INTERVIEW WITH TONY BROWN FOR PBS PROGRAM

DATE: Thursday, January 21, 1982
LOCATION: The Library
TIME: 3:00 p.m. (30 minutes)
FROM: Karna Smalko KS

I. PURPOSE:

To grant an interview to Tony Brown, an influential black journalist who has been very supportive of the Administration. "Tony Brown's Journal" has appeared in TV markets for 14 years - first on PBS, then for four years on commercial stations; now he is back on PBS with a new series. This program will be the second of the season - it will air on Saturday, February 13 at 8:00 p.m. in more than 200 cities. (In New York City alone, it is on 5 stations with several repeats). Mr. Brown maintains that he is "interested in helping the President communicate his plans for black Americans."

II. BACKGROUND:

Tony Brown came in to meet the President along with a dozen other black journalists in November. He had a photo taken with the President and then was briefed by Ed Meese and the Attorney General on the Voting Rights Act, plus other issues. Subsequently he wrote columns very favorable to the Administration. This particular program will air two weeks after the State of the Union address and we have an agreement that the interview will be embargoed until after the speech. (After the State of the Union, they may use a few lines from the interview for promotional purposes).

III. PARTICIPANTS:

The President
Tony Brown
TV crew plus necessary White House staff

IV. PRESS PLAN:

White House Photographer

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS:

You will enter the Library at 3:00 p.m.; the interview should last 30 minutes. (The actual program length that will air is 28:46 min., so very little will be edited)

VI. REMARKS:

Summaries of expected questions and suggested responses are attached - TAB A

MEMORANDUM

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

ANTICIPATED QUESTION AREAS IN INTERVIEW WITH TONY BROWN:

Q. You've been criticized for your lack of appointments of blacks in your administration - why are you avoiding us?

A. First, my record as Governor of California speaks for itself: I appointed more blacks to positions than any previous Governor.

But now, we are building a good record here. So far we have made 135 appointments of top quality blacks to this Administration. This includes 25 that require Senate confirmation. The others are in senior policy jobs as well as confidential "Schedule C" positions.

We have six blacks holding major policy positions either on the White House staff or the staff of the Vice President.

By the way, there are five new Presidential appointments pending FBI clearance.

Q. The unemployment rate is way up, especially among black Americans and black teenagers. What can you say to the black who can't get a job?

A. I'm extremely sympathetic and acutely aware of the unemployment situation. But most economists, in or out of government, are predicting a turn-around by about mid-year-- and over the long-term our program is designed to create well over 10-million new jobs by 1987. History shows that in a growing economy, which we are endeavoring to develop, lower income groups fare relatively better than any other group when it comes to job creation.

Q. There's been alot of publicity about budget cuts for social programs - this has led to a perception that this is a racist administration.

A. On spending for social programs - we are NOT cutting spending for these programs, we are trying to cut the rate of growth here. Let me give you some examples of the growth of these programs:

--In 1950 - they cost 14 billion dollars

--In 1980 - they cost 300 billion dollars - an increase of 2100%

--In that same time, inflation was up 215% - thus program growth was 8 times the growth in the rate of inflation.

Social programs continued:

- The budget just for the Department of Health & Human Services is 50 billion dollars greater this year than the budget for defense.
- The budget for HHS increased some 22 billion dollars in 1982 over 1981
- While I don't want to get into specific numbers for specific programs, I can assure you that the budget for social programs will be higher in 1983 than it was in 1982.
- We want to target that money on the truly needy - not subsidize middle and high income people. My advisers at HHS tell me that in some states you could earn as much as $29,000 and still qualify for some social programs!
- On one specific program - I rejected some advice I received to cut back on the Headstart program and in fact I have proposed the highest level of funding ever for this important program.
- While we are trying to slow the growth of the food stamp program (growth of 2000% in the last decade) - 21 million people still receive food stamps.

So you see, the charge that we have abandoned basic commitments is simply not true.

(One interesting note here is that the budget of HHS is the third largest entity in the world - after the budgets of the United States and the U.S.S.R.)

Other positive points to make on black issues:

- We are supporting a strong Voting Rights Bill - an extension of 10 years.
- While we are cutting a number of programs in the Department of Education, I have increased the funding for black colleges by some 4-million dollars in 1982...and we will continue to increase our support for black colleges in 1983.
- I have proposed legislation that will, for the first time, give the Sec. of the Treasury and the IRS express authority to deny tax-exempt status to private, non-profit educational organizations with racially discriminatory policies.

