BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Allen Wallis

Allen Wallis was born in November 1912 in Philadelphia and grew up in California, Oregon, and Minnesota. He graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1932, and from 1932 to 1936 he studied economics and statistics at the graduate level at the University of Minnesota, the University of Chicago, and Columbia University. He holds four doctor's degrees, all honorary.

Mr. Wallis has spent most of his career in universities, at Yale, Stanford, Columbia, Chicago, and Rochester. At Chicago he was Dean of the Graduate School of Business, and then for the two decades 1962-1982 he was Chancellor of the University of Rochester. He also has spent a year or so each at the National Bureau of Economic Research, the Ford Foundation, and the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences. He is an author of some 10 books and monographs and numerous articles on economics, statistics, public policy, and higher education.

Mr. Wallis was a research economist during the Roosevelt Administration and a Special Assistant to President Eisenhower from 1959 to 1961. During the Second World War he directed a project for the Office of Scientific Research and Development. He has served on 8 Presidential Commissions, on 4 of them as Chairman, under Presidents Nixon, Ford, and Carter. He has been a director of 9 corporations and of many educational, cultural, civic, and charitable institutions.

Mr. Wallis joined the State Department in July 1982 and, after confirmation by the Senate, was sworn in two months later as Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs. Among a variety of responsibilities, he serves as President Reagan's Personal Representative in preparing for the annual Economic Summit meetings; he leads the U.S. delegations in regular economic consultations with Argentina, India, Israel, Japan, Korea, Pakistan, and the OECD; he participates with Secretary Shultz in regular economic discussions with Canada, the European Economic Commission, and the Association of South East Asian Nations; and he represents the State Department in many interdepartmental meetings on economic affairs.

HERBERT STEIN

Herbert Stein is a Senior Fellow of the American Enterprise Institute in Washington and editor of its monthly publication, The AEI Economist. He served as a Member of the President's Council of Economic Advisors from January 20, 1969 to December 31, 1971 and as Chairman of the Council from January 1, 1972 to August 31, 1974, under Presidents Nixon and Ford. He is now a Member of President Reagan's Economic Policy Advisory Board, and the President's Blue-Ribbon Commission on Defense Management, and is co-chairman of the Committee to Fight Inflation.

He serves on the Board of Contributors of the Wall Street Journal and writes regularly for FORTUNE magazine. He is a Director of Reynolds Metal Company, and a Consultant to the Congressional Budget Office. He is also a consultant to the Department of State on the economy of Israel.

An up-dated edition of his book, Presidential Economics was published early in 1985. Among his numerous other publications are The Fiscal Revolution in America and Economic Planning and Improvement of the Public Policy. He is also the co-author with his son Benjamin of a novel, On the Brink, published in 1977 and a recent book, Money Power: How to Make Inflation Make You Rich.

In recent years Mr. Stein has lectured frequently to associations or corporations in a wide variety of industries including aluminum, steel, oil, aerospace, pharmaceutical manufacturing, commercial banking, investment banking, savings and loan associations and chemicals, as well as to many universities and research organizations. His lectures have usually dealt with the interaction of economic policy and economic developments.

Born in Detroit, Michigan, Stein received his Bachelor's Degree from Williams College, In Williamstown, Massachusetts, and his Ph.D. in economics from the University of Chicago.

Between 1938 and 1945 he worked as an economist in Washington for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Office of Price Administration, the War Production Board and the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion. During this period he won first prize in a national contest for a plan for the maintenance of high employment after the war. In 1944 and 1945 he served as an Ensign in the U.S. Navy.

After the war, in 1945, Stein became an economist for the Committee for Economic Development (CED), an organization of businessmen doing research on national economic policy. He remained with the CED for 22 years, most of that time as its Director of Research. in that capacity he studied, and \tilde{k} ote on, a wide variety of economic issues, including stabilization, fiscal and $m_{\tilde{k}}$ metary policies, price and wage controls, agriculture, labor organization, economic growth, international trade and international monetary arrangements.

In 1965-66, while on sabbatical from CED, Stein was a Fellow at the Center for the Advanced Study on Behavioral Sciences in Stanford, California.

In 1967 he joined the staff at the Brookings Institution, while remaining a consultant to the CED. He left Brookings to enter the government when Mr. Nixon became President. After leaving the government in 1974 Stein became the A. Willis Robertson Professor of Economics at the University of Virginia, a position from which he retired in 1984. In 1983-84 he was President of the Southern Economic Association.

