1983 - 1983

Dear David:

It is with regret that I accept your resignation as a member of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, effective July 11, 1983.

Your experience and knowledge of international affairs made you a natural choice to serve as an adviser on foreign intelligence matters. The same qualities have prepared you to assume your new post as Ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

I certainly don't need to tell you how important this assignment is. We share with the members of NATO not only a military alliance but also strong bonds of history and common values. Our relationship with our allies in Western Europe is, therefore, of paramount importance to our foreign policy.

I know you will discharge the duties of your new position with the same diligence and professionalism that you have displayed as a member of the Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Please accept my best wishes for every future success and happiness.

Sincerely,

Dear Lord Carrington:

It is with great pleasure that I extend my personal congratulations on your selection as NATO's Secretary General. We are certain that you will provide the dynamic and firm leadership required to ensure that NATO continues to serve as the cornerstone of Western security.

The real meaning of collective defense is often misunderstood today, and we look to you to build an even stronger public commitment within our nations to the fundamental precepts that underpin the Alliance. Let me add my voice to that of George Shultz in reiterating how pleased we are that NATO's direction will continue to enjoy such strong leadership.

We look forward to working closely with you.

With best regards,

Sincerely,

S. Res. 257

In the Senate of the United States,

November 13 (legislative day, November 12), 1985.

Whereas President Ronald Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev will meet at Geneva, Switzerland, on November 19–20, 1985;

Whereas the leaders of the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics have not met for over six years;

Whereas serious dialogue, exchanging the views of the United States and the Soviet Union, is a necessary step in any attempt to narrow the range of disagreements between the two countries and to reduce the possibility of basic misunderstandings which either nation may have concerning the intentions, policies and actions of the other;

Whereas bilateral arms control negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union were resumed in Geneva, on March 12, 1985, on a complex of questions concerning space and nuclear arms, both strategic and intermediate range, a series of proposals and counterproposals for the reduction and control of those arms having been offered by both nations;

Whereas the President has stated that he is “encouraged” by the beginning of “legitimate negotiations” with the Soviet Union at the Geneva arms talks;

Whereas, there is a basic unity of purpose among all Americans that any arms control treaty be verifiable, equitable, lead to increased strategic stability, and be fully complied with by both sides;

Whereas the Senate is deeply concerned that any arms control treaty meet these standards, as well as satisfy the constitutional requirement for the advice and consent of the Senate, concerns reflected in the creation of the Arms Control Observer Group by the Senate leadership in January 1985;

Whereas our NATO allies, Japan, and our other allies and friends, in the pre-summit period, have demonstrated the unity of the Western alliance in support of the American position on arms control;

Whereas Soviet policies and actions with regard to regional matters, such as the continued presence of Soviet combat forces in Afghanistan, and to implementation of internationally-recognized standards of human rights, such as unconscionably harsh restrictions on the right of individuals to freely emigrate, constitute difficult obstacles to a more constructive relationship between the Soviet Union and the United States; and

Whereas a number of other cooperative bilateral matters might productively be pursued if a more constructive basic relationship were to be developed between the United States and the Soviet Union: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate hereby—

(A) commends the President for his initiative to meet with the new Soviet General Secretary in Geneva on November 19–20, 1985;

(B) extends to the President full support, and best wishes for success in his efforts to engage the Soviet leader in a constructive dialogue on the complete range of matters in dispute with the Soviet Union;

(C) views the summit as an important opportunity for possible progress on crucial international and bilateral issues, including arms control; and

(D) encourages the President, in his meetings with the Soviet leader, to (i) pursue a framework for progress on the full range of arms control questions now being negotiated with the Soviet Union; (ii) press for an end to Soviet aggressive behavior in the Third World, particularly the removal of Soviet combat forces from Afghanistan; (iii) emphasize the importance of demonstrable progress in Soviet adherence to internationally-recognized standards of human rights, including each individual's right to freely emigrate; (iv) include, as items on his agenda for discussion, "confidence building measures", such as the proposal for establishment of Nuclear Risk Reduction Centers and resumption of the annual Navy-to-Navy talks pursuant to the Incidents-at-Sea Agreement of 1972; and (v) attempt to make progress on other bilateral matters, such as cooperative environmental, medical, and scientific initiatives as well as cultural and educational exchange programs.

SEC. 2 The Secretary of the Senate shall transmit a copy of this resolution to the President.

Attest:

J. Anne L. Coe
Secretary.

FROM: ED FOX E

SUBJECT: Mrs. Reagan's meeting with Mrs. Gorbachev

The enclosed materials (petitions and books of poetry) were given to me by Congressman Jack Kemp (R-NY). He has asked that I forward them to your office on behalf of Mr. Alexander Ginsburg, organizer of the Third World Congress of Soviet and East European Studies, and the other co-signers of the enclosed petitions.

The Congressman and petitioners are concerned about the imprisonment of Irina Ratushinskaya, a Russian poet who is now serving a seven-year sentence in a Soviet labor camp for alleged political crimes. They are asking that Mrs. Reagan raise this case with Mrs. Gorbachev when they meet in Geneva and present her with one of the enclosed books containing some of Ms. Ratushinskaya's published works. The other book has been inscribed by Mr. Ginsburg for Mrs. Reagan.

In addition, Congressman Kemp has included statements of support for Ms. Ratushinskaya by Congressman James Jeffords (R-VT) and Congresswoman Barbara A. Mikulski.

Update on Honorary Member Irina Ratushinskaya

February, 1985 (revised October, 1985)

Poet, physics teacher, and dissident, Irina Ratushinskaya has been in a Soviet hard labor camp since April, 1983. She has been punished and confined to an unheated cell many times. Her health has deteriorated to the point where there is legitimate concern for her survival.

