Local man, aided Reagan after assassination try, dies

Associated Press

Funeral services will be held Saturday for Alfred Antenucci, a union leader who helped Secret Service agents knock down John W. Hinckley Jr. after President Reagan was shot in 1981.

Antenucci, 71, was the retired president and business manager for Local 1750 of the Carpenters Union. He suffered an apparent heart attack eight days ago at his home and was taken to Marymount Hospital, where he died yesterday.

He was in Washington on March 30, 1981, to attend the National Building Trades Conference at the Washington Hilton Hotel, where Reagan gave a speech.

Antenucci was waiting outside the hotel, hoping to catch a glimpse of the president, when a man directly in front of him began shooting at Reagan.

Antenucci jumped on Hinckley and hit him on the back of the head a split second before Secret Service agents also jumped on the gunman.

Antenucci was hospitalized after that incident with an irregular heartbeat. He later met with Reagan, and a street was named for him in his hometown of Garfield Heights, near Cleveland.

Reagan sent Antenucci a get-well message last Thursday, saying: "Nancy and I want you to know that we are pulling for you. We are very sorry about your hospitalization and we join the many who are remembering you in their thoughts and prayers. Please take care and God bless you. Ronald Reagan."

ALFRED A. ANTENUCCI, age 71, beloved husband of Jo Ann (nee Whitehead), devoted father of Maria Bennett and Dominic A., brother of the late Albert and Edith Chiapetta, beloved grandfather of Jennifer, Alfredino (Dino) and Amanda. Friends are asked to join the family at the Mass of the Resurrection which will be celebrated Saturday, May 12 at St. John's Cathedral, 1007 Superior Ave., at 8:30 a.m. Interment Crown Hill Cemetery. VISITATION FOR FAMILY AND FRIENDS WILL BE AT THE GOLUBSKI-DELIBERATO FUNERAL HOME, CORNER OF GARFIELD BLVD. AND TURNEY RD., THURSDAY AND FRIDAY 2-9 P.M.

Alfred A. Antenucci, subdued Hinckley

Alfred A. Antenucci, the first person to move to subdue John W. Hinckley Jr. after the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan, died yesterday at Marymount Hospital.

Mr. Antenucci, 71, who had no prior history of heart disease, developed an irregular heart beat after the Washington episode, which eventually resulted in his death.

He had been hospitalized since May 1 after losing consciousness at his Garfield Heights home.

Reagan sent Antenucci a get-well message last Thursday, saying: "Nancy and I want you to know that we are pulling for you. We are very sorry about your hospitalization and we join the many who are remembering you in their thoughts and prayers. Please take care and God Bless You. Ronald Reagan."

Mr. Antenucci was born in Cleveland and attended John Adams High School. Upon graduation, he apprenticed as a carpenter, specializing in home construction, rising to foreman on many home construction sites before being elected president and business agent of Carpenters Union, Local 1750, a post he held until his retirement last year.

Mr. Antenucci was in Washington on March 30, 1981, attending the National Building Trades Conference at which Reagan gave a speech.

He said he was waiting outside the convention hotel, hoping for a glimpse of the president, when a man directly in front of him began firing shots at Reagan.

He leaped on Hinckley just before Secret Service agents and police jumped on the deranged gunman.

"It was after that happened that he developed the irregular heart beat and had to be hospitalized," said Eileen Antenucci, his daughter-in-law.

When he and Reagan recovered, Mr. Antenucci met with the president in Chicago. He was honored by Ohio and was named Italian Man of the Year by Cleveland and by Chicago in 1981. A street in Garfield Heights was renamed Antenucci Dr. in his honor.

Mr. Antenucci, long a leading labor figure, served on the election committee for the national AFL-CIO, was a delegate to the Carpenters District Council, served on the Ohio Employment and Unemployment Compensation Commission and was a member of the Building Trades Council of Greater Cleveland.

He was a past vice president of the Boys Town of Italy Commission for the State of Ohio.

An avid golfer, Mr. Antenucci passed his love for the game to his only son, Dominic, who is the head golf professional at the Walden Golf & Tennis Club in Aurora.

