An Historic Meeting

When 39 public policy institutions from 18 democratic nations attended the international conference on "Basic Freedoms in the Western Hemisphere" in Costa Rica in February, 1985, they made history: It was the first hemispheric meeting of public policy organizations and individuals ever held in Latin America.

The representatives of leading "think tanks" in South America, Central America, the Caribbean and the United States came together to discuss major problems facing the Western hemisphere and to explore ways of working more closely in the future. Funding for the conference came from the National Republican Institute for International Affairs, the United States Information Agency and private foundations and individuals in the United States.

Conference Goal

In the conference call, The Center for International Relations stated as an objective: The creation of an informal network of like-minded institutions committed to individual freedom, limited government, a free market and a common defense against totalitarianism.

This conference goal was realized through the unanimous adoption by participants of a resolution agreeing to "communicate with each other and work together for the promotion of freedom in the Americas."

Other highlights of the three day meeting included:

- Addresses by Gonzalo Facio of Costa Rica, Faith Ryan Whittlesey of the United States, Alvaro Alsogaray of Argentina, and J. William Middendorf of the United States.
- A personal message of congratulations to the conferees from President Reagan.

- Panel discussions on free enterprise and free elections in Latin America as well as organizational/-communications techniques of public policy groups.

In summing up the conference, Lee Edwards, president of The Center for International Relations, declared: "We believe that at this critical time in the history of the Western hemisphere, cooperation between like-minded public policy institutions is not merely useful—it is essential."

The San Jose Declaration

We, the participating organizations attending the first Latin American/Caribbean meeting of the Center for International Relations on Basic Freedoms in the Western Hemisphere, herewith agree and subscribe to the following principles of agreement:

- 1) We will communicate with each other and work together for the promotion of freedom in the Americas.
- 2) We reaffirm the truth that individual freedom, the free market, prosperity, and free political institutions are all mutually interdependent and cannot exist one without the other.
- 3) The future of freedom in the Western Hemisphere is dependent upon the freeing of human initiative and endeavor from the destructive burdens of growing state intervention.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

February 19, 1985

Dear Lee:

I am pleased to extend my warm regards to you, and the other distinguished participants in your international conference, "Basic Freedoms in the Western Hemisphere."

In the prophetic words of Richard Weaver, "Ideas have consequences." Today, in nation after nation throughout the free world, the research and analysis of public policy institutions like yours have helped to strengthen basic democratic institutions and economic freedom. I am certain that your deliberations in San Jose this weekend will give further assistance to the people of this hemisphere in reaping the rich harvest of democracy and free enterprise.

Nancy joins me in sending our best wishes for a successful meeting.

Sincerely,

Ronald Reagan

The Center for International Relations, in cooperation with the Heritage Foundation, is organizing a conference on Latin America entitled, "Educating for Freedom and Democracy in The Americas." The Conference will take place October 8-11, 1986, in Washington D.C., at the Washington Marriott Hotel.

The two-fold purpose of the conference is (1) to examine the role of private enterprise, the university, government, and public policy institutions in promoting freedom and democracy in the Americas, and (2) to develop stronger relationships among like-minded public policy institutions in Latin America.

Distinguished individuals invited to address the Washington Conference include United States Vice President George Bush, President Leon Febres Cordero of Ecuador, Hon. Richard McCormack, US Ambassador to the Organization of American States, and the Hon. Gonzalo Facio of Costa Rica.

Other Latin American participants will include Oscar Godoy Arcaya of Chile, Hon. Alvaro Alsogaray of Argentina, and Manuel Ayau of Guatemala. Other US participants invited will include, Senator Richard Lugar, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Rep. Dante Fascell, Chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee, and Dr. Edwin Feulner, President of the Heritage Foundation.

This is the first time that such a broad-based meeting of public policy experts from this hemisphere has ever been held in Washington D.C.

PROGRAMS OF THE ENDOWMENT
AND ITS INSTITUTES IN NICARAGUA

CENTER FOR INTERNATIONAL PRIVATE ENTERPRISE, to undertake a comprehensive survey and analysis of current economic and political forces in Nicaragua and their impact on the private business sector as represented by the informal economy.

FY 1984 - $ 45,000

The DELPHI RESEARCH ASSOCIATES, to promote a freer flow of information in Nicaragua by assisting the newspaper La Prensa in obtaining the printing supplies, news services and features, and spare parts required for its continued publication and to purchase a computer for accounting and a wire-photo receiver. Since the close of La Prensa by the Sandinista government on June 26, 1986, consultations have been underway as to how the obligated funds can still be used effectively to promote a freer flow of information in Nicaragua.

FY 1986 - $103,500

FREE TRADE UNION INSTITUTE, to support the two remaining democratic Nicaraguan trade union federations resisting government control and repression. Despite constant government harassment, the Confederation of Trade Union Unity (CUS) and the Nicaraguan Workers' Central (CTN) continue to promote peaceful democratic change. Assistance to the CUS has supported organizing and publication activities as well as membership services.

FY 1984 - $ 79,174

FY 1985 - $156,000

FRIENDS OF THE DEMOCRATIC CENTER IN CENTRAL AMERICA (PRODEMCA), to assist in the establishment of a private nonpartisan center associated with the main organizations of the democratic civic opposition devoted to the study and discussion of democratic ideas and their potential application in Nicaragua. In light of the heightened restrictions on civil liberties imposed by the Sandinista government, discussions are underway to explore alternative means of carrying out the original goals of the project. Funds were also granted to assist in translating, publishing and distributing documents of the Comision Permanente de Derechos Humanos (CPDH) concerning the human rights situation in Nicaragua.

FY 1985 - $200,000

FRIENDS OF THE DEMOCRATIC CENTER IN CENTRAL AMERICA (PRODEMCA), to administer two grants providing essential supplies to La Prensa. The purchase of these supplies was crucial to La Prensa's continued existence as a force for democracy in Nicaragua.

FY 1985 - $100,000
FY 1986 - $ 51,500

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN INSTITUTE FOR INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS (NRIIA), to develop civic education projects with the Instituto Conservador of Nicaragua. NRIIA is also providing assistance to the Fundacion General Jose Dolores Estrada, an institute affiliated with the Conservative Party, for a technical and civic education program.

FY 1986 - $ 85,500