Q. How are you dealing with South Africa?

A. Our main objectives in Southern Africa include an internationally acceptable agreement on Namibian independence, movement by the South African Government away from apartheid, and elimination of the Cuban troop presence in Angola.

Apartheid is morally repugnant. The South African government is well aware of our position. The U.S. fully adheres to the U.N. arms embargo and seeks to foster, among all South Africans, black and white, a climate for constructive, peaceful change.

We cannot achieve Namibian independence without the full cooperation of all governments involved and clearly South Africa is one of those. Constructive dealings with that government and active discussions with allies brought Namibian talks back to life last year and have made an independence agreement possible this year. It would greatly improve the climate for peace in that area.

Q. What about your relations with other African countries?

A. The U.S. is a large contributor to the US African Refugee Program and is the largest contributor to the Zimbabwe investment program.

We have made clear to African leaders (including Shagari of Nigeria, Moi of Kenya, Numeiry of the Sudan and Mobutu of Zaire) as well as other leaders of less developed countries, our firm commitment to help their economies, particularly through trade and investment, but also through various aid programs.

Other areas of questioning that could come up in this general discussion could center on such economic observations as:

--Arthur Laffer has suggested that you make all the tax cuts retroactive to January 1 of 1982.

--Laffer also wants to return to the gold standard and also restore some of the funds cut from social programs, saying that you don't solve deficits by cutting food stamps for people out of a job...you only make these kinds of cuts in a growth economy, not now.

(Tony Brown read a recent article in which Laffer made these comments and he's likely to bring it up)

--Will blacks be caught in a power struggle as power shifts from federal government to states and cities? (Your new federalism ideas).

--What can blacks do for themselves?

All of the above are more philosophical of course and would be handled in a conversational manner.

January 21, 1982

RELATIONS WITH AFRICA

Q: Isn't it a fact that relations with Black Africa have been on the back burner in your Administration?

A: Not at all. We have been engaged on a daily basis since I took office on the resolution of the Namibian and Southern Africa problems. In my first year, I personally met with seven African heads of government including President Moi of Kenya, who is Chairman of the Organization of African Unity. The Vice President has met several other African leaders. I have personally exchanged correspondence with a number of African leaders on problems of mutual concern. Our opposition to Libyan aggression in Africa - in Chad and Sudan - was public and prompt, as is our continuing support to the African Peace Keeping Force in Chad. I have personally approved extraordinary funds to support Sudan, Liberia, and the Chad Peace Keeping Force. I recently dispatched a high-level trade and investment mission headed by Secretaries Block and Baldrige to four African countries to increase not only official contact on economic matters but also private investment - on that delegation were 26 chief executive officers of US companies.

PEACE IN SOUTHERN AFRICA: NAMIBIA AND ANGOLA

Q: What is your view of prospects for peace in southern Africa, as opposed to its becoming an even more virulent arena of confrontation between the US and the Soviet Union?

A: -- We have been involved over the past nine months in an intensive diplomatic effort to improve prospects for long-term peace and security in southern Africa.

-- With our Western Contact Group allies, we have been seeking an internationally acceptable independence for the territory of Namibia. This effort has involved close negotiations with the South African Government, the African Front Line states, and a range of Namibian political elements. We met most recently with the South Africans in London January 13-14 to seek to complete the first^{phase} of the Namibia settlement process and begin work on the next phase.

-- We believe that resolution of the conflict in Angola is an issue related both to achieving Namibian independence and to improving prospects for long-term peace in this troubled part of the world.

-- To that end, we met in Paris January 15-16 with senior officials of the Angolan Government to seek to address ourselves together to bilateral and regional issues of common interest.

-- Commensurate with the priority that we are attaching to the effort to achieve peace in southern Africa, our officials will continue to pursue a very active program of negotiations with the involved parties. We will meet next in Bonn with the Western Contact Group January 25-26.

SOUTH AFRICA

Q: What is your view of South Africa's racial policy of apartheid?

A: -- As I have said before, like other Americans I find South Africa's system of institutionalized, legal racism repugnant and completely at odds with our own fundamental American principles regarding race, equal rights, and equal opportunity.

Q: Why do you call South Africa an ally when you reject its apartheid policy as abhorrent?

A. --South African volunteers of all races fought on the side of the Allies both in World War II and in the Korean conflict. As a friendly nation that we consider close to the West, we will not turn away from South Africa, particularly at a time when it is moving itself to deal with this illness of racism that has so afflicted it over the years. It is our desire to work with South Africans seeking change, both in terms of regional security in Namibia and within South Africa itself, that serves as the basis for our policy of constructive engagement with that country.