Cuts Commission

Mr. Harold Orlans Project Director Office of Programs and Policy United States Commission on Civil Rights 1121 Vermont Avenue, N. W. Washington, D. C. 20425

Dear Mr. Orlans:

Frankly, I found your draft of a chapter on Adams offensive. Instead of objective scholarship, it is a diatribe against the good faith efforts of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, representing the victims of racial discrimination, to secure effective executive enforcement of a vital civil rights statute. Moreover, your chapter also attempts to indict the Federal Government for carrying out its constitutional duty of ensuring an end to segregation and discrimination by the recipients of Federal funds.

Today's public higher education institutions in the Southern and border states are the product of more than 100 years of legal segregation and second-class treatment of black institutions and their students and faculty. While your document is not entirely clear, you appear to proffer some startling propositions. You appear either (1) to deny that the vestiges of the dual system continue to exist in any of these higher education institutions; or (2) assuming vestiges of segregation continue, to argue that it is beyond the Title VI responsibility of the Office for Civil Rights to do anything about these vestiges; or (3) to assert that there is no remedy that can realistically be achieved by OCR. Unlike Commission-sponsored essays in the 1960s and 1970s, your essay is not the least bit constructive. There is a problem with which the Federal Government must grapple under Title VI and under the Constitution; yet you offer no useful suggestions on what means should be used to secure enforcement of Title VI and the Constitution.

In addition to these general observations, I find the tone of your document distasteful. As I describe below, it is frequently hostile and snide. Moreover, there are numerous errors of fact. Some examples follow.

At page 42 you ask, "[w]hatever led Gerry to betray HEW and OCR where he had been for eight years?" Yet what Gerry did under oath was simply to admit the truth, that is, that the state desegregation plans had been ineffective. Your suggestion that when a Government official tells the truth in a deposition, he is betraying his agency is a reflection on you, not on him.

A particularly unpleasant sentence appears on page 30 concerning OCR's reasonable request that states review the desegregation impact of any course of conduct before undertaking that course, where you add "as if all actions on the state's 73 campuses could stop while their possible effects were contemplated." Refer also to your snide references to the "central fiction" of Adams (p. 20), the "magical powers" of the desegregation plans (p. 31), the proposed desegregation process as a "phantasmagoria" (p. 39), the OCR desegregation Criteria's urging of innovative admissions policies as a "pious discourse" (p. 52), the characterization of Criteria language as "specious or deceitful" (p. 53) and the summary of the Criteria as "a height of legalism divorced from the realities of economics, history, and society" (p. 62).

Among the errors which further reflect upon your document are the following:

Contrary to your assertion (p. 35), the parent of an Adams plaintiff, Jake Ayers, did not "criticize" LDF when he sought to prevent the elimination of black colleges -- an objective entirely consistent with LDF's actions in Adams.

You erroneously assume (p. 28) that were black colleges to become two-thirds black and one-third white at the end of the desegregation process, that would necessarily constitute vestiges of segregation violative of Title VI.

You incorrectly indicate (p. 40) that Judge Pratt waited for the Gerry deposition before scheduling a hearing when in fact the January 1977 hearing was scheduled before the Gerry deposition was taken.

You erroneously assert (p. 43) that Judge Pratt took some material action on January 25, 1977.

The intervention by women, MALDEF and the handicapped (see p. 63) was unrelated to OCR's monitoring of statewide desegregation plans (in fact, the intervention related to OCR's preoccupation with race complaints).

The events which you describe at pages 63-65 pertain to the timeframes and procedures directed by the Court with respect to complaints and compliance reviews and have little application to the subject matter of your chapter, OCR's ongoing enforcement of statewide desegregation plans.

The suggestion that LDF lawyers or staff are "integrationists" who believe that black colleges "will inevitably remain inferior" and "are not worthy of surviving" (pp. 70, 80) is wholly inaccurate.

What saddens me most is that your chapter so directly reflects the 180 degree shift in the attitude of the Commission on Civil Rights: from cutting edge for civil rights in America to roadblock. During the 15-year history of Adams, LDF's efforts to induce strong effective OCR enforcement of Title VI has had the consistent support of the Commission. I cite you such examples as The Federal Civil Rights Enforcement Effort - 1974, Vol. III; The Federal Civil Rights Enforcement Effort - A Reassessment; and The Black/White Colleges: Dismantling the Dual System of Higher Education. As the Commission wrote in the last of these documents (in April 1981, pp. 43, 45):

> The Commission...believes that a stronger more vigorous effort to implement [OCR's desegregation] criteria is needed if equal opportunity is to be achieved for this and succeeding generations of black students....

The Adams decision is a milestone in desegregation law.... The Commission strongly supports the Adams decision...

It is a sad day when the Commission and its essayists move from their position critical of OCR for not doing enough to enforce desegregation to the position that OCR should not do anything. I have no objection if you attribute this letter to me.

Sincerely yours,

Elliott C. Lichtman
