Through an oversight, the Governor's Press Office failed to announce the signing of Assembly Bill 1061 (Monagan, Chapter 1074.

For the record, here is the text of that bill:

AB 1061 - Monagan
Chapter 1074

Declares legislative intent to establish the Green Light-Green Thumb programs for the benefit of senior citizens in California. The bill designates the California Commission on Aging as the agency which conducts planning and administration of federal funds for such programs. The bill requires the state to supply necessary in-kind materials for those projects under which the Green Light-Green Thumb programs contract with a state department or agency, and requires local governmental entities to supply such in-kind materials where the Green Light-Green Thumb program contracts with such entities directly.

The five new members who will represent research, development or system technology on the board, are:

The Foundation is charged with the responsibility of encouraging scientific and technological research, development, and education for the prevention and detection of crime, and the apprehension and treatment of criminals.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced that the U.S. Department of Labor's Office of Federal Contract Compliance has given conditional approval to his administration's proposal to establish a voluntary affirmative action program in the building and construction industry.

The objective of the program is to substantially increase minority employment opportunities in all phases of the industry.

Upon final approval, expected by January 5, 1973, California will become the first state, with previously operating local plans, to adopt a statewide program for increasing minority employment in its construction industry.

California's plan encompasses its efforts to bring about agreements between contractors and unions to provide more job opportunities for minority workers. In order for a construction firm and unions to take part in a contract involving federal funds, they must be participants in an approved affirmative action program which includes an agreement to hire minority employees.

Governor Reagan said final approval of the California plan is contingent upon the state's efforts to sign up additional contractors and unions representing a broad cross section of the building and construction trades.

The Office of Contract Compliance has final enforcement authority under the terms of President Nixon's executive order that deals with equal employment opportunity in federal and federally financed contract work.

Implementation of the program will be overseen and administered by a nine-member committee headed by Pier Gherini, chairman of the California Fair Employment Practices Commission. Other members of the committee are James Moe, director of the State Department of Public Works, Dr. Wilson C. Riles, superintendent of Public Instruction; James E. Stratten, chief, Division of Apprenticeship Standards; Sigurd Hansen, director, State Department of Human Resources Development; Fred Hummel, state architect; Robert J. Keyes, assistant to the governor for Community Relations; Paul Meaney, executive officer, Fair Employment Practices Commission; Stella Sandoval, Donald Diers and C. L. Dellums, commissioners, Fair Employment Practices Commission.

The California plan is statewide except for those areas which already have federally approved plans in operation. They include San Francisco, Alameda, Santa Clara, Monterey, Fresno, Madera, Kings, Tulare, Sacramento, Yolo, Amador, Placer, El Dorado, Nevada and Sierra Counties.

Some of the management and union organizations who have already signed affirmative action agreements are James Lee, State Building and Construction Trades Industry, Sacramento; James Twombly, California State Conference of Operating Engineers, San Mateo; Dale Ray, International Association of Bridge Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers District Council, San Francisco; Al Clem, Local Union #3, International Union of Operating Engineers, San Francisco; Warren Mendel, Engineering and Grading Contractors Association of California, Sacramento; Alfred Figone, Bay Counties District Council of Carpenters, San Francisco; Joseph Seymour, Local Union #12, International Union of Operating Engineers, Los Angeles; Hector E. Rueda, International Union of Elevator Constructors, San Francisco; Richard N. Moseman, Associated General Contractors of California, Inc., Shingle Springs; Robert E. Townsend, California Conference of Mason Contractors, Los Angeles; Carl R. Burg, Painting and Decorating Contractors of California, Inc., Sacramento; Robert Ringer, Building Industry of California, Los Angeles; Robert N. Gulick, California Drywall Contractors Association, Los Angeles; William B. Wright, Bay Counties Civil Engineers and Land Surveyors Association, Inc., San Mateo; H. D. Lackey, Kern, Inyo and Mono Counties Building Trades Council, Bakersfield; and Bob Carter, Plumbers and Fitters Local 460, Bakersfield.

