Dear Mike:

Thank you so very much for helping us arrange to interview President Reagan for the special programs that we called Reagan on Reagan.

These included a series of reports broadcast throughout the week of November 16 on all of the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company radio and television stations, plus a 30-minute program carried not only by those stations, but also by more than 30 other television stations across the country, and by many others in foreign countries. We think these broadcasts provided a special public service by giving the insight which only the President could give into how he goes about-- and feels about--his job.

I will soon be sending you a set of the television and radio programs.

Sincerely,

Jerry

Dear Mike:

Assuming that you did not set up the Barbara Walters interview with the President, I thought you should know that the attached letter in the News Press is a mild statement of the disgust which I hear on every hand about Barbara Walters handling this interview.

When one compares this with some of the past interviews conducted by Walter Cronkite, for example, it makes one quite unhappy that the President would be asked to give up so much of his time for such an unsatisfactory event.

He did great credit to himself by maintaining his relaxed sense of humor and not appearing, at least, unhappy with the barrage of pertinent, irrelevant and often inane questions fired at him by Ms Walters!

Otherwise...hoping you are enjoying yourself, I send you greetings from your many friends in this area.

Cordially yours,

Louis

More fact, please

Editor, News-Press: "At home on the ranch"? If that was the title of Barbara Walters' interview with President Reagan, she missed her target by "Freedom of the press" — or nos, insolence?

The guided tour, the house, the flashbacks of old movies and childhood reminiscence — all very nice and pleasant as a fireside chat. And that is exactly what it should have been. But to corner the president of the United States with highly sensitive questions about his closest advisers (no matter how timely), his feelings and possible decisions, was not only inappropriate but in bad taste and completely out of line. Ms. Walters, there is a thing called "tact" that even an aggressive reporter should have and exercise!

Nuclear attack, 17 minute "grace period" to decide whether the world will be blown up, presidential "nightmares" about it. Ms. Walters, these questions overstepped your potential as a journalist, embarrassed (visibly!) the president and should only come up at the Oval Office — not "at home on the ranch." For one slip of the tongue (yours or the president's) picked up by the ever hungry horde of the news media and, as usually, misinterpreted, could do a lot of harm to the country.

A little more modesty, a lot more tact Ms. Walters.

Would you be so kind as to have Mike autograph these photos for us?

Shirley, the week prior to our August 30th flyout to Swaziland, I'd mailed the President for his autographing five placards pertaining to a program I produced at the Santa Monica Auditorium in the early '60s. The main speaker and attraction at this event was G. E. Theatre spokesman and eloquent speaker, Ronald Reagan. Now, I fully realize the President's busy schedule but I would like to know, so that I can relay to the other recipients, if we can expect them in the near future?

Thanks.

Dear Shirley:

I was contacted the other day by a Mrs. Ivonne Obenauer regarding a special birthday celebration for two of the leading Clerics in the local Catholic Diocese: Msgr. I. Brent Eagen and Msgr. William D. Spain. Msgr. Eagen's birthday is on the 14th of December, he will be 51 and Msgr. Spain's birthday is on December 20th, he will be 53. Both are actively involved in the Equestrian Order of the Holy Sepulcher of Jerusalem, which is the occasion for the special birthday party.

Mrs. Obenauer asked if it would be possible to have a standard Presidential birthday card mailed to her. She will then present the greetings to both priests at the party. Her address: Mrs. Ivonne Obenauer, 9665 Blackgold Road, La Jolla, CA. 92037.

Dear Mike,

I hope I did not appear ungracious in my response to your thoughtful phone call yesterday. I was genuinely touched by your consideration and particularly flattered that Mrs. Reagan also believed that Cynthia and I could do the job. But as I said, thirty-four years of government service, including the Navy in World War II, has not provided much financial cushion, and the small business I started four years ago is pretty much a one-man show and would hardly prosper without me. Nevertheless, I am deeply sympathetic with what the President is trying to accomplish, so if there is at some point an opportunity to help on a part-time basis or serve on a commission, I would be delighted to do so.