"One of the proudest moments of his life was when he won the Scottsdale Academy's pro-am tournament last year in Arizona," his son said.

He said his father was to have been inducted into Cleveland's Italian Sports Hall of Fame during the Memorial Day weekend.

Mr. Antenucci is survived by his wife, the former JoAnn Whitehead; his son, Dominic A.; his daughter, Maria Bennett, and three grandchildren.

Services will be at 8:30 a.m., Saturday, at St. John Cathedral, E. 9th St. and Superior Ave.

MEMORANDUM TO THE PRESIDENT

FROM: MICHAEL K. DEEVER Mike

You asked me to look into the newclip story that LULAC (Hispanics) had invited you to speak to their group and we turned them down.

In fact, they wanted to come in and talk to you about the immigration issue and we properly so, referred them to Justice.

If you have any further questions, I've attached Jim Cicconi's memo.

Let me know if you want to pursue further.

MEMORANDUM FOR MICHAEL K. DEEVER

FROM: JAMES W. CICCONI JWC

SUBJECT: Meeting with LULAC Officials

In my opinion, it would not be productive for the President to meet with LULAC leaders on the immigration issue. ~~Instead~~ I would suggest they be referred to Attorney General Smith, who has been the President's point-man on immigration. There are several reasons for this recommendation:

1. LULAC is trying to assert its primacy among the various Hispanic groups. Since they are one of the most hostile to this President, it is not in our interest to enhance their credibility.

2. While we have had some private discussions with Mario Obledo, he is clearly under the influence of more liberal board members. One example of his dealings with us: Obledo was invited to sit at the President's table during our luncheon for the Hispanic Leadership Conference. He told us he was "uncertain" whether he could make it, and never regretted. We found out later that he had held a press conference, denounced the President, and said he would rather have a hamburger with poor people than lunch at the White House.

3. The immigration issue is one that cuts both ways politically. It is thus better to keep the President distanced from it (as we have done so far).

4. LULAC is entering the immigration debate very late, and they have not been influential with the Hill. For two years, they refused to participate in drawing up legislation, and opposed any balanced proposals that were put forward. Now that Simpson-Mazzoli has passed the Senate, and with O'Neill promising floor action in the House, LULAC has scrambled to get in the game. The result is a proposal which is so costly and ineffectual that it does not even have support of the full Hispanic Caucus on the Hill.

Frankly, any meeting with Hispanics on immigration, whether with LULAC or our own supporters, would develop into an attempt to back the President away from his support of Simpson-Mazzoli. Since he cannot do that, I feel it would be best not to have a meeting on the subject.

GOV. KERRY ON REAGAN RECORD

DOUGLAS, Wyo. (UPI) -- President Reagan is relying on the short memories of the nation's voters to claim success for his administration's programs, Nebraska Gov. Bob Kerrey told Wyoming's state Democratic convention Saturday. Addressing the more than 600 Democrats gathered in Douglas, Kerrey said, if Reagan were a Democrat, impeachment papers would be drawn up against him as a result of the huge spending deficits his budgets have included.

REAGAN HAS FRIENDS, FOES AMONG HISPANICS

(UPI - Analysis) -- Hispanics throughout the United States are divided on Reagan. Some say they are enthralled by the president's communication abilities and admire Reagan for his leadership. Others think he has been a do-nothing president who has led Hispanics through the peaks and valleys of the economy without making any institutional changes to improve the lot of the nation's 18 million Spanish-speaking people.

"The last three years have been years of supreme sacrifice for Hispanics," said Arnold Torres of Washington, D.C., national executive director of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), who has adopted the latter view. Torres, visiting El Paso, Texas to meet with local committees on the upcoming LULAC national convention next month, said Reagan has been invited to address delegates, along with Democratic presidential hopefuls, Mondale, Hart and Jackson. "There is a mentality in the White House that it is good politics to turn down an invitation from groups who are not supporters," he said. "That's wrong. There are many who disagree with Reagan, but he is president of all of us and we want to hear him."

Dear Mike,

Our first and only interview with President Reagan since his inauguration took place in March, 1981, and was limited strictly for use in our book (The Reagan Revolution).

