Dear David:

I got your note about the President attending the New York Partnership meeting in January.

Hopefully, we will have a decision shortly. I suggest, if you haven't already, you let Al Haig know about your thoughts on the Third World review group.

Many thanks for all your help.

Sincerely,

Dear Mike:

I spoke this morning with Joe Canzeri about a number of issues, including the proposed appearance by the President at the New York City Partnership annual dinner and the proposal for the creation of a private sector review group to look at U.S.-Third World relations within the context of U.S. self-interest. I was delighted at the bright prospects that the President will be able to join as at the Partnership dinner on January 11 or 12.

During our conversation, Joe suggested that it might be useful to you to have some names of people who have been suggested for leadership of or potential membership on the Third World review group. Three that have been mentioned frequently for leadership are George Shultz, Charles Walker and Elliot Richardson. Other suggestions have included Frank Cary, Irving Shapiro, Reg Jones, Bill Scranton and Paul McCracken. Obviously, there are many other people who could be most valuable if this effort goes forward, but I thought these names might give you some idea of the calibre of people who have been suggested for involvement.

With kind regards,

Sincerely,

David Rockefeller

Dear Miss Rice:

Thank you for your recent letter. I appreciate the time you have taken to bring your views concerning the Middle East to my attention.

Certainly, the situation in the Middle East is very complex and fraught with difficulties. It is always encouraging to hear from citizens like you who have devoted their time and effort to analyzing and understanding this important problem. You can be sure that your message will be brought to the attention of the appropriate officials within the Administration.

Dear Mr. Halteman:

Thank you for your recent letter. I always enjoy hearing from friends of Bill and Susan and I appreciate your desire to come to Washington.

Unfortunately, there are currently no plans to implement a White House internship program for this coming summer. However, you may wish to contact the placement offices for both the House of Representatives and the Senate. For the House office, the address is the House Placement Office, Office of the Clerk, House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515. For the Senate, you should write to the Senate Placement Office, Room B-24, Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510.

Finally, since you have had previous experience with Senator Laxalt, you may be best advised to contact his office regarding possible employment opportunities in the Senate. His address is Room 315, Russell Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510.

Re: Request for Dr. Murray Weidenbaum to Meet with the Committee of Publicly Owned Companies
Board of Directors

Dear Mike:

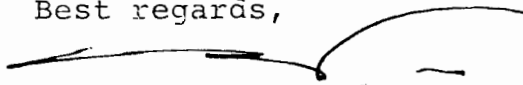

In furtherance of the willingness you expressed at our meeting in your office on October 16 to set up a meeting with Dr. Murray Weidenbaum with the leadership of the Committee of Publicly Owned Companies (COPOC) and of my indication in my October 19 letter that COPOC's Board of Directors meeting in early December appeared to be the most auspicious time to do that, I have enclosed herewith COPOC's formal letter of invitation to Dr. Weidenbaum. This is the original letter, for we have not communicated with Dr. Weidenbaum directly with respect to this.

We have given Dr. Weidenbaum three alternative dates, those which appear best for the Board. The subject in which the Board has the greatest interest is, of course, the direction of the economy; the subject which most directly relates to COPOC members' needs aside from general economic recovery is equity capital deployment.

The meeting will be in Washington.

Your assistance on this is very much appreciated. We continue to believe that there are important opportunities for the Administration and COPOC here.

Best regards,

Duck season opened on October 17, and my wife and I gathered with two of her cousins and their wives to have our traditional beginning-of-the-season weekend. One of her cousins is Richard Thieriot, Publisher of the San Francisco Chronicle.

During lunch on the weekend I was lamenting the ridiculous criticism that Mrs. Reagan has received on the "china" issue, as well as the desirability of supporting AWACS. The result appeared in yesterday's editorial page of the Chronicle. Both editorials are enclosed and Dick Thieriot is, I think, justifiably pleased with the result. It just goes to show you what a little healthy duck hunting will do!

Decision Day

THE SENATE VOTES today on the sale of a group of advanced airborne warning and control system aircraft. No arms transaction has stirred such controversy since President Roosevelt transferred 50 obsolescent destroyers to Britain, which stood alone and beleaguered early in World War II.

In the course of the current controversy, we believe far too much emphasis has been made of the fact that the aircraft would be going to an Arab nation. And that this, per se, represents a threat to Israel. There is much, much more to be said for the Saudi Arabian viewpoint. A reasonable and just decision must consider these points.

The Saudi Arabians have, time after time, stood against the Khadafys and other irresponsible leaders of oil producing nations who have wanted, through OPEC oil cartel pricing meetings, to bleed Western industrial oil consumers white. Over the last five years, constantly increasing oil prices have been the single most important cause of inflation which has been ruinous throughout the Western World. In the face of this pressure, the Saudis have not only held the line of pricing, but have, in fact, upped production to produce an oil market glut to help to contain inflation.

THE SAUDI ARABIANS have, in fact, often stood alone and against their Arab brothers in this pricing fight, a fight in which the United States has been the principal beneficiary.

They have behaved with total responsibility toward their trading partners.

Along with their Western partners, the Saudis share apprehension over the intentions of the Soviet Union in the Middle East. They are important allies of the anti-Communist nations and are, thus, natural allies.

Recent developments have sharply increased the need of the United States for dependable, stable allies in the Islamic world. Anwar Sadat has been removed by assassination, Iran is experiencing anarchy and chaotic bloodbath, and Afghanistan is under Soviet occupation. The Saudi Arabians become, thus, not just important oil producers but vital allies in an area of turmoil.

FINALLY, THERE IS the "realpolitik" of the Saudi oil. This alone cannot be the determinant of American policy, but it can never really be overlooked either.

The sale, we believe, must not be painted as an aberration of traditional United States support for Israel, a support which we have voiced on innumerable occasions. Rather, we

Nancy Reagan's New China

DOES THE AMERICAN public really want visiting dignitaries to be served state meals on marked-down, end-of-the-month sale china? Of course not. It wouldn't have done to have Charles de Gaulle turning up his patrician nose at a plastic plate. And it won't do to have Queen Elizabeth eyeing the chips on a jelly-glass beaker.

We may be guilty of some slight exaggeration in these examples, but, really, what is the current furor all about? There seems a squirrely notion abroad that Nancy Reagan somehow overstepped some vague bounds of propriety by accepting, for the White House, the donation of a full set of first-class dishes and plates.

WHAT NONSENSE. The money for the china was provided by a private donor. And the White House should certainly be able to receive and entertain its guests of state with all appropriate pomp and circumstance.

Any substantial outlay of funds of this sort — $209,508, to be exact — can contribute to a sense of unease. But, in context, we think the country's interests have been well served. Artistic excellence and diplomatic niceties have their place. That goes for the place-settings, as well as the general sense of style and elegance that the Reagans have been at pains to emphasize at the White House.

And it is pleasing that Nancy Reagan doesn't take her own image too seriously, as evidenced in her asking a New York audience the other night whether it had heard of her latest program: The Nancy Reagan Home for Wayward China.
