Dear Mr. Mial:

Thank you for your recent message regarding the situation in El Salvador.

The government of that beleaguered nation is attempting to establish the minimal order that is a precondition to democratic reforms. Its efforts have been obstructed by a level of violence that prevents the move toward moderation. Our advisory role and our economic assistance are intended to assist in the stabilization of the only forces capable of establishing a decent order under the present conditions.

I appreciate your concern for our role in El Salvador and hope that you will consider the situation there in light of all the available information.

Thank you for your thoughtful message. In his addresses to the nation and to Congress, President Reagan has called upon the American people for a cooperative effort to resolve our economic difficulties. Dear Mr. Mengert:

This is in reply to your April 22, 1981 letter concerning cost-of-living adjustments to a Federal retiree's annuity.

At present, and in accordance with the Civil Service Retirement law (5 U.S.C. 8340), each civil service annuity is adjusted on March 1 based on the percent rise in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) from the preceding June to December; on September 1, annuities are adjusted again for the percent rise in the CPI from the preceding December to June. The objective of cost-of-living adjustments to a Federal retiree's annuity is to maintain the purchasing power of that retiree's earned annuity. Any changes in the law would require amendatory legislation.

I would like to point out, however, the Office of Personnel Management (the organization responsible for administering the civil service personnel system) has proposed that the Civil Service Retirement law be amended to provide that cost-of-living adjustments be made on a once a year basis.

I hope I have been of assistance to you.

Dear Brother John:

Thank you for your recent letter regarding Amtrak's future.

The Administration has proposed a reduction in Federal subsidies to Amtrak as part of the President's program to cut Federal spending and reduce inflation. Amtrak serves a relatively small number of travelers. Common carrier air and bus services, which receive much lower Federal subsidies, are available in most of the cities served by Amtrak. Large Federal subsidies to Amtrak, almost one billion dollars in 1981, cannot be justified under these circumstances.

In general, intercity auto travel is more fuel-efficient than Amtrak whenever three persons travel in the auto. Corridor service, where the fuel efficiency of Amtrak service is the highest, achieves 75 passenger-miles per gallon on the average, just slightly more than one-half of the fuel efficiency of an intercity bus, which is 135 passenger-miles per gallon. Enclosed is a fact sheet containing some of the reasons for the Administration's position on Amtrak.

Although some Amtrak trains are heavily loaded at some times, particularly during peak travel, Amtrak's data for Fiscal Year 1980 (October 1, 1979 to September 30, 1980) indicates that the average Amtrak train was only 50 percent full. Furthermore, for the first five months of Fiscal Year 1981, Amtrak traffic grew 3 percent on its long-distance trains but fell 1 percent systemwide, as compared with the same period a year earlier.

The Administration has proposed that in 1982 Amtrak cover 50 percent of its costs by fares or subsidies other than from the Federal Government. We believe that Amtrak can operate a nationwide system in 1982 within the proposed budget. Amtrak will have to raise fares, cut expenses and eliminate its least patronized and most unprofitable routes to accomplish this objective, but it can be done. These proposals and the subsidy reductions are important components in the Administration's effort to meet the nation's economic challenges.

Sincerely,

Dear Mike,

You may have noticed at home in this week's copy of our newsletter the item about the daughters of Jim and Cathy Culver and Ed and Barbara Tye, but another copy is enclosed. Here is some additional information about their trip.

They will arrive in Washington late afternoon June 20, remaining through the 23rd. Their only performances presently scheduled are from noon to 3:00 p.m. on Sunday, June 21, and at the White House ellipse at 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday, June 23. Both the choir and the Hawaiiana Dancers would be available for other performances --but I guess they don't have any contacts for getting them. (The director is Chris Williams, Jefferson High, Sact.) Naturally, the girls are hoping that they will see you and the President--although I am confident that there are probably seventeen groups per day hoping for the same thing!

