PRESIDENTIAL STATEMENT ON THE 25TH ANNIVERSARY
OF THE
SIGNING OF THE TREATIES OF ROME

This year, 1982, marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the signing of the Treaties of Rome. These documents established the European Community, then the second largest trading entity in the world and an emerging influence in international relations.

In his State of the Union message in 1957, President Eisenhower welcomed the efforts of "our European friends to develop an integrated community." Every Administration since then has supported that goal. We believed then, and believe now, that a united Europe would achieve economic progress, would play a more effective role in world affairs, and would be better able to join the United States in preserving world peace and security. Europe has more than redeemed our faith in its purposes. We should not underestimate the progress made in the past quarter century. From a gleam in the eyes of Jean Monnet and others, the Community has become an irreversible and dynamic reality.

Let me reaffirm clearly the support of this Administration for European unity. I consider a strong and united Europe not as a rival, but as a partner. As we enter the second quarter century of relations between the European Community and the United States, we face economic and political challenges as difficult as those which confronted our predecessors in 1957.

However, the relationship between Western Europe and the United States has changed fundamentally. In those days the United States was the dominant partner, and Europe had a more dependent role. Now the economic weight of the two sides is more equal. The gross domestic product of the European Community is comparable to that of the United States. The United States looks to Europe today for cooperation in the framework of full partnership commensurate with its economic and political importance.

Both Europe and the United States recognize that partnership involves responsibilities. These responsibilities apply to the economic area in particular where we both have the responsibility to avoid actions which have an adverse impact on our trading partners and to preserve our free trading system. They also extend to our common security interests, where we have the responsibility to cooperate on support for like-minded countries seeking closer Western ties, and to resist the efforts of those who do not share our values to extend their power and influence.

I have every confidence that in the coming quarter century, we will build an even more productive relationship between the European Community and the United States. As we commemorate the achievements of men like Jean Monnet, we must follow his example and those of the other giants of that generation, looking ahead with vision, courage and optimism.

SIGNING OF THE TREATY OF ROME

This year, 1982, marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Rome. This document established the European Community, the second largest trading entity in the world, and an emerging world political body.

In his State of the Union message in 1957, President Eisenhower welcomed the efforts of "our European friends to develop an integrated community." Every Administration since then has supported that goal. We believed then, and believe now, that a United Europe would achieve economic progress, would play a more effective role in world affairs, and would be better able to join the United States in preserving world peace and security. Europe has more than redeemed our faith in its purposes. We should not underestimate the progress made in the past quarter century. Let me reaffirm clearly the support of this Administration for European unity. I consider a strong and united Europe not as a rival, but as a partner. As we enter the second quarter century of relations between the European Community and the United States, we face economic and political challenges as difficult as those which confronted our predecessors in 1957. However the relationship between Western Europe and the United States has changed fundamentally. In those days the United States was the dominant partner, and Europe the junior, dependent partner. Now the economic weight of the two sides is more equal. The gross domestic product of the European Community is comparable to that of the United States. The United States looks to Europe today for partnership and community, as much as it looked to us in the past.

The European Community has both the rights and the responsibilities of equal partnership with the United States. These responsibilities apply to the economic area in particular where we both have the responsibility to harmonize our domestic economic policies so as not to make each other's economic difficulties worse, and where we both must work to remove artificial barriers which inhibit trade. They also extend to the national security area, however, where we both have the responsibility to cooperate in support for countries attempting to join the Western world, and to resist the efforts of those who do not share our values to extend their power and influence. The European Community will need to provide leadership in the years ahead, not only for its members but for its Atlantic partners as well.

I have every confidence that in the coming quarter century, we will build an even more productive relationship between the European Community and the United States. As we commemorate the achievements of men like Jean Monnet, we must follow his example and those of the other giants of that generation, looking ahead with vision, courage and optimism.

THE WHITE HOUSE

SUBJECT: Pertini Visit: 25th Anniversary of the Treaties of Rome

The Pertini Visit, March 25, falls on the 25th anniversary of the signing of the Treaties of Rome, which established the European Community (EC). It would be appropriate to mark this event during the visit, and we have included comments on the anniversary in the draft toast (submitted separately) for the President's use at the state dinner.

