Bud
Dear Mr. McFarlane,

I am sorry we were not able to get together earlier this week but I look forward to having lunch with you on Thursday.

One of the topics I would like to raise with you when we get together is the President's visit to Quebec City in March. In that regard I am enclosing for your information a copy of the text of a letter to Mike Deaver from Mr. Fred Doucet, Prime Minister Mulroney's Senior Advisor. I should explain to you that Mr. Doucet is one of the Prime Minister's top aides and someone to whom the Prime Minister has given overall responsibility for the President's visit. I therefore believe it would be very useful if you could meet with him when he comes down here later this month to review the overall preparations underway for the visit.

Perhaps we could discuss this further when we have lunch.

Best regards,
Allan

*Thank
Dear Alan*

Dear Mr. Deaver:

I am attaching, for your information, a copy of the Canadian Government's discussion paper entitled "How to Secure and Enhance Canadian Access to Export Markets".

In releasing the paper, the Minister of International Trade, the Honourable James Kelleher, indicated that he had three main goals:

- to elicit information, views and perceptions on our principal market access problems and on our own import barriers;
- to consult on ways and means to address these problems effectively and efficiently; and
- to establish, in cooperation with the provinces, a strategy to achieve Canadian market access objectives.

In the part of the paper dealing with trade with the United States, four options are presented in a neutral manner. They are:

- (a) status quo;
- (b) negotiate arrangements on a sectoral or functional basis concerning non-tariff measures;
- (c) negotiate a comprehensive arrangement;
- (d) conclude a framework agreement.

In the policy decisions that lie ahead, the objectives of the Canadian Government will be: to promote increased competitiveness in the domestic market, to secure and improve access for Canadian exporters, and to ensure a positive climate for investment and access to technology.

Please do not hesitate to contact me should you have any questions about the paper.

Yours sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Allan".

Allan Gotlieb
Ambassador.