She was born in Odessa, Ukrainian SSR, on March 4, 1954. Upon receiving a Diploma Degree in physics in 1976, she accepted a position at the Odessa Pedagogical Institute; but in 1979 she married Igor Geraschenko, moved to Kiev, and became active in the human rights movement after she and her husband were several times refused permission to emigrate. Devoting herself increasingly to writing, her output included many lyrical works, but many additionally protested social conditions. A 1984 tri-lingual collection of Ratushinskaya's poetry, by Hermitage, in association with International PEN, displays this range:

Who's fated to know what parting is—
Where tall ships go, the bridge-halves lift.
Who can know just why it is
At night, despair of silence lies
On the white guard of the snowdrift.
Why name love—the world's bereft.
Better there were no name for this. *

And:

Could my country be more despicable?
Shame unmatched when the nighttime falls.
Such a boundless store
Of the lickspittles,
Executioners, holy fools!
How you breed your compliant populace
And so keenly destroy the few
Of your subjects who shun
your bartering,
Sentenced nonetheless to love you! **

Ratushinskaya also participated in "dissident" activities, such as signing a letter in defense of other Soviet dissidents. She and her husband were interrogated on several occasions by the KGB and threatened with criminal prosecution in August, 1981. Five months later they both participated in a demonstration in Moscow in support of Andrei Sakharov, for which they were arrested and sentenced to ten days' imprisonment. As a result they both lost their jobs. On September 17, 1982, Ratushinskaya was again arrested. At her trial six months later the principal charge was "agitation carried on for the purpose of subverting or weakening the Soviet regime," pursuant to Article 62 of the Ukrainian SSR Criminal Code. Cited in evidence against her were the facts that she wrote and circulated poems critical of the Soviet Union.

* translation by Pamela White Hadas and Ilya Nykin

** translation by Susan Layton

Ratushinskaya's trial lasted three days. The court appointed her defender. She was not allowed to substitute an attorney of her choice. She was not allowed to represent herself. She was not allowed to finish her final testimony. Her family and friends were not allowed inside the courtroom. On March 5, 1983 (one day after her 29th birthday) she was sentenced to seven years at hard labor to be followed by five years of internal exile.

She appealed. On April 7 two minor charges were dropped, but the major charges remained: that she had written and circulated several poems. The sentence remained unchanged.

Five days later began the deportation to Barashevo hard labor camp in Mordovia. The conditions there are believed to be harsh, particularly for Ratushinskaya, who has been involved in many protest strikes, along with a dozen other women political prisoners. In August (1983) she went on a three-day hunger strike in protest at being refused a visit from her husband. This particular visit was granted, but other hunger strikes occurred. On September 24 the camp authorities began to force-feed some of the hunger-strikers; while undergoing this, Ratushinskaya suffered a concussion. She has resisted medical treatment and force-feeding in camp, fearing the psychiatric drugs Soviet authorities are known to administer.

Between December, 1983 and February, 1984, Ratushinskaya spent a total of 39 days in an unheated punishment cell (shizo), where she fell ill with pneumonia. Her mother and mother-in-law made the long trip to Mordovia to visit her, but were turned away at the prison. She has been denied visits from her husband for over a year.

Meanwhile her poems have appeared in the original Russian in various western European countries; and in the U.S. translations have appeared in many of the most prominent literary journals: Agni Review, Grand Street, The New Republic, The New York Review of Books, Parnassus: Poetry in Review, The New York Teacher, The Poet News, and River Styx. Her book, Poems, has been distributed to PEN centers in thirty countries around the world (contents in Russian, English, and French). Public readings of her work have been given in New York and Los Angeles and Representative John Porter has made a speech on her behalf on the floor of the U.S. Congress.

Ratushinskaya's kidney disease has loomed ominous since another young prisoner of conscience, Valery Marchenko, recently died of similar ailments. Stepped-up efforts on her behalf have included letters and cables from PEN American Center to Soviet and American officials, a letter to Jesse Jackson asking him to plead for her on any trip he might make to the Soviet Union, and an International PEN resolution this recent November calling upon Soviet authorities to invoke their own law for the remission of the remainder of her sentence.

Article 100 of the RSFSR Penal Code states that a prisoner can be remitted of the remainder of his sentence if too ill to serve it. Letters politely citing this possibility may be sent to:

Statement by Congressman James M. Jeffords

On Behalf of Irina Ratushinskaya

November 1, 1985

I am pleased to know that friends and supporters of Irina Ratushinskaya are gathering here in Washington to listen to her poetry and reiterate their urgent request for her immediate release for a Mordovian corrective labor colony.

As you all well know, Ms. Ratushinskaya has been imprisoned for speaking out verbally and through her poetry for Soviet government adherence to basic principles of human rights and individual freedoms. Her courage and gifted pen have earned her much respect both in the Soviet Union and abroad.

Ms. Ratushinskaya is currently in poor health and yet forced to live in intolerable conditions. She has been denied visits from her husband and food and medicine sent by her friends. I join you in your call to Soviet authorities for compassion and respect for the human dignity of this brave poetess.

IN SUPPORT OF IRINA RATUSHINSKAYA

A poet creates compositions designed to convey a vivid and imaginative sense of experience, characterized by the use of language, chosen for its sound and meaning.

Irina Ratushinskaya is such a poet. She conveyed through her poetry the reality of life in the Soviet Union. For this she was sent to the Soviet Gulag for seven years. Her crime was her determination to express the truth about the society around her. This brave determination must never be forgotten. Her life symbolizes the ongoing struggle for basic human rights in the Soviet Union.

We must raise our voices in defense of Irina Ratushinskaya. We must make it clear to the Soviet Government that we will not rest until her freedom is secured. I strongly support the efforts on behalf of Irina Ratushinskaya.
