Dear Mike:

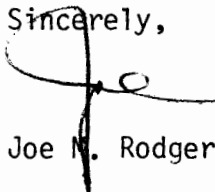

I have become very excited about your comment that Ambassador Mansfield may be replaced and that I could be that replacement. Not only do I feel qualified and comfortable about the job, I have a sincere interest in pursuing it. My children will both be in college this year which eliminates the reason I have not been able to serve on a full time basis.

If the appointment were to take place, when would it be? I already have top secret clearance because of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board (PFIAB). Since I am involved in several businesses I need as much notice as possible. I am familiar with blind trusts but I really don't think I have any conflict with Japan.

Mike, I don't know of anyone who would oppose me for this or any other major appointment, but if you think I need to do anything in particular please let me know.

Look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Dear Mike,

I don't know where the time has gone! With weddings, births, holidays and our business; I apologize for not getting back to you earlier. I sincerely appreciate the visit you arranged for my Brother, Ken. Your Secretary did a magnificent job. Again, a sincere thank you. I have just been swamped with work. Our business is expanding and growing and with luck our sales should reach $10,000,000.00 by December. Our last quarter was up 102% over the previous quarter. Who said we're in a recession! The food business is good because people must eat! It's a choice over where these days. We have expanded into Southern California and prospects for business are excellent. With 23 million people in the State, we have an excellent market. A small and growing segment of our business is in the marketing and sale of apple juice concentrate. Our producers in the State of Washington are starting to feel the financial impact of imported apple concentrate from Mexico, Argentina, New Zealand, etc. as product is being delivered below the cost of U.S. manufacture! This is a very difficult situation and sensitive, perhaps; like Japanese imports. Personally, I would like to see the U.S. government slap a duty on the imports to protect our domestic producers. Please bring this situation to the attention of the appropriate personnel. If you would like, I would be pleased to speak with them.

On the family side of things, everyone is fine. Both of my boys are continuing with their excellent grades. Jeff just received a 3.6 GPA at Las Lomas H.S. in his Sophomore year and Chris made a 3.8 GPA topped off with Honor Roll and Society. They must have got their brains from their Mother! Jeff is looking towards the Air Force Academy, Stanford, U.S.C. and U.C.L.A. Chris is still too young. If I need a reference for the Academy, can I call upon you?

Carole and I have been married for 20 years this August. Can you believe that? Must be my charm. Ha. Anyway, we have decided to get out of this weather and fly to Hawaii (Maui) in April. It is the only way we will see the sunshine before August, I think. I don't ever remember the winters being this long in California.

In June, Carole and I will be attending a Food Convention in New Orleans; in August we go fishing in Northeastern Washington and in-between I look for business trips to Milwaukee and hopefully, Wilbur Chocolate will have a National Sales meeting. If so, I will plan to travel to Washington to see you. Litz, PA can't be more than a 60 minute flight.

Mike, what are your plans? Do you plan to remain in Washington? I have been reading the press, but you know the press! What are the President's plans? Please let me hear from you when you have time. I know that you are extremely busy also. Again, thanks for making Ken's trip so pleasant.

Kindest personal regards

Sincerely,

Clay White

The portion of the Eagles party that you co-hosted with Congressman Michel at The Ritz Carlton was great fun and Mary and I enjoyed it thoroughly.

It is obvious that if you ever tired of serving your Government as Assistant to the President, you would have a ready-made career playing the piano the way that you do.

All of us were amazed at how you and Bob Michel teamed up so readily and so well.

And speaking of the Government, please accept the thanks of those of us in the Midwest for your outstanding contribution to the United States Government.

Mary Scott joins me in sending warmest regards and best wishes to you and Mrs. Deaver.

I understand the point you make in your letter about the radio broadcast, but simply disagree. The President is reaching approximately 50 million Americans every Saturday. MEMORANDUM FOR: MICHAEL DEEVER
JAMES A. BAKER, III
EDWIN MEESE, III

FROM: Ken Khachigian

I think the President's radio broadcasts, once a useful forum, have turned into a high-profile platform for the President's adversaries. Because I think the President is now being hurt more than helped by these broadcasts, I suggest that they be quietly phased out over the next few weeks.

For many months now, I've been bothered by the fact that no matter what topic the President discusses or how reasonable his tone, his Democratic opponents invariably come back with a tough and vigorous attack on the President and his economic program. The "equal time" given over to the opposition simply grants them a national microphone they could never achieve by themselves.

The counterproductive effects of these broadcasts struck me more fully while listening to top-of-the-hour news coverage of last Saturday's speech. The President's sound bite was followed immediately by an equal one of Congressman Dowdy's harsh criticism.

Here was a Congressman known by almost no one outside his district -- and he was being given stature and credibility equal to the President's. Even though the President's talks are by themselves very effective, they are proving to be sitting ducks for attacks. And in news stories the next day, the President's lead coverage is always followed by sharp rebuttals from the other side, high up in the story. (see enclosed clipping)

While I know the President enjoys these broadcasts, I think you ought to look at them in terms of their effect. And the fact is that the broadcasts are giving opponents visibility they would never otherwise have, making arguments that millions of Americans would never otherwise hear.

The President dominates the news so totally whenever he wants. Why voluntarily share it with his detractors?