Since then, we asked Dave Gergen on four separate occasions for an interview with the President. Sadly, we failed each time. On the last such occasion (some eight months ago), Dave told us that you had blocked such requests!

But last week we were informed by a White House aide that our requests never were brought up to a scheduling meeting. He added that there was a good possibility that the matter had never even come to your attention.

Considering that possibility, we would like to take this opportunity to renew our request for a routine interview with the President some time before the election. Any consideration you could give to this would be appreciated.

May 23, 1984

Dear Jay:

Thank you for your letter of April 10, 1984 relating to water resources development legislation, the so-called omnibus bills, now pending in the Congress.

We certainly agree that the financing of Federal water projects is of critical importance. The President's policy on this subject was stated in a letter to Senator Paul Laxalt on January 24, 1984. He wrote that we want to emphasize new partnerships in financing, not only with State and local governments but with private sector entities as well. Because of the wide variance among the States and regions in economic and social conditions, flexible measures, not rigid requirements, are essential. That is, the partnership arrangements negotiated between the Federal agencies and the non-Federal entities will be tailored to the specific situation involved while recognizing the desirability of consistency and equity among agencies, projects and purposes. This policy is what we are seeking relative to the House and Senate bills.

Thanks, again, for your comments on this matter.

Mr. Michael Deaver
Deputy Chief of Staff
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mike:

We are still looking for ways to accomplish some mutual objectives in the water policy area. The Omnibus Water Resource Development bill now wending its way through the House and Senate presents an excellent opportunity for cooperative action.

In the House, Rep. Tom Petri is planning to offer a major amendment to the Roe bill, H.R. 3678, to bring cost sharing levels more in line with Army proposals.

In the Senate, Al Simpson has come up with a plan for increasing user fees for inland waterway projects that looks winnable. When offered as an amendment to the Abdnor bill, S. 1739, in the Environmental & Public Works Committee, it lost on an 8 to 8 tie. Senator Simpson is expected to try again on the Senate floor.

The Federation is supporting both these efforts.

For as long as the Federal government has been subsidizing water development in this country, conservationists (and a good many others) have been trying to inject some degree of fiscal responsibility into the system. Since the landmark report of the National Commission in 1973, a major thrust of this reform effort has been to seek greater financial participation from the beneficiaries of the program--the "user pays" principle.

The President's January letter endorses greater levels of cost sharing for new Federal water projects, and directs each agency to seek out the cost sharing arrangements most appropriate for its program. From the earliest days of this Administration, the Department of the Army has strongly supported substantial increases in cost sharing for new Corps of Engineers projects generally, as well as higher user fees for navigation projects. The President has a fleeting opportunity to see this wise economic policy made the law of the land, but it will take his considerable powers of persuasion to convince a reluctant Congress to go along.

Thank you for your recent letter concerning the California delegation to the Republican National Convention.

I have spoken with the appropriate people and have been assured of your standing as an alternate delegate. At this point, it is not clear whether you will serve as an alternate "at-large" or as a representative from your congressional district. Whatever the result, you may be confident that your selection is guaranteed.

Regarding a position with the California campaign, it appears that each state, California included, will have very limited staff. In fact, the California staff numbers only five paid persons including clerical assistance. Further, three of those positions are located in Sacramento.

Again, thanks for bringing the matter to my attention. I'm glad to have been of help.

See you at the convention.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

May 29, 1984

Dear Pete,

In response to your recent comments appearing in the Los Angeles Times, and other papers, concerning your apprehension over what was perceived as a lack of support from the U.S. Government for your attempts to reverse the Soviet boycott of the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles, I would like to bring you up to date on the Federal Government's actions in recent weeks.

As you know, in the latter part of April the Soviet media and Olympic officials spread allegations that the U.S. had "violated" the Olympic Charter and sought to gain political capital out of the Games in Los Angeles. In light of these spurious charges, the State Department instructed our Embassies in Eastern Europe to explain clearly that the U.S. Government welcomes athletes from all countries, that the Olympic Charter would be strictly enforced, and that the U.S. was prepared to take whatever measures would be required to ensure security at the 1984 Games. On May 9, these instructions were reiterated.