Thank you again for your thoughtfulness.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Should We Give First Ladies a Break?

In her harsh attack on Nancy Reagan ("Bad Image," Nov. 20), Judy Mann makes some statements that suggest her entire column is little more than a "cheap shot." In referring to Mrs. Reagan's support of the foster grandparent program, Mrs. Mann cites the program as "a nice example of volunteerism, but . . . hardly a substantive issue."

It is a very substantive issue that Mrs. Reagan has embraced, even if Mrs. Mann did not discuss the enormous good work done by foster grandparents for mentally retarded, physically handicapped and troubled youth. In these centers of volunteerism, a wonderful relationship develops between the young and the elderly. Each has something to give, and all have something to gain, whether it be a matter of caring or a candle of hope.

As director of ACTION, the agency that oversees the foster grandparents, I issue an open invitation to Mrs. Mann to join me in visiting one of our local foster grandparents sites. Perhaps then she might reconsider her opinion that this is not a substantive program.

→ Att. Ms. Shirley Moore
White House
Washington, DC

Dear Mr. Deaver:

Having completed 90 days around the country I called Ms. Moore yesterday to give my observations as I have in the past and was able to write them:

1. Most people appear to be willing to give the economic program a chance.
2. Many people were concerned of cuts to retirees and the elderly. There is more respect in this country for the elderly since WWII.
3. Jerry Falwell will hurt the Republican candidates in 1982. (2 students at Lynchberry said he was a crook and a con artist.)
4. Most felt the President should campaign for candidates via TV, etc. rather than in person for security reasons.
5. Several wealthy people agreed with me that we would have a "boom" in Sept. '82 brought on by the need for housing and construction.
6. I suggest more PR work on the economic program from the Administration.
7. Several questioned the need for a "middle man" --The National Security Advisor--when they felt it had been a thorn in the side of both Presidents. They feel if the position had to remain it should be left vacant.
8. Many want action against Lybia and want to re-institute the Monroe Doctrine and take Cuba. Central America seemed a mystery to most.
9. Many large concerns are employing illegal aliens. Texans and Floridians seem ready to fight the Cubans and Mexicans in the country. You have a number of people there that should know. There is great dissention against them and the blacks. The police in Dallas told me I could go on the east side and buy enough military equipment to start a war.
10. On unemployment: During WWII when jobs were available we had 2% unemployment. I believe the people who won't work would now be at least 5%; if true we have 3% unemployment - not 8%.

11. I believe in the B-1 bomber and the MX missile. But I think the shuttle program and the Laser Research program is an important from a military standpoint.
12. Once Congress passes the appropriation bills, I think they would serve the nation's interest best by going home. We need 9 more months of hope and evaluation and I believe even the President will be surprised and pleased at the results. People are tired of critics.

Boots had a bad fall in Texas and we are back awaiting word from the White House on a position which they have had under consideration for months. They indicated the first of the year looks good.

I hope these observations and comments are helpful. Your response will be appreciated.

Sincerely,

Kind Sir -

Would you like to balance the budget in 1982
It can be done! How? By reducing the price of military hardware.

$100 billion for 100-B1 bombers is much too much.

The President or Sec. of Defense should tell all the companies that our government is ready to pay 60% of that price for 100-B1 bombers of the same quality and specifications. That the first company to agree to such a deal, gets the order. My friends, with that, you will see every one of the airplane companies falling all over themselves to get that order.

The same goes for the MX's, tanks and all the rest.
The government doesn't have the money and can't afford to spend so much.

The wage scale is away too high. It needs to come down.
Interest needs to come down to 9%. Wages should be reduced by 40%. When that happens, prices will follow suit.

The government can set the pattern for all the rest of the country. When interest and prices come down, then money will begin circulating again and employment will increase.
