provided material that we were able to include directly in the materials that went to the President. In addition, Rob McClellan and others in USIA performed superbly in support of Ambassador Rentschler and the public relations side of the Summit effort.

I know you will pass on my appreciation for this fine effort.

SUBJECT: Summit Follow-Up Acknowledgements

USIA and CIA provided useful backup assistance for the Williamsburg Summit. Each year, USIA does a survey of public opinion in Europe and Japan. This year, they did an excellent two page summary which we were able to include in the briefing materials going directly to the President. CIA provided very helpful, pre-Summit and on-site intelligence support.

The particular offices that run these activities depend on a golden handshake every now and then to maintain their morale and performance. I have attached short messages from you to Wick and Casey acknowledging these activities. I recommend that you sign them.

Dear Jim:

I thank you for your important contribution to the success of the Williamsburg Summit. Your role in taking command of our Public Diplomacy effort was crucial to ensuring effective presentation of U.S. objectives in advance of the Summit and timely public presentations following the Summit. The message of successes achieved at Williamsburg was heard both domestically and abroad, largely through your efforts.

As you know, the Summit underscored dramatic accomplishments achieved among western countries in economic and security areas. Cooperative efforts to advance worldwide economic recovery, to stem the tide of inflation, to manage international debt, and to stimulate new investment in research and technology marked the beginning of a new era for all involved in the Summit. You have made a major contribution to an endeavor which will bear fruit in decades to come.

Dear Bill:

I commend you for outstanding effort which contributed to the tremendous success of the Williamsburg Summit. Your work at the April COCOM meeting was crucial to ensuring that the Summit be meaningful.

As you know, the Summit underscored dramatic accomplishments achieved among western countries in economic and security areas. Cooperative efforts to advance worldwide economic recovery, to stem the tide of inflation, to manage international debt, and to stimulate new investment in research and technology marked the beginning of a new era for all involved in the Summit. You have made a major contribution to an endeavor which will bear fruit in decades to come.

Sincerely,

Ronald Reagan

The Honorable William X Schneider, Jr.
Under Secretary of State for Security
Assistance, Science and Technology
