Dear Mr. Whitney:

Thank you for your recent letter. I speak for the entire Administration when I say that your friendship and support are deeply appreciated.

With regard to the materials you sent me, I want to thank you for bringing them to my attention. Throughout his career, President Reagan has been involved with many private organizations which share his political and social philosophy. Since the election, other such groups have been formed to help him in making that philosophy a political reality. While the Administration believes that it would be inappropriate for any of its members to take a direct role in promoting such organizations, neither has it attempted to curtail the activities of the organizations you mentioned. Likewise, it would be inappropriate for me to advise you as to whether to actively support the work of any organization or group of organizations.

Honorable Micheal K. Deaver
Assistant to the President
The White House
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mike:

I'm writing to you today to see if we might be able to resolve some of our differences or at least clear the air.

I know our differences go back a long way, but from what I've heard over the last couple of months from several mutual acquaintances, I think you are basing some of your feelings about me on information that is less than accurate.

Perhaps I should have sat down with you or even with Governor Reagan before I left the campaign in 1978 to join Jim Baker and George Bush, but John Sears was adamantly against my doing so. In fact, when I offered to write a letter detailing my reasons for leaving he informed me that it "wouldn't get through" and told me not to bother.

I did make it clear publicly when I left that I admired Ronald Reagan and would not "bad mouth" him. In fact, I never did; indeed, some in the Bush campaign were extremely critical of my "softness" on the question (this is something you can check with Jim Baker if you want).

My closeness to the press caused me problems during the 1976 campaign and after. A lot of people used me as a scapegoat for leaks for which they themselves were responsible.

I'm not saying that I was always blameless, but on at least one occasion John leaked something, blamed it on me and then assured me that while others were blaming me I didn't have to worry because he'd always stick by me.

Since the Detroit convention I've done all that I can to help. I prepared the NCPAC independent strategy and produced the ads run in the South. Mike McKeivitt of NFIB and I co-chaired the strategy committee of the Budget Control Working Group and developed support though that group for a "correct" vote on the President's budget.

I am also involved in other projects supportive of the Administration. I don't want a government job; but neither do I want you or others believing things about me that aren't true.

I believe Lyn Nofziger is as familiar with what I've done as anyone. I've always considered him a friend and I believe he thinks I acted honorably and fairly throughout the campaign and after.

I would very much like to get together to see if we can't "bury the hatchet." It would make me feel better and you might discover that the "rap" on me is less accurate than you have supposed.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Tom:

Thanks for your good note and the clipping. I could almost taste the steaks once again. Someday I'm coming back to San Jose for a few days to eat at all the old familiar places.

It's delightful to hear from so many old friends - even Frank Hoak has written twice, and the National Fraternity has invited me to be the keynote speaker in September. I'd rather play the piano.

All are settling into this hectic life, always remembering that it's shortlived. Carolyn and the children are doing fine.

Say hello to all.

My best regards to Carol.

Dear Mike and Carol:

How are you adjusting to the Washington climate? A little different from the California routine. Wait until the summer sweaters hit. I passed through ~~there~~ only once; and that was in the summertime and it was enough for me.

Carol and I saw this piece in the paper about the Hi*Life and thought about you. We were going to send it along earlier, but, with everything going on for you during that time, it didn't seem appropriate. But, then you may have enjoyed a little distraction.

You must be working an 18 hour day! My 9 to 10 hours per day don't seem so bad now. We are in the process of cutting the business back a little; too much competition from people new into the business with computers who are knocking the prices to pieces. We have been in business for twenty-five years now and cannot see how they can quote such prices. So, we are going to wait them out until they (or us) go under. I always liked real estate better, anyway.

Had dinner with Eric and Carole the other day. They are fine. I was kidding Eric about finally showing some grey. Their kids are so big now; it's funny how other people's kids grow so much faster than your own. Our Greg will be going to UC Santa Barbara next year and Laura will be a high school junior. Carol and I have already started talking about our impending 'freedom' in a couple of years.

The chapter is re-established at SJS. They have about 18 actives and 16 pledges this semester. A pretty good start for one year.

This is probably all the time you have, so, we'll keep in touch. We think of you often. Keep up the good work.

Best personal regards,

Tom & Carol

Dear Mrs. Sykes:

One of the pleasant things about the publicity surrounding my appointment are the letters I've received from Deavers around the country.

My father's father, William Deaver, came to California from Iowa around the turn of the century. His son, my father, is named Paul Sperling Deaver. He had two sons, myself and a brother, William, and a daughter, Susan.

His family had come from England and settled in Illinois and Iowa. My great grandfather's name was Augustus Deaver.

I'm sorry, but that's the extent of my geneological information.

Thank you for writing.

Dear Mr. Deaver:

Ever since President Reagan became president I have seen your name in the news and since there are not many Deaver families I have been curious to know where you were born and your parents names.

My father's name was Hiram Blackburn Deaver and he was born in Marshall, North Carolina, and his father was Robert Vance Deaver and he was a miller for many years there on the French Broad River in the little town of Marshall. My mother was born in Knoxville, Tennessee and she and Daddy met here and were married in 1905, and all eight children live here in Knoxville. I lived in Florida for 30 years but came back here seven years ago to take care of my parents and we lost Daddy in 1977 at the age of 91. My mother is still living and will soon be 92.

My father had an Uncle James Deaver who settled in Seattle, Washington, and he had a son, but we never heard anything from him for several years before he died - he is the only one I know of who went to the West Coast, the rest of them stayed in Tennessee or North Carolina.

If you have the time would like to hear from you.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mike:

I guess when old friends move to Washington, they get unavailable. I've tried to call you two or three times and, to date, you've never returned a call.

I called you the other day to put in a plug for Milan Bisch to be Ambassador of the Bahamas. Milan certainly deserves something because he worked his heart out for over eight years for the President and, if there's anybody more loyal, I'd like to see them.

I can't understand why the present administration is delaying some appointments so long. I've recommended several people in Nebraska to Dick Richards who are loyal Republicans and supporters of the President who would make excellent appointments as ambassadors or to advisory committees. To date, I have not heard of one of them having been appointed.

Mike, we want to be helpful if you'll give us a chance. I think you know we'd never do anything knowingly to hurt the President. He's doing a great job and I'm sure that some of the best things he's done is because of your advice and counsel.

I'm going to be in Washington May 20. If possible, if you're not too busy, I'd like to buy your lunch or I'd like to at least get together for a visit.

Best personal regards.

Sincerely,

George B. Cook