Governor Reagan said the plan is a visible example of how state and federal governments, unions and management are cooperating to increase minority employment opportunities.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced that the City of Isleton is being reopened permitting residents of the flood stricken community to return to their homes and businesses nearly a month ahead of schedule.

Isleton was closed June 23 by order of the Sacramento County Department of Health because of damage to sewage and water facilities. The facilities have been restored and tests, conducted over the weekend, met specifications, according to the State Office of Emergency Services.

Governor Reagan said restoration of the city is being funded by the President's Office of Emergency Preparedness as a result of President Nixon declaring the area a major disaster on June 27.

The levee break, allowing the San Joaquin River to engulf the town, was repaired on August 24. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers began pumping water back into the river on August 27. The pumping operation will continue in the Brannan-Andrus Island complex for approximately two months.

Governor Reagan pointed out that the early opening of the city was made possible by an outstanding coordinated effort involving Isleton and Sacramento County departments, federal and state agencies and private utility companies.

Governor Ronald Reagan today accepted the resignation of Richards D. Barger, State Commissioner of Insurance.

Barger, who has served in the post during the past four years, is resigning to return to private law practice where he will become a senior partner in the Los Angeles-Newport Beach law firm of Kalmbach, DeMarco, Knapp and Chillingworth.

Governor Reagan, in reluctantly accepting the resignation, effective November 1, noted that under Barger's leadership, the Department of Insurance has helped play a key role in securing passage of new laws to benefit and protect policyholders. One of the most important of these makes insurance protection against losses resulting from criminal actions against the insured available at a reasonable cost. Another requires that all 1974 and later model cars be equipped with bumpers which will resist collisions at five miles per hour without damage to the vehicle.

In addition, the governor noted that under Barger, the Department of Insurance has insisted that companies selling health insurance through the mail and by newspaper advertising follow specific rules designed to protect prospective buyers against misleading and inaccurate advertising.

During the time Barger has served as Insurance Commissioner, the insurance industry in California has increased its total business volume by more than 25 percent, to more than $7.5 billion.

In his letter of resignation to the governor, Barger said: "I cannot adequately express my appreciation to you for the opportunity to serve in state government as a part of this administration. The people of California have been well served by the accomplishments of your administration, and I am pleased that the Department of Insurance has been able to help contribute to those accomplishments."

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced the state Office of Emergency Services (OES) is developing a major earthquake emergency operations plan in cooperation with nine San Francisco Bay Area counties and the President's Office of Emergency Preparedness (OEP).

The plan will detail the actions to be taken by local and state governments and appropriate non-governmental agencies in coordination with the federal government in the event of a major earthquake in the Bay Area.

"Local emergency plans already exist in all counties," Governor Reagan said. "But this new effort is designed to produce a plan which meets the specific problems created by a catastrophic earthquake.

"OEP, in conjunction with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, has recently completed a study which resulted in a descriptive analysis of the damage which could occur from earthquakes of varying magnitudes in the Bay Area. This information, along with close cooperation among federal, state and local governments, will be the basis for a 'San Francisco Bay Area Earthquake Response Plan' which can help meet the needs of the area's citizens in time of disaster.

"The key to successful planning depends on the preparedness of local governments. It is at the local level that crucial first steps must be taken to speed up the recovery from a major disaster."

OES Director H.R. Temple, Jr., said the department has established an office in Redwood City to coordinate planning in six major areas: Warning and Communications, Fire Services, Law Enforcement, Emergency Welfare, Emergency Medical Services and Public Works.

The staff consists of professional planners funded by the federal government, planning personnel from OES, and representatives from 22 state agencies who have been assigned to the Planning Research Center to offer expertise in their respective areas.

Counties included in the plan are Alameda, Contra Costa, Marin, Napa, San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Clara, Solano and Sonoma.

The resources and capabilities of the private sector, such as the transportation, communications, utility and petroleum industries, will be integrated into the plan, according to Charles T. Rainey, project manager with OES.