On April 27, Ed Derwinski, Counselor of the State Department, met with Soviet Minister-Counselor Isakov to give the Soviet Government official and direct assurances of what we were prepared to do for Soviet visitors, along the lines of my letter to you of March 16, 1984. Several of our proposed actions constituted major exceptions to the procedures normally followed for Soviet nationals -- procedures which are instituted by the U.S. Government in reciprocity for Soviet restrictions on Americans in the USSR.

On May 8, President Reagan met with the International Olympic Committee President Juan Samaranch, and you, reaffirming his commitment to the Olympic Charter. This was further underscored by a letter from the President indicating we would uphold the Olympic ideal and welcome all countries to participate in the Games.

On May 9, the State Department furnished guidance to all its posts overseas to explain our position and enable each of them to respond authoritatively to the Soviet allegations about the Olympics. Similar briefing materials were sent out by USIA at the same time.

On May 12, the State Department cabled its posts again with additional material refuting the various Soviet charges.

On May 14, the State Department took the unusual step of releasing the "non-paper" Ed Derwinski had given to the Soviet Embassy on April 27, in light of the absurd and wholly inaccurate interpretation given that meeting by Marat Gramov and the Soviet media. The same day, the Department formally protested Gramov's remarks to the Soviet Embassy.

You met with George Shultz and me on May 15 and outlined the stand you would be taking in Lausanne at the forthcoming meeting of the IOC. We offered the assistance of two State Department officials, which you later declined.

On May 23, we relayed to our Embassies LAOOC's request for information from eighteen National Olympic Committees with whom your communications had been faulty. At LAOOC's request, we also sent a second message along these lines to an additional thirteen countries. We also authorized our Ambassadors in four key African countries to encourage attendance of their Olympic teams.

Our objective throughout this period has been to give quiet but firm and effective support to your own efforts to encourage or confirm attendance at the Games prior to the June 2 deadline, without intensifying the politicization of the Games caused by the Soviet boycott.

We are encouraged that no country outside the hard core of Soviet allies has so far chosen to stay away from the Games. Moreover, non-bloc press and official comment reported to us has exhibited no signs of reluctance to have their national athletes attend the Games. The State Department is, of course, sharing these assessments with your staff on a continuing basis.

While there is room to be optimistic, I believe there is more that could be done to facilitate a positive response, and I would like to offer some suggestions.

The Supreme Council for Sport in Africa (SCSA) will meet in Upper Volta, June 14-16, to discuss the Olympics and its agenda for the coming year. Sending an American representative to the meeting to explain the arrangements in Los Angeles and generally spread goodwill could be extremely helpful. While this occurs after the June 2 deadline, it is important to remember that the Africans withdrew from the 1976 Olympics while in Montreal. One excellent candidate for this job would be Mayor Tom Bradley, who is both very knowledgeable and very well-respected in Africa.

The number of press accreditations for African journalists has long been a sensitive issue. We understand Nigeria, for example, has received only three accreditations, Ivory Coast one, and VOA's Africa service none. Given the enormous African interest in the Games and the important role of sports in the national life of these countries, we feel that LAOOC would do itself a large favor by indicating a willingness to grant additional accreditations.

We also anticipate that some African or other heads of State or very senior officials will decide to attend the Games only at the last minute. We hope that the Organizing Committee is prepared for such an eventuality and has the flexibility to accom-moderate requests for additional tickets, whether by allocating additional seats to the national committees or by granting more liberal access to Stand G. In this connection, we understand you have granted special tickets to SCSA Secretary-General Lamine Ba. We believe this action will help significantly to promote full African participation.

Lamine Ba also hopes to bring between 100 and 150 African Olympic contenders to Atlanta in July to participate in a pre-Olympic training camp organized by Mayor Andrew Young, with support shared by Mayor Young, the U.S. Information Agency, and Lamine Ba's organization. The training camp has proven extremely popular with African athletes and sports officials. If these numbers (or more) actually show up, there may well be a financial shortfall which the Committee or its corporate sponsors might wish to help cover.

