NOTE FOR FRITZ ERMARTH
BOB DEAN

FROM: ERIC MELBY

At this afternoon's JCC preparatory meeting, the Soviets distributed the two attached papers. One deals with amending the 1974 long-term agreement on economic, industrial and technical cooperation and the other is a Soviet draft of the joint statement to be issued upon the conclusion of the JCC meeting in Moscow. I would appreciate your comments ASAP as we will have to give our initial reaction when the preparatory session resumes tomorrow morning. Thank you.

Joint Statement

on further development of the US - USSR trade
and economic relations

At the end of the X US - USSR Joint Commercial Commission meeting held by instruction of General Secretary M. Gorbachev and President R. Reagan in order to develop concrete proposals for the expansion of soviet-american trade and economic relations the following statement was issued by the USSR Minister of Foreign Economic Relations and U.S. Secretary of Commerce.

Both sides believe that the new situation developing now in soviet-american relations opens favourable possibilities for their trade and economic cooperation which currently <sup>do</sup> not correspond to the existing potentials of the two countries. Acknowledging that the trade and economic ties are a necessary element in strengthening bilateral soviet-american relations, both sides stressed that the development of this element should not be left behind of the development of US - USSR relations in general. Also they pointed out once again the economic benefits of mutual trade.

Both agree that currently there are considerable opportunities to increase mutual trade and economic cooperation. They pointed out that economic reforms, including those in foreign economic activities, now under way in the Soviet Union, create the conditions for establishing more profound, based on modern forms cooperation between soviet organizations and american companies, which actually had already started. In this connection both sides on behalf of their Governments expressed their support to efforts aimed at expanding trade and economic cooperation, including by establishing joint ventures, consortiums and industrial cooperation. Attaching great importance to new forms which could play a role in the further development of trade and economic ties both sides stated that there are considerable reserves in developing traditional trade with raw materials, agricultural products, chemicals and other commodities, finished products as well as many types of equipment and technology. Special efforts are to be devoted to streamline the structure of mutual trade, to increase the share of value-added products. The expansion of trade and economic relations also suppose they are of a stable, long-term and balanced nature.

Both agree that the realization of the presenting prerequisites and possibilities would require further actions from both sides aimed at creating appropriate conditions for development of mutual trade and economic relations, based on principles of equality, non - interference in the internal affairs, mutual benefit and sanctity of obligations. Both sides recognize that in accordance with the laws and regulations existing in each country the steps are to be undertaken to facilitate and stimulate exchange by commodities and services, to remove existing and to prevent new barriers and obstacles. They also stressed the importance of bi-lateral understandings and agreements on different matters of mutual trade, which are considered to be a tool for settling problems and, taken as a complex, as means of strengthening the whole infrastructure of trade and economic ties.

Both sides noted that recently some real steps were made, filling with concrete content their aspiration to expand mutually beneficial trade and economic relations. (Further some of these steps are to be numbered, including quantity of Letters of Intent and signed agreements on Joint Ventures, as well as the creation of soviet and american trade consortiums).

To facilitate the cooperation based on some new forms, including joint ventures and industrial cooperation, the sides have reached an understanding on expediency of corresponding extension of the Long - Term Agreement Between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America To Facilitate Economic, Industrial and Technical Cooperation of June 29, 1974. An arrangement has been reached to create a group of experts to study a problem of mutual guarantees of investments.

It was recognized to be expedient to expand Terms of Reference of Joint Intergovernmental US - USSR Commercial Commission, in particular by charging it with monitoring of the implementation of the said Agreement. Both sides also agree to create working groups on cooperation in various branches within the framework of the Joint Commission.

Both sides stated that in accordance with their desire to go further in expansion of mutually beneficial trade and economic relations they also undertake some other steps to facilitate these relations. They have also expressed their desire to settle in the spirit of good will other questions with the aim to facilitate mutual commercial activities.

P R O T O C O L

on the Expansion of the Long-Term Agreement Between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America To Facilitate Economic, Industrial and Technical Cooperation of June 29, 1974

The Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the Government of the United States of America expressing desire to promote development of mutually beneficial trade and economic ties between both countries on a stable, long-term basis and to expand their forms,

acknowledging the importance of development of mutually beneficial trade and economic relations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America for promotion of atmosphere of understanding and cooperation between the two countries.

guided by the Basic Principles of relations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America of May 29, 1972 and other relevant agreements between them, noting the positive influence of the Long-Term Agreement Between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America To Facilitate Economic, Industrial and Technical Cooperation of June 29, 1974 on trade relations between the U.S.S.R and the U.S.A.

have decided to expand the said Long-Term Agreement and for this purpose have agreed as follows:

Article I.

Both Sides confirm their willingness to facilitate the development of all forms of economic, industrial and technical cooperation between relevant enterprises, firms, <sup>other organization</sup> consortiums and of their countries on a stable, long-term basis identifying and using for these purposes new opportunities.

Article II.

Both Sides will encourage the development of long-standing business relations between enterprises, firms, and other organizations and consortiums of their countries based on the forms of cooperation, mentioned in the Long-Term Agreement Between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America To Facilitate Economic, Industrial and Technical Cooperation of June 29, 1974, as well as on the basis of new forms of cooperation, including the establishment by Soviet organizations and American firms of joint ventures and industrial cooperation.

Article III

Functions of the working group shall also include the preparation of regular sessions of the said intergovernmental Commission on trade and economic cooperation.