Says Recession, Defense Buildup Contributed to Red Ink

Deficits Won't Bar Recovery, Reagan Vows

By WILLIAM J. EATON, Times Staff Writer

WASHINGTON—President Reagan, defining deficit as a "dirty word" that he had hoped to eliminate from the federal budget's vocabulary by now, said Saturday that he would not allow red-ink spending to rise high enough to sabotage recovery from the recession this year.

Reagan discussed the budget outlook in his weekly radio broadcast as he prepared to send Congress an $848.5-billion spending plan with a deficit of $189 billion for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, following a $208-billion deficit for the current fiscal year.

Recovery Program Blamed

The President, who originally had promised to have the federal budget balanced by 1984, blamed a combination of reduced inflation, recession, high interest rates and his defense buildup for the "towering" deficits that have occurred instead.

A Democratic critic, however, blamed Reagan's recovery program, including the three-year tax cut of $750 billion adopted in 1981 at the President's insistence, for creating a crisis in government finance.

"The Democratic Party feels that the best way to reduce the deficit is to put Americans back to work again," Rep. Wayne Dowdy (D-Miss.) said in a nationally broadcast reply to the President's talk. "Unemployment is draining our treasury, as well as our national vitality."

Reagan, although declaring that the long-dormant economy is improving, acknowledged that "much needs to be done for the unemployed," who numbered 12 million in December.

The President said he would seek legislation to extend jobless benefits and provide incentives for employers who hire the long-term unemployed. He gave no details, however.

Democrats and some Republicans in Congress have advocated multibillion-dollar jobs programs that go far beyond what Reagan has supported.

"If we can afford to spend $240 billion for defense, we can afford $5 billion to put Americans back to work and get our economy moving again," Dowdy said.

Reagan, however, defended his decision to raise military spending by $30 billion in his new budget while reducing funds for health care, food stamps, welfare payments and other social programs.

"When peace and freedom are at stake, we cannot afford to gamble," the President said.

In previewing the budget message that will go to Congress on Monday, Reagan said much of the debate will center on the deficit.

"That's a dirty word, which a while back I had hoped might be a thing of the past by now," he said. "But the deficit is going to be large. . . ."

'Bracket Creep' Thwarted

The reduction in inflation, Reagan said, had resulted in lower revenues to the Treasury because taxpayers were not pushed into higher brackets by raises designed to keep them abreast of inflation.

"Lowering inflation has been quite a shock to the system," he said. "Another reason the deficit is so burdensome is because the long recession has temporarily shrunk the number of people paying taxes."

Restoring U.S. military strength, he said, also added to the deficits, along with domestic spending programs that survived Reagan's past cutbacks.

"The result of all this is that deficits have now reached towering levels that cast a pall of uncertainty over the financial markets and threaten to slow and weaken the economic recovery ahead," he said. "Well, I don't intend to let that happen."

Dear Mike:

Without question these recent storms that have battered the Southern California Coast have been the most intense and destructive that I have witnessed in my 45 years on the waterfront.

This series of storms, which are not over yet, have been spawned far out in the Pacific and have hit the Coast at a period when the earth is closest to the sun and moon. Not only were the tides at extreme heights but the storms pushed an additional wall of water ahead of them. This created a "blister" of additional water some 2½'-3' above the normal maximum tides. To say that the resultant surf was vicious is an understatement.

Our own public sportfishing industry has lost the following bases of operation for units of our fleet: Paradise Cove Pier, Malibu Pier, Santa Monica Pier, Redondo Beach fleet Moorings, and Seal Beach Pier. In addition, many homes were lost or heavily damaged.

Governor Deukmejian has declared most of the coastal counties as State disaster areas.

It is imperative that President Reagan do the same from the Federal level in order to allow the damages to be repaired and expedited in an orderly and effective manner. This would include the availability of low-interest, long-term State and Federal financing when qualified.

To this end, we respectfully urge that you take whatever steps are necessary to gain the President's disaster declaration. In

S.F. EXAMINER, Monday, February 14, 1983

"Inside Reports/A Regal Fiasco" -- By Evans And Novak

Republican politicians are concerned that plans for President Reagan to spend a full week in California accompanying Queen Elizabeth II on her Western visit (Feb. 26-March 7) will reopen complaints of a regal Presidency carried on amidst lingering hard economic times.

In contrast, George Deukmejian, the newly-elected governor of California, has refused to attend any more than two events on the British monarch's tour -- one in San Diego and the other in Sacramento -- despite strong urging to the contrary. But Michael Deaver, Deputy WH Chief of Staff who has spent lots of time in California advancing the Royal visit, has refused suggestions that the President follow the Governor's example.

A footnote: The WH was stunned when it saw the guest list for the Queen's dinner in San Francisco and found a profusion of supporters for Democratic Mayor Feinstein to the exclusion of Republican faithful. Surprisingly, the Reagan aide who went to the mat to change things was National Security Adviser William Clark.

The remaining topics of the article dealt with:

- 1) Bloopers by Senator Glenn.
- 2) The prospect that Democrats could gain control of the Senate because of Sen. Baker's retirement and the possible retirement of Sen. Hatfield
- 3) GOP politicians are furious that the WH did not talk a big-gun into running for Sen. Baker's vacant seat.
- 4) Due to a photo request by Ed Harper's secretary, it is rumored he will leave the WH sometime in mid-1983.

-- end --