Completion date for the federally funded project is August 1973.

RELEASE: SUNDAY A.Ms.
October 1, 1972
#546

Governor Ronald Reagan today observed the one-year anniversary of the California Welfare and Medi-Cal Reform Acts by announcing a total California welfare roll reduction of 220,653 people from the program's high point of 2,298,440 welfare recipients in March of 1971.

"The laws are a year old today," Governor Reagan said, "and this is a good time to look back and see how far we have come since the era when welfare caseloads were spiraling upwards at 40,000 per month and Medi-Cal costs were climbing at $100 to $200 million, or a growth rate of 25 percent per year.

"If welfare and Medi-Cal reforms had not been undertaken and the welfare rolls and Medi-Cal costs had continued to rise at their pre-reform rate, the taxpayers would have spent an additional $1 billion (federal, state and local) on welfare ($541 million) and Medi-Cal ($457.3 million) by this time," he said.

A major result of the savings is that at least 38 of California's 58 counties---including Los Angeles---will have lower general tax rates this year.

Governor Reagan said, "the administrative reforms we put into effect in January of 1971 and the reforms adopted by the legislature were aimed at eliminating easy access to welfare through loose eligibility procedures, streamlining administration, and encouraging family responsibility."

Of the 220,653 caseload reduction in the welfare rolls since March of 1971, when the governor's welfare reform program was submitted to the legislature, 119,781 can be traced to administrative reforms. One hundred thousand eight hundred seventy two reductions in the caseload have been achieved since passage of the Welfare Reform Act on October 1, 1971.

"Merely stopping the previous upward caseload trend would be something to be proud of. The fact we have been able to roll back the caseload to the extent we have is far more than we could have possibly hoped for. And the 17-month decline in the number of Californians on welfare has been achieved in the face of a national trend which continues upward."

Governor Reagan noted that the reduction has been achieved without the types of measures adopted by some of the few other states reporting lower caseload figures. Kansas, for example, cut all grants by 20 percent, across the board. Those with small grants went off welfare and the rolls went down. Nevada conducted a house-to-house search and thinned out its rolls.

He also pointed out that New Jersey, an industrial state, simply discontinued the Aid to Families with Dependent Children - Unemployed (AFDC-U) program and left out-of-work fathers without any source of support. "If California were to have adopted this type of measure, another 200,000 persons would have been cut from our welfare rolls. But this type of approach is not in line with the comprehensive reform program we have implemented, which has increased grants to needy families by 30 percent," Governor Reagan said.

California's welfare reforms also have brought about a 48 percent reduction in the number of people on county relief, from 102,659 in March, 1971 to 53,107 last month. The governor credited this reduction for helping decrease general tax rates in many California counties.

Dr. Earl W. Brian, California Secretary of Health and Welfare, whose Agency oversees the Welfare and Medi-Cal programs, noted that improvements in detecting fraudulent use of welfare grants are still being made.

"A major section of the Act is aimed at reducing payments to those with significant outside income, in order to make money available to increase grants to those people wholly dependent on welfare," Dr. Brian said. He added that "anyone who is reporting all the income he or she earns and is still legally eligible for welfare has nothing to fear from the Earnings Clearance System."

The latest earnings clearance data lists 177,000 recipients on outside payrolls in the first quarter of 1972. This does not include city, county or state employees who are not on Human Resources Development (HRD) records nor those willful and determined "cheaters" who use fake Social Security numbers. "Audits of these records have shown an extremely high percentage of discrepancy between what the recipient reports as income and what is reported by the employer," Dr. Brian said.

He cited the example turned up by the system of a couple who had been on Aid to Families with Dependent Children from 1968 through June, 1972 in San Francisco and from March, 1971 through June, 1972 on AFDC in Sonoma County. "When the couple moved to Sonoma they arranged a mail drop and would return to the city periodically to pick up their checks," Dr. Brian said. "Sonoma authorities estimate the couple collected $800 a month from welfare, including food stamps, while they operated a gift and curio shop in Cloverdale. They now face criminal charges."