The Hawaiiana Dance group has been invited to perform in Cannes at the time of the Cannes Film Festival. They will be in France three weeks for additional booked performances in Paris and Monaco, June 24-July 15. Kristi and Liz are both in that group. I understand the French government is picking up a chunk of their expenses because they are official guests.

The girls have asked me how to get tickets for admission to the Congressional galleries. I am not certain of the procedure. The last time I took young people there (about 1957) Edith Nourse Rogers, then representing our Massachusetts congressional district, set it up and invited all 54 of us to be her guests at breakfast in the Capitol itself! A wealthy woman, she reputedly entertained some group for breakfast every day--it helped out at election time.

No progress on selling my novel about John the Baptist. However, I am hopeful of completing the next one by June 30. It is about the establishment of the first Christian Church in Corinth--written from the viewpoint of the Corinthians. Paul is a minor character. I trust that Harper & Row's marketing director will decide that this one will sell to "the uneducated housewife with two children who wants her faith confirmed." He said she wouldn't buy the other, and she controls the market--according to him. And since the New Testament tells us so very little about the Corinthians, she won't say, "But that is not how the Bible says it happened." However, when she reads the Epistles to the Corinthians after reading the novel, she won't need much help in understanding them. And I think it is turning into an exciting story with great conflicts, personal tragedies, sex, and a happy ending. That's what Americans want, isn't it: a tragedy with a happy ending?

Cordially,

STATEMENT OF AMERICAN DOCTORS WHO EXAMINED POPE JOHN PAUL II
MADE UPON RETURN TO THE U.S., May 20th, 1981

We have just returned from a series of consultations with the medical team caring for Pope John Paul II. We were part of a 6 member international group of specialists invited to advise on various surgical and medical aspects of the Pope's condition consequent to his serious wound on May 13th.

During our stay in Rome we made 4 medical visits to the Pope, including 2 thorough clinical examinations by each of us. We had the opportunity to review the complete medical record, including all x-rays, cardiograms and laboratory data. We were able to interview the entire professional team responsible for the complex care required in this case. Our suggestions regarding antibiotics, nutrients and other medications, as well as future management, were graciously received. We had the opportunity to examine the superb hospital facilities and medical equipment employed.

Daily medical bulletins already have provided extensive information - including diagrams - concerning the Pope's wounds. Additional comment is unnecessary except for us to verify the accuracy of those hospital reports and to affirm that no significant facts have been withheld from the public. We fully respect both the Pope's right to privacy and recognize that it is the responsibility of the attending physicians to determine which clinical details to release. Furthermore, we believe it is professionally inappropriate for consultants to discuss other doctors' patients, and we do not intend to violate that practice in this case.

In spite of the extremely serious nature of his wounds, the Pope, at the end of the seventh post-operative day, looks well and his vital signs and laboratory parameters are returning towards normal. He is taking nourishment by mouth and has been able to sit up and walk to an adjoining room. He has had no fever for the past 36 hours. He is extremely tolerant of pain and offers no complaints at this time. He was completely alert during our visits, expressing keen interest in the people and practices of the hospital. We might as one example, note that he conversed in six languages during one visit.

While we are pleased by his progress to date, it is clear that even a patient as remarkably fit as the Pope will require a prolonged period of recuperation and further complications still can occur. At the request of his doctors we have agreed to remain available for additional consultation, if necessary.

Pope John Paul II did ask us to extend his gratitude to the American people for their prayers and expressions of concern and sent his Papal Blessing to them.

We wish to express our thanks to the entire staff of the Gemelli Hospital for their many kindnesses to us during our stay, and to commend them for their excellent care of a gravely injured man. We also are grateful to the Vatican Secretary of State, Cardinal Casaroli, who took such a personal interest in all the arrangements necessary for our visit.

During our time in Rome we also met with the doctors caring for the two American women shot during the assassination attempt, and examined both patients. We shall contact their family and friends as requested.