We had previously suggested that the President host a reception for EC Ambassadors, March 24, to honor the anniversary. Since we have now learned this would not be possible, we suggest that the Head of the EC Delegation, Ambassador de Kergorlay, and Belgian Ambassador Schoumaker (EC Presidency) be invited to the Pertini dinner. The presence of EC representatives would be a further indication of the US commitment to European unity before the President's upcoming trip to Europe.

The Italians are aware of the coincidence of the visit and the EC anniversary. We believe they will welcome a reference to the event in the President's toast and the presence of EC representatives at the dinner.

FROM: DENNIS BLAIR DB / JAMES M. RENTSCHLER

SUBJECT: Commemoration of the 25th Anniversary of the Treaty of Rome

State and USICA have recommended that the President meet for 30 minutes with the ambassadors of the 10 countries of the European Community in honor of the 25th Anniversary of the Treaty of Rome. It was the Treaty of Rome which started the European Community, also known as the Common Market.

We do not think much of the idea. For one thing, the Europeans themselves are not making a big deal of the 25th Anniversary; for another, we have some contentious issues these days with the EC-10, and a champagne celebration might ring hollow. We will ensure, however, that the Treaty of Rome is mentioned in connection with the visit of Italian President Pertini, which by chance will occur on the anniversary date. In addition, we will process letters for the President's signature to EC Commission President Thorn and EC Council President Martens.

If you concur, then Mike Wheeler will sign the memo at Tab I informing State that the President will not be receiving the EC-10 ambassadors.

DRAFT PRESIDENTIAL STATEMENT

We meet here to celebrate the signing of the Treaty of Rome twenty-five years ago. This year, 1982, also marks another notable anniversary; the Marshall Plan is thirty-five years old. These events reflect two historic developments in this century: the decision of the United States and Europe to build a vigorous and enduring relationship to ensure peace and prosperity, and the decision of Europeans to overcome the division of the past to build unity in the future.

Thus, the ideas of George Marshall and Jean Monnet took root during our time and have become intertwined. Today, we cannot speak or act, without taking the European Community into account. Indeed, the development of US-European relations since World War II proves that we have grasped the essence of John Donne's observation: "no man is an island." Nor is any nation a land alone.

In his State of the Union message in 1957, President Eisenhower welcomed the efforts of "our European friends to develop an integrated community." Every Administration since then has supported that goal. We believed then, and believe now, that a united Europe would achieve economic progress, would play a more effective role in world affairs and would be better able to join us in preserving world peace and security.

Let me reaffirm clearly the support of this Administration for European unity. I have given concrete meaning to this support by meeting last July with European Commission President Thorn. I look forward to seeing him again at the Versailles Summit. We have also welcomed to Washington Dutch Prime Minister van Agt and, this last month, Belgian Prime Minister Martens in their capacity as Community President. Our consultations have helped us to understand better European interests and concerns on economic and political issues.

As European unification has grown from concept to reality, some have expressed doubts about European policies that do not accord fully with our own. Yet, it is only natural that sovereign democratic states do not always see eye to eye. The two largest trading entities in the world will compete. But, such difficulties are like ripples on a lake. Underneath run strong currents that pull us on the same course. There are principles and there are values that cannot be shaken. I, therefore, consider a strong and united Europe, not as a rival, but a partner.

We are now beginning the second quarter-century of relations between the European Community and the United States. The road ahead will not be easy. We face a depressed economic situation which places pressure on trading and financial relations. There is increasing Soviet aggressiveness in Poland, Afghanistan, Central America and Africa.

Nevertheless, we are engaged in difficult nuclear arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union. We are concerned about securing adequate energy supplies. The United States has launched its Caribbean Basin initiative and is willing -- as illustrated at Cancun -- to consider seriously the needs of the Third World. And, here in the United States, we are determined to proceed with a dynamic program for economic growth.

We need in the coming months -- particularly at the Versailles and NATO Summits -- to renew our resolve to address these issues. We need also to look beyond specific issues, to consider how we can improve the transatlantic dialogue. We must search for new means of enhancing US-European cooperation. I can assure you that this Administration is dedicated to that end.

