MEETING WITH MAYOR MARGARET HANCE

DATE: THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1982
TIME: ~~2:15 - 2:25~~ p.m. 10 45 - 11:55
LOCATION: OVAL OFFICE

FROM: RICHARD S. WILLIAMSON

I. PURPOSE

This is an opportunity for you to ask Mayor Margaret Hance (R-Phoenix) to "take the lead" in garnering support among the nation's Mayors for your federalism initiative. She has been a strong and constant supporter for your programs.

II. BACKGROUND

Mayor Hance is President of the National Conference of Republican Mayors and is a member of the Presidential Advisory Committee on Federalism as well as the Advisory Committee on Intergovernmental Relations. She is highly respected by her colleagues and can mobilize other Mayors and city officials to provide valuable support for your federalism initiative.

Mayor Hance is in Washington, D.C., for the Mid-Winter meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors (USCM). While USCM is non-partisan, it is largely represented by big-city Democratic Mayors who will be critical of your proposal.

Your most recent meeting with Mayor Hance was on Thursday, January 21st at the meeting on enterprise zones and the luncheon on the city of Baltimore.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: FDR 100th ANNIVERSARY LUNCHEON
JANUARY 28, 1982

It is a pleasure to greet such a distinguished company in the White House on this very special occasion. For most of you, I know, this is a return visit, the most recent of many. Each of your lives was intertwined with one of the most famous residents of this House -- you, too, are a part of its history. So, as the latest tenants in the people's house, Nancy and I welcome you back.

We are all here today to mark the centennial of one of history's truly monumental figures, Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Historians still debate the details of his intentions, his policies and their impact. But all agree that, like the Founding Fathers before him, FDR was an American giant -- a leader who shaped, inspired and led our people through perilous times.

In a way, it is a high compliment to his brilliance as a leader that he meant so many different things to so many different people -- that he could reach out to men and women of diverse races and backgrounds and inspire them with new hope and new confidence in war and peace.

He certainly inspired me. Franklin Roosevelt was the first President I ever saw. I remember the moment vividly. It was in 1936, a campaign parade in Des Moines, Iowa. What a wave of affection and pride swept through that crowd as Franklin Roosevelt passed by in an open car, the familiar smile on his lips, jaunty and confident, drawing from us reservoirs of confidence and enthusiasm some of us had forgotten we had during those hard times.

Maybe that was FDR's greatest gift to us. He really did convince a troubled, hard-hit people that the only thing we had to fear was fear itself -- that free men pulling together can weather any storm.

One of our guests today, Senator Jennings Randolph, who served in the Congress during the New Deal, summed it up very well in a recent interview. "He lifted us up . . . with a sense of joy," Senator Randolph recalled of Franklin Roosevelt. "But I think his greatest contribution was that we discovered ourselves as individuals. 'I count.' That was his contribution. Each of us could say, 'I count.'"

Of course, not quite everybody agreed at the time. How well I recall the criticisms -- from FDR's first campaign for the nomination to the end of his last term. No less a pundit than Walter Lippmann wrote Franklin Roosevelt off at the starting line, dismissing him as "A pleasant man who, without any important qualifications for the office, would very much like to be President."

That's the kind of criticism I can understand. It's almost identical to what some people were writing and saying about me in 1980 . . .

FDR was also denounced by some as a "traitor to his class." But people who said that about him missed the whole point of what Franklin Roosevelt believed in and what this country is all about. There's only one class in America, and that's We the People. Woe unto those, foreign or domestic, who try to divide us; they've never succeeded yet.

I think there's a basic reason for this -- one that Franklin Roosevelt understood as well as anyone. "The overwhelming majority of Americans," he said, "are possessed of two great qualities -- a sense of humor and a sense of proportion."

This great Nation of ours is a caring, loving land; its people have a zest for life and laughter. Franklin Roosevelt shared those qualities. But we are also a practical people with an inborn sense of proportion. We sense when things have gone too far, when the time has come to make fundamental changes. Franklin Roosevelt was that kind of person, too. And there's something else. FDR as a leader, and we as a people, believe in looking forward, not backward. We know that every generation of Americans has faced problems. But we also know that every generation of Americans has overcome them.

Like Franklin Roosevelt, we know that, for free men, hope will always be a stronger force than fear; that we only fail when we allow ourselves to be boxed in by the limitations and errors of the past.

This is not a political gathering; it is a celebration of a great man who led our Nation through historic times. It's a celebration shared here today by many who knew and loved him well -- friends, colleagues and relatives and, for my part, a young sportscaster who first felt the awe and majesty of this office when that familiar caped figure drove down the avenue in

Des Moines in 1936, a figure who proved to us all that happy days could, and would, come again.

In that spirit, I can think of no better way to conclude these brief remarks than to ask you all to join me in a toast -- a toast to "Happy Days," now, again, and always.

Ladies and gentlemen, to "Happy Days."

MEETING WITH NATIONAL BLACK REPUBLICAN LEADERSHIP
DATE JANUARY 28, 1982
LOCATION FAMILY THEATER
TIME 2:15 PM - 2:25 PM
FROM: ELIZABETH H. DOLE

I. PURPOSE

To thank them for their support and commend them for their efforts to unite and move forward.

II. BACKGROUND

The participants will include the Executive Board of the National Black Republican Council and other key Black Republicans from gubernatorial staffers and Congressional District staffers.

Legree Daniels, Acting Chairman of the National Black Republican Council, called for a meeting of Black Republicans to unite and chart their course for 1982. The National Black Republican Council is the official auxiliary of the Republican National Committee. Over the years there have been many factions within this organization; this is the first attempt to pull all the factions together and work for common goals. They will be briefed on your State of the Union Address.

III. PARTICIPANTS

See attached list.

IV. PRESS PLAN

Open press

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

- You enter the Family Theater through the front door and proceed directly to the podium and make brief remarks.
- Thelma Duggin will thank you for remarks, after which you proceed to your far left shaking hands across the front aisle and departing through the back door while shaking hands as you leave.

Attachment: Talking Points
List of Participants

SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS FOR MEETING WITH THE NATIONAL BLACK REPUBLICAN LEADERSHIP

- I want to thank you for the support which you have given me and my Administration. I know it has not always been easy but I am convinced that working together we can make a difference.
- As you have already heard, I am keeping my commitment to expand the development and encouragement of minority business.
- While there were advocates aplenty to cut deeply into minority business funding, I want you to know we are committed to spending over one half billion dollars a year for minority business assistance. That is a commitment I intend to keep.
- Under the working group on minority business assistance, chaired by Senior Policy Advisor Dan Smith, we will be actively seeking ways in which we can improve the efficiency and effectiveness of minority business programs.