"Putting the Act to work took a long time, and some of the pieces are still falling into place a year after passage," Dr. Brian said. "We were denied the opportunity to effectively put the reform program into effect while section after section of the new law was dragged through the courts. Altogether, 12 of the Act's 84 sections were challenged in a total of 18 lawsuits, mostly instituted by welfare rights attorneys. At last count the state has been upheld on 12 of 13 actions against the 1971 Welfare Reform Program," he added.

Court action also was required to defend the legislative intent:

- To require stepfathers to contribute to the support of their stepchildren;
- To set up a program of child care facilities;
- To recognize in-kind income in computing grants;
- To deny payments to children who had left their parental home;
- To require unrelated males to contribute to the support of households they headed;
- To require adult children to support their needy aged parents;
- To prevent unmarried pregnant minors with affluent parents from getting abortions at public expense.

Dr. Brian said the Support Enforcement Incentive Fund, a section of the Act which went into effect last October, has been "an unqualified success." This fund reimburses counties a portion of the money for child support that district attorneys are able to get from absent fathers of welfare children.

"Since this makes the activity self-supporting," Dr. Brian said, "many counties have increased their child support staff and this is a help to the deserted mother and children.

"The savings made possible by all these combined efforts have enabled us to achieve our goal of increasing grants to the truly needy and the aged, blind and disabled. Grants to needy AFDC families have been increased and cost of living increases to the aged, blind and disabled have been put on a regular basis with increases last year and this year," Dr. Brian said.

Concerning similar savings and improvements in Medi-Cal reforms, Dr. Brian emphasized that "for the first time since its inception, the Medi-Cal budget is actually less than it was in the preceding year. And we anticipate piling up another surplus in the current fiscal year," he added.

"Before Medi-Cal Reform, the health care provision system within the state was burdened with excessive paperwork problems, submission of bills for Medi-Cal eligible persons getting health care services, a complex system of standards and reviews to try and control abuses, and extensive delays in actually paying bills. The recipients were unhappy, the doctors found it difficult to provide care, and the taxpayers were facing a financial crisis as medical costs soared and bills piled up," Dr. Brian said.

"Through Medi-Cal reform we were able to ease the paperwork burden on health care providers, while still maintaining a fiscal control on dollars expended for needed health care services. In the first fiscal year of the reform program we reported a $180 million surplus in federal, state and county monies." (Over and above original projected savings of $208 million).

"While we are grateful for the financial impact of the reform, the most important aspects of the Medi-Cal reform are just getting into high gear now," Dr. Brian emphasized.

"A key part of this reform program has been the establishment of Prepaid Health Plans, or PHPs," Dr. Brian said. "Prepayment for health care services is arranged through a contract between the state and a PHP organization. The PHP organization agrees to provide health care services on a risk basis. This means that, for an agreed-upon prepayment, the PHP will provide the individual member all of the health care services required without further compensation from the state. Enrollment in a PHP program by Medi-Cal beneficiaries is voluntary.

"Since October, 1971, we have signed 17 PHP contracts with a potential enrollment of approximately 300,000 Medi-Cal recipients, and anticipate a savings of approximately $9 million through these contracts," Dr. Brian said.

The PHP programs currently in effect are located primarily in southern California, with one major program in Sacramento covering five northern counties.

Dr. Brian said that the Agency's goal is to sign contracts for enrolling one million Medi-Cal participants in PHPs by July, 1973.

"In view of the time it took to get the welfare and Medi-Cal Reform programs into actual operation, it is a wonder that we have come as far as we have in making these systems responsive to the needs of those unable to care for themselves and to the fiscal necessities of this state and its taxpayers. I look forward to the day when our welfare system will support only the truly needy and the helpless, and the caseload lines on the welfare charts will match the ups and downs of our economy," Dr. Brian said.
