A summary of expected question areas is attached (TAB A)

TAB A

Expected question areas for interview with DAILY PANTAGRAPH.

- What are your most vivid memories of Central Illinois?
- Have you ever wished you could go back to the carefree life instead of the life you face now with the rigors of the Presidency?
- You used to be a life guard, swimming coach, your life has changed dramatically - yours is probably the biggest "All-American Success Story" of all time -- do you see it that way?
- Why did you go to Eureka College and how did your experience there shape you for later life?
- Did you ever dream of becoming President - if so, when?
- Because of your varied career, what does Ronald Reagan want to be remembered by?
- What are your feelings now about returning home as President of the United States?
- The newspaper evidently asked their readers what they would like to ask and these questions were submitted:
 - Do you remember your touchdown against Illinois State Normal University?
 - Did you really make moonshine runs to Roanoke, Illinois for the TKE fraternity house at Eureka?
 - What one Christian principle that you learned in Dixon and/or Eureka has stayed with you all your life?
- Some students at Eureka (a very small group) are protesting now and may protest during the graduation ceremonies. If President Hoover had shown up at YOUR graduation, would you have been upset?

The bottom line here is that the reporter will probably ask you to "describe Ronald Reagan."

REMARKS FOR NATIONAL DAY OF PRAYER OBSERVANCE
MAY 6, 1982

What an inspiration it is for me to look out on you -- Protestants, Catholics, members of the Jewish faith and others -- gathered here at our National House to pay homage to the God in whom we trust.

Many of you are leaders in your faith, others are active in your communities, your professions or are among our elected representatives, but all of us are here with a common purpose: to observe our National Day of Prayer.

Prayer has sustained our people in crisis, strengthened us in times of challenge and guided us through our daily lives since the first settlers came to this continent. Our forebears came not for gold but mainly in search of God and the freedom to worship Him in their own way. We have been a free people living under the law with faith in our maker and in our future.

I've said before that the most sublime picture in American history is of George Washington on his knees in the snow at Valley Forge. That image personifies a people who know that it is not enough to depend on our own courage and goodness -- we must also seek help from God -- our Father and preserver.

The French philosopher Alexis de Tocqueville, visiting America 150 years ago, marvelled at Americans because they understood that a free people must also be a religious people.

"Despotism," he wrote, "may be able to do without faith, but freedom cannot."

Today, prayer is still a powerful force in America, and our faith in God is a mighty source of strength. Our Pledge of Allegiance states we are "one Nation under God" and our currency bears the motto "In God We Trust." The morality and values such faith implies are deeply embedded in our National character. Our country embraces those principles by design and we abandon them at our peril.

Yet, in recent years, well-meaning Americans in the name of freedom have taken freedom away. For the sake of religious tolerance, they have forbidden religious practice in our public classrooms. The law of this land has effectively removed prayer from our classrooms.

How can we hope to retain our freedom through the generations if we fail to teach our young that our liberty springs from an abiding faith in our Creator? Thomas Jefferson, one of our Founding Fathers, said the "Almighty God . . . created the mind free," but current interpretation of our Constitution holds that the minds of our children cannot be free to pray to God in public schools.

No one will ever convince me that a moment of voluntary prayer will harm a child or threaten a school or State. But I think it can strengthen our faith in a Creator who, alone, has the power to bless America.

One of my favorite passages in the Bible is the promise God gives us in Second Chronicles: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

That promise is the hope of America and all our people. Because of my faith in that promise I am particularly pleased to be able to tell you today that this Administration will soon submit to the United States Congress a proposal to amend our Constitution to allow our children to pray in school.

No one must ever be forced or coerced or pressured to take part in any religious exercise, but neither should the Government forbid religious practice. The amendment we will propose will restore the right to pray.

I thank you for coming today, and for the good work you do for our people, our country and our God every day of the year. But I also hope I can count on your help in the days and months ahead as we work for passage of this amendment. Changing the Constitution is a mammoth task. It should never be easy. But, in this case, I believe we can restore a freedom our Constitution was always meant to protect.

Together let us take up the challenge to reawaken America's religious and moral heart, recognizing that a deep and abiding faith in God is the rock upon which this great Nation was founded. Thank you and may God bless you.

SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS

- Welcome to the White House.
- I've asked you here today to express my appreciation to each of you for the time, energy, and support you have so generously given over the past year.
- In addition, today gives me the opportunity to meet the person who puts up with the long hours, travel, and never-ending problems that accompany our jobs. I know Nancy's support and understanding helps to keep me going, and I want to personally express my admiration and thanks for the husbands and wives here today.
- As state and local officials, your advice and counsel has been invaluable as we've worked to renew the health and promise of our great nation.
- Together, we've begun restoring the partnership between the levels of American government.
- Now, rather than stand up here and give a long speech, I want to spend our time getting better acquainted.