I believe that we will, together, build an even more productive relationship between the European Community and the United States. Thus, as we celebrate the history made by Monnet, we must, like him and the other giants of that generation, look ahead -- with vision, with courage, and with optimism.

DRAFT MESSAGE TO EC COMMISSION PRESIDENT THORN

Dear Mr. President:

To you and your colleagues on the Commission I extend my warm congratulations on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Treaties of Rome. The European Community has come to play a major and constructive role in world affairs.

We value greatly the relationship between the Community and the United States. It constitutes a central consideration in the development of our domestic and foreign policy.

We look forward to a continued close consultative relationship with you and the Commission as the European Community enters its second quarter-century. I look forward particularly to seeing you again at the Versailles Summit.

Sincerely

Ronald Reagan

His Excellency
Gaston Thorn,
President of the Commission of the European Communities,
Brussels.

DRAFT MESSAGE TO PRIME MINISTER MARTENS

Dear Mr. Prime Minister:

On the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Treaties of Rome, I wish to convey to you and your colleagues on the European Council the sincere congratulations of the American people. Since the establishment of the European Community, great strides have been taken toward European unity. It is a concept long supported, and still supported, by the United States.

As our recent consultations illustrated, the dialogue between the United States and the Community is highly useful. This transatlantic exchange of views is an essential element in the formulation of US policy. We hope to continue and expand this constructive dialogue during the Belgian and succeeding Presidencies of the European Council.

Sincerely,

Ronald Reagan

His Excellency
Wilfried Martens,
President of the European Council,
Brussels.

We agree with USICA that a meeting of the President with the Ambassadors of the EC-10 countries and the Head of the EC Delegation, March 24, would be an appropriate way to mark the 25th anniversary of the European Community, and would reaffirm effectively the commitment of the US to European unity prior to the President's trip and the Versailles Summit.

A program suitable to the occasion would take thirty minutes. It could begin with the President greeting personally the assembled EC representatives. The President would then make a five to ten minute statement on the anniversary. This would be followed by a champagne toast and a chance for the President to chat with individual guests (e.g., the Head of the EC Delegation, Ambassador de Kergorlay, and Belgian Ambassador Schoumaker). Other invitees might include relevant Cabinet officers, USICA Director Wick, selected members of Congress with EC interests and former US Ambassadors to the European Community. In addition to Secretary Haig and Deputy Secretary Stoessel, State Department representatives should include Assistant Secretary Hormats and Acting Assistant Secretary Holmes.

USICA would coordinate with you concerning a taping of the President's remarks to be fed to European television.

We will provide separately a draft Presidential statement, together with draft letters for the President to send to EC Commission President Thorn and to Belgian Prime Minister Martens (EC President) on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the Treaty of Rome.

FROM: HENRY NAU HN

SUBJECT: 25th Anniversary of the Treaty of Rome

Gil Robinson of USICA wrote you (Tab I) with the suggestion that the President recognize in some way the 25th Anniversary of the Treaty of Rome on March 25, 1982. The memo at Tab I from Mike Wheeler to Paul Bremer asks State to coordinate with USICA on developing an appropriate means for the President to commemorate this occasion.

RECOMMENDATION: That the memorandum at Tab II be sent to Bremer.

Dear Bill:

Enclosed is a copy of Charlie's cable to me about Presidential recognition of the 25th anniversary of the Treaty of Rome, which created the European Economic Community. I will call you about this after you have had a chance to look it over.

Best regards.

Sincerely,

Gilbert A. Robinson
Acting Director

MEMORANDUM FOR L. PAUL BREMER, III
Executive Secretary
Department of State

SUBJECT: Commemoration of the 25th Anniversary of the Treaty of Rome

Your memorandum of March 4 recommended that the President receive the ambassadors of the EC-10 countries for a short celebration of the 25th Anniversary of the Treaty of Rome.

The President will not be able to schedule a separate ceremony for the occasion, but will mention the Treaty of Rome in his public statements in connection with the visit of Italian President Pertini on March 24, and will send congratulatory letters to Presidents Thorn and Martens.
