TO Bill Martin / BOG Pearson

Attached is Bud's General participation. The only one I would consider recommending that you go back to Bud on is the arrival delegation. Earlier in the week Henkel said Don Regan wanted Thomas included. In my view, this is a fumble; all the delegation does is stand behind some more fops. I suggest we add Thomas (of course with Bud's approval) to the arrival official delegation.

President Reagan's Departure Statement
Andrews Air Force Base - November 16, 1985

Thank you for coming out to see us off on our mission to Geneva.

When I spoke to the Nation on Thursday, I said that I leave for my meeting with Mr. Gorbachev with peace and freedom on my mind. These are the goals to which all Americans -- and the peoples of the Soviet Union themselves -- subscribe. They will be my guiding star in Geneva and beyond.

Despite deep differences I believe it is possible for the United States and the Soviet Union to build more productive relations. I have no illusions that we will be able to resolve all or even most of our differences in a short set of meetings in Geneva. But we must make a start. General Secretary Gorbachev and I should aim to develop a specific work program on a range of issues that affect peace and freedom in the world -- arms control, regional conflicts, human rights, and people-to-people contacts.

We intend to give the Geneva meeting our best shot. We will be firm in defending our interests. We will leave no stone unturned in our search for peace and freedom. Above all, we will be patient. With your prayers and support I am sure we will succeed. Thank you very much and God bless you all.

President Reagan's Arrival Statement

Geneva

November 18, 1985

President Furgler, may I extend to you and the Swiss people my deep appreciation for helping make possible these meetings between the United States and the Soviet Union. Nancy and I are delighted to be here and we thank you for your warm hospitality.

It is fitting that this meeting should take place on Swiss soil. Switzerland has been a leader in the search for international peace and has generously provided her territory for international conferences and organizations and her services for the arbitration and mediation of disputes. The United States and Switzerland share the values of a common Western heritage -- a commitment to democracy, freedom of the individual, human rights, national independence and the peaceful resolution of disputes.

Thirty years ago, President Eisenhower met with Soviet leaders here. The cordial atmosphere of that meeting gave rise to the "Spirit of Geneva." Today we know that the world needs more from us than smiles and spirit.

I believe that U.S.-Soviet relations need the "fresh start" that I called for recently before the United Nations General Assembly. We need a true give-and-take discussion about peace in all its aspects -- about security and arms control, about regional conflicts, about human rights and free contacts between peoples.

Our differences on the matters are very deep. Mr. Gorbachev and I will not overcome them in a few days.

But I hope we can make a start. I am ready to get down to work.

Thank you.

C

President's Dinner Toast

(First Night)

Mr. General Secretary, Mr. Foreign Minister, Honored Guests:

For the entire U.S. delegation let me say how pleased we are to be here in Geneva with you. We have been looking forward to this meeting, and believe we have an unusual opportunity to advance the U.S.-Soviet relationship. No other relationship between countries has such immense importance for world peace as our own. So let us seize the chance to chart a peaceful and more cooperative course for the future.

Mr. General Secretary, as I told you today, we have come ready for practical and forward-looking steps in all areas of the U.S.-Soviet agenda. In the area of arms control, I believe the strategic relationship between our two countries must provide security, stability and confidence for both sides. Can we not turn away from the threat of mass death and destruction? America seeks no unilateral advantage, but a sustainable balance of peace. The proposals I have brought to Geneva reflect our commitment to this goal.

Controlling and reducing the weapons we possess will not, of course, resolve our fundamental political differences. And in the long run keeping the peace does not depend only on weapons, or on how our governments get along with each other. It depends on how we treat other nations, on how we treat our own peoples, and on free contacts that allow them to know and understand each other. A leader responsible for progress of this kind would truly earn the title, peacemaker.

Mr. General Secretary, the U.S.-Soviet relationship falls short of what we would like it to be. Forty years ago our peoples celebrated the end to the most terrible war in human history. On May 8 in Times Square and on May 9 on Red Square, our peoples expressed their joy in victory and hope for a better world. The world of the past forty years has not been all that we hoped. Let us now fulfill the dreams expressed then.

Mr. General Secretary, honored guests, please join me in a toast to a better world of peace and freedom.

President's Dinner Toast

(Second Night)

Mr. General Secretary, Mr. Foreign Minister, Mr. Secretary, Honored Guests.

For two days we have been engaged in intensive discussions. We have considered some of the most vital problems facing the world today -- above all, on the need for peace and freedom. On some we have made progress. On others we have identified work for the future. We have certainly made our staffs fulfill and over-fulfill their work plans.

Mr. General Secretary, in the United States we believe that there is nothing beyond the capacity of the human race to accomplish. Our peoples can better their own and others' lives if they only have the chance to live in peace and in freedom. But they look to us because history has placed in our hands means of destruction so terrible, so awesome, that their use could endanger the existence of all humanity.

The awesome power of modern weapons makes us answerable not only to our own, but to all peoples. Old dogmas and formulas cannot help us. Stirring up suspicion and passion cannot help us. We must look beyond narrow interests and issues of the moment and consider deeper, truer matters. If our discussions have helped this process, then I shall return to my country satisfied.

Mr. General Secretary, American presidents have met with the leaders of your country on many occasions -- in alliance against a common enemy, and, less happily, in times of mistrust and bitterness. Every meeting has stirred hopes among the peoples of the world that we will have the wisdom and courage to build a strong foundation for peace.

It is difficult to move toward this goal in two short days. But our talks have been a step toward building a firmer, more durable relationship, and thus I would consider them successful.

Here in Geneva we have planted the seeds of hope in the future. The part of our work that begins tomorrow, when we leave Geneva, is as important as what we have achieved over the past two days. It is our job, and that of our associates, to ensure that these seeds grow and flourish, that and no opportunity for progress is lost. [Specifics to be provided.]

Mr. General Secretary, our nations have no greater treasure than our peoples. They have the most to gain if we have done our work well. It is fitting then to conclude this meal by joining in a toast to the Soviet and American peoples, those living and those yet unborn. May they live in peace and freedom.