Q: What are we doing to help blacks in South Africa?

A: -- Working with South Africans who seek peaceful, evolutionary change there is at the core of our policy of constructive engagement. We believe that that change will benefit South Africans of all races in the long run. We believe that the leadership of that country is dedicated to bringing about change as part of their vision of the country's future. In the more immediate sense, we are starting with a program of educational assistance to disadvantaged South Africans to try to help remedy the damage caused over the years by separate and unequal education. As part of that program, the Congress has earmarked $8 million over the next two years for a scholarship program with that purpose.*

Q: You took certain actions against Poland, including trade sanctions, in response to the imposition of martial law and the crackdown against Solidarity. Why do you oppose trade sanctions against South Africa where there is a permanent crackdown against blacks who are denied citizenship?

A: -- In my mind, it is a question of effectiveness and the appropriateness of particular measures in particular cases.

-- The Polish economy is much more vulnerable to trade sanctions than is South Africa's economy. There is also the question of increasing the cost of the crackdown for the Soviets.

*We continue to recommend to U.S. companies in South Africa voluntary acceptance of the "Sullivan Code" (devised by the Reverend Leon Sullivan of Philadelphia) of fair employment practices.

- 3-

-- The United States does, in fact, maintain some restrictions on trade with South Africa.

-- We imposed an arms embargo in 1961, sixteen years before the mandatory UN arms embargo was established in 1977. We will also not support trade that furthers South Africa's apartheid policy.

-- The question is where do we go from here in our effort to move South Africa away from apartheid? I do not believe that a broadening of trade limitations in this case would have any positive effect whatsoever and could even damage those whom we would like to help. By contrast, I believe that close work with South Africa can help them move forward toward resolution of their problems.

What about the US position on concern for the poorer countries of Africa? Cancun, Zimbabwe, and the FY82 foreign aid bill?

As I mentioned in addresses prior to and during the Cancun conference, the United States recognizes the needs of the poorer countries of the world-particularly those in Africa - for continued development aid. The US has an excellent record of assisting the poorer countries and intends to continue to do so. I would note that this Administration was able to obtain passage of the first foreign assistance bill in three years. In spite of the constraints on the overall budget, this bill contains a modest increase in development assistance to the low income countries of Africa from last year's level of $300 million. When food assistance and economic supporting assistance are added to the total, US economic aid to Africa will increase moderately this year over the approximately $600 million provided in FY81. This also does not take account of our substantial contributions to the World Bank and other international development institutions which are extremely active in assisting the poorer countries in Africa and elsewhere.

We also need to recognize that foreign assistance can only supplement the efforts of the developing countries themselves in achieving economic progress. In this regard, we believe it is essential that the productive elements which exist in each country - those outside the government - be given the freedom to make their full contribution to economic growth.

Another essential ingredient to worldwide development is an international economic environment in which the lower income countries are able to participate fully thru trade and investments. We are working to improve this environment.

In regard to Zimbabwe, the United States has pledged to provide $75 million over each of the next three years to help this key African country recover from many years of war and to marshal the considerable economic potential ~~to~~ which the country possesses.

The role of private sector investment is vital in Africa and elsewhere. This played a major part in the recent trade and investment mission I recently sent to four African countries, which was led by Secretaries Block and Baldrige.

Suggested Talking Points for Meeting with the Commission on Fiscal Accountability of the Nation's Energy Resources and Secretary James Watt
Thursday, January 21, 1982, 5 p.m.
The Oval Office

--First of all I would like to thank you for your report this afternoon.

--At a time when this nation is faced with serious difficulty both in meeting its energy needs and in restoring stability to the economy, negligence in collecting royalty payments cannot be tolerated.

--Like Secretary Watt, I was shocked to discover the extent of the problems associated with the Department of Interior's program for reporting, collecting, and auditing the payment of these fees which are rightfully due the Federal Government and the American people.

--Hundreds of millions of dollars are being lost by the Federal Government, the states, and Indian tribes because we have not been diligent enough in the past.

--This is the kind of fraud and waste that I am determined to stop through sound management.

--Mr. Linowes, I want to thank you and the other members of the Commission for your thorough and prompt analysis of this problem.

--Secretary Watt, I applaud your decision to take immediate action to make all the changes necessary to restore good management to this program.

--You have my support and, more than that, you have a responsibility to the people to see that integrity is restored to this important program and payments due the government are made.