You may also wish to consider a personal appearance on AFNET, a closed circuit satellite television hookup run by the U.S. Information Agency to many African countries. It would be a good means of spreading the word about the Los Angeles Olympics to opinion leaders throughout the continent.

Please continue to let me know if there is any way we can help on these or any other projects to ensure fullest possible participation at the Games. We all continue to have the highest respect for the tremendous job you and the Committee are doing on behalf of a successful 1984 Summer Olympics.

MEMORANDUM FROM
WALTER H. ANNENBERG

May 17, 1984

Dear Dona:

Enclosed you will find the letter from Mrs. John Lovatt regarding Dorothy and Warner Moore.

I am sure you can appreciate how thrilled they would be if they received a message from the President on their 60th wedding anniversary on June 1st.

Cordially,

Walter Annenberg

Enclosure

Dear Mr and Mrs. Cinnerberg,
 As an old friend of the warmer memory
 I am writing you with the hope that you might like to participate in my little plan to give "Henry" and "Hot"
 a special honor and pleasant surprise.
 On June first this year we celebrate my 75th birthday reading anniversary, very special, yes? And I think that something very special is in order - like a greeting from the White House.
 I think that nothing would please
 "Hot" or "Henry" more (no pun intended!)
 Therefore, knowing of your long standing friendship with "Henry" and being one of your connections in Washington

P.S. We met many years ago - 1950
I think, when you and my Father were each awarded an honorary doctorate in the same ceremony by Temple University, Mr. Johnson officiating - small world.

Mrs. John J. Lovatt

I am making this request of you.

I hope that I am not being presumptuous but rather think that you, too, might enjoy thinking of their pleasure, if you would not find it too much trouble to arrange "Congratulations" from the President to Klorothy and Warner Moore on their sixtieth.

I feel sure that that you join the rest of his friends in holding Klinty in very high regard.

I realize that you are very busy people and it would indeed be understandable if things "fall thru the cracks".

I thank you for reading this letter. Anything you could arrange would be most appreciated.

With my thanks - Yours sincerely,
Mary Innes Lovatt

Dear Red:

Thank you for your letter of May 1, 1984 suggesting the possibility of a signing ceremony when the expected wilderness legislation clears Congress.

It now appears the earliest this will happen is mid-summer. I agree that the passage of this legislation will underscore the President's commitment to preserving our natural heritage and, as such, a signing ceremony would be appropriate. We will continue to monitor the progress of this legislation while looking for a possible location for the ceremony.

Thanks, again, for your suggestion on this subject.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Dear Mike:

Congratulations on a highly successful China trip. The coverage back here was superb and the President further strengthened the country's view of him as a statesman with extremely persuasive powers. On the more personal side, I'll bet you are glad you have sea slugs behind you.

The purpose of my writing is to flag for you an opportunity that may prove of benefit to the President. After several years haggling and sniping between the concerns involved, it appears imminent that all competing interests will resolve their differences and join together in both promoting and passing wilderness legislation before Congress recesses this summer. It may even happen quicker than that.

If the issue comes together as expected, no less than two dozen states will actually add millions and millions of acres to their wilderness banks. It's possible that Ronald Reagan will sign into law more acres of wilderness than any President since Teddy Roosevelt.

While there is probably little that can be done in the purely environmental area between now and the election, I think some Presidential involvement in this wilderness area would be a natural for Ronald Reagan. His empathy for conservation and his long-time association with the values held closely by Westerners would seem to position him as one who should champion expeditious passage of this legislation. I would recommend your looking into the Administration position with regard to this legislation and, if it poses no problem, suggest sending early positive signals and then considering an event in a wilderness area for a signing ceremony or some other symbolic gesture in this regard. If done before the end of the school year, it would be a great way to capitalize on everybody's vacation-oriented focus as we look towards the summer.

I will be glad to provide any assistance or background materials if needed and am hopeful this information may be of help. Congratulations again on your successful China trip and best wishes for the upcoming Economic Summit and related trips to Ireland and Normandy.

Warmest regards,
