Dear Sir:

As a teacher of American Government at Sequoia High School, I have become increasingly aware over the past few years that students are unacquainted with their representatives and spokesmen in government. We have concentrated our efforts in helping students understand how the system operates and have forgotten to make the characters real. Thus, the purpose of this letter.

I am attempting to build a permanent collection of pictures of government leaders so students can associate real people with the news stories we study. If it would be possible for you to send us a photograph of yourself, I can guarantee you a position of prestige. Hopefully in the future, government officials will be more than just a name to these future voters.

Thank you so much for your attention to this request. I enclose a mailing address below.

Dear Mr. Miles:

Thank you for your letter. It is always a pleasure to hear from young people who are planning a career of public service.

There are as many paths to a career in politics as there are politicians. Since ours is a government which represents the people, it is important that men and women from all walks of life seek a career in politics. The three fields of interest which you mentioned, law, political science, and public relations, would all provide an excellent background for a career in government.

Whichever of these vocations you choose to pursue, I would advise you always to strive for excellence. The quality of our government depends upon the abilities of those who serve within it. I would also urge you to become involved in your school, at your place of worship, and in your community. For it is often through such activities that one can gain the qualities of leadership and develop the insights needed to truly help others.

I am happy to enclose the photographs which you requested along with me very best wishes for the future.

Dear Michael:

I should start this letter by saying that Steve Parks was adamant in his refusal to devulge your home address. This may be the smartest move he's ever made. I have also authorized him to make any necessary and needed comments to this letter.

Well, down to business. Since you are the highest ranking member of the administration that I know and since I am a career civil servant, it seems only appropriate that I have an 8x10 autographed picture of yourself prominently displayed in my office. Wouldn't that be swell!

In addition I wish to apply for the position of "Anti-Smut Coordinator". (reference the enclosed SF Chronicle article dated March 29). I'm your man.

Reagan Urged to Name Anti-Smut 'Coordinator'

Washington

A group of conservative religious and political leaders urged President Reagan yesterday to step up the government's enforcement effort against illegal pornography and to appoint a White House "coordinator" to oversee it.

The president, in a private 35-minute session with the group, Morality in Media, listened "very" receptively to their complaints that pornography laws are not being enforced adequately, White House aide Morton Blackwell said.

Reagan told the group that his administration has "identified the worst hazardous-waste sites in America — we have to do the same with the worst sources of pornography," according to Blackwell and other participants in the meeting. He made no firm commitment regarding a White House anti-pornography "coordinator," Blackwell said, but promised to give the suggestion "serious consideration."

"The problem is the $6 billion sex industry, which is developing at an alarming rate and at the present time is moving into cable television and the American home, so there is a critical situation here," said the Rev. Morton Hill, national president of Morality in Media.

The group appealed to Reagan for better enforcement by the FBI, Justice Department, Postal Service and Customs Service against illegal pornography.

Among those expressing concern about illegal pornography yesterday were the Most Rev. John Cardinal Krol, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Philadelphia; Ben Armstrong of the National Religious Broadcasters; Wendell Ashton, publisher of the Deseret News in Salt Lake City, and conservative political activists Howard Phillips and Richard Viguerie.

Mike,

I asked Berg to make a few comments ^{on the enclosed} ^ he refused!

Berg got a turkey 2 weeks ago - said it was just luck - he walked right up to it

Hope this note finds you & family in good health

Ref- the enclosed

If you want an early retirement, I suggest you recommend John for the anti-smut job.
I'm sure you remember what a smooth, sweet talkin
guy he is. Maybe Paul Miller, Mike Henfy, Steve Pierce, or Jim Martin could be ^{vice} anti-smut coordinator -

Take care

Steve
