MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: ED ROLLINS

SUBJECT: NEW JERSEY - POLITICAL BRIEFING

I. SUMMARY

Republican U.S. Congresswoman Millicent Fenwick is in a good position to defeat Democrat business executive Frank Lautenberg in New Jersey's U.S. Senate race. Fenwick, 72, who is currently serving her fourth term in the U.S. House, won the Republican U.S. Senate nomination in New Jersey's June 8 primary over conservative Jeff Bell by a 54% to 46% margin. Lautenberg won the Democrat nomination over nine other contenders with 26% of the vote. Although both candidates are considered to be on the liberal side of many social issues, the two have sharply different outlooks on economic matters. Lautenberg is very critical of the Administration's economic program, while Fenwick supports the Administration's "new direction."

A poll commissioned by the Fenwick campaign 10 days after the June primary showed Fenwick with a commanding 25-point lead over Lautenberg. However, Fenwick has decided not to accept contributions from political action committees. On the other hand, Lautenberg, a self-made millionaire, is committed to spending "whatever is necessary to close the gap against Fenwick."

If Fenwick's campaign is successful, she will succeed Republican U.S. Senator Nicholas Brady. Brady, an investment banker, was appointed to the Senate by Republican Governor Tom Kean last April, after the resignation of Democrat U.S. Senator Harrison Williams. Upon his appointment, Brady agreed not to seek election to a full U.S. Senate term.

New Jersey's U.S. House delegation has been reduced from 15 to 14 members because of reapportionment. Republican incumbents facing re-election difficulties are Chris Smith (4th District), Matt Rinaldo (7th District), and Cap Hollenbeck (9th District). Republican state Assemblywoman Marie Muhler is waging a strong challenge to Democrat incumbent Jim Howard in the 3rd District.

The Reagan-Bush ticket carried New Jersey by a 52% to 39% margin in 1972.

Republican Governor Tom Kean, elected by a razor-thin margin over Democrat U.S. Congressman Jim Florio in 1981, has recently been hospitalized with severe back problems. However, Governor Kean expects to be able to attend some of the events associated with the Presidential visit to New Jersey.

V. DISCUSSION

A. THE U.S. SENATE RACE - 1982

Republican U.S. Congresswoman Millicent Fenwick is currently favored to defeat Democrat business executive Frank Lautenberg in New Jersey's U.S. Senate race. If successful, Fenwick will succeed Republican U.S. Senator Nicholas Brady who was appointed last April by Republican Governor Tom Kean to fill the remainder of Democrat U.S. Senator Harrison Williams' unexpired term. Williams, who had served in the U.S. Senate since 1959, was indicted and convicted on federal charges arising from the Abscam investigation and resigned his office last March to avoid almost certain expulsion.

After Williams' resignation, newly elected Republican Governor Tom Kean chose business executive Nicholas Brady to fill the vacancy with the understanding that Brady would not seek election to a full term. This arrangement avoided an intraparty controversy which would have developed had Kean appointed one of the candidates already vying for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination.

Millicent Fenwick, a 72-year-old four-term U.S. Congresswoman from Bernardsville, won the Republican U.S. Senate nomination in the June 8 primary over conservative Jeff Bell by a 54% to 46% margin. Bell, who once served as a policy advisor to Governor Reagan in California, gained notoriety in 1978 by defeating Republican incumbent U.S. Senator Clifford Case in the GOP Senate primary, but was defeated by Democrat Bill Bradley in the general election.

Fenwick graduated from Columbia University in 1933. Before entering politics, Fenwick had a varied career which included her editorship of Vogue magazine. In 1958, she was elected to the Bernardsville Borough Council. She served in the New Jersey General Assembly from 1969 until 1972, when she was appointed State Director of Consumer Affairs. Fenwick was elected to the U.S. Congress from New Jersey's 5th Congressional District in 1974 with 55% of the vote. She won subsequent re-elections to Congress by increasingly greater margins. In 1980, she won her fourth term in the House with 78% of the vote. Fenwick currently serves on the Foreign Affairs Committee, the Education and Labor Committee, and the Select Committee on Aging. She is generally regarded as a liberal on social issues, but basically has a conservative outlook on economic matters. In 1981, she supported the Administration's position "down-the-line" on tax and spending reductions. She voted in favor of the tax-reform bill this past August. Last week, however, she broke with the Administration and voted in favor of overriding the President's veto of the $14.2 billion supplemental appropriations bill.

In the crowded Democrat primary field, businessman Frank Lautenberg, a computer company board chairman, won the Democrat U.S. Senate nomination with 26% of the vote. Lautenberg's primary victory is largely attributed to the $2 million which he spent to gain name identification among the state's Democrat voters.

Spending has become a very visible issue in the race. Lautenberg has recently stated that he will spend "whatever is necessary" to defeat Fenwick. The Democrat is expected to spend close to $3 million, with a heavy concentration on television advertising purchased in the expensive New York and Philadelphia media markets.

Fenwick, who has called the sums spent on political campaigns "obscene," has twice suggested that expenditures for this year's Senate race in New Jersey be limited. However, both of her proposed spending ceilings of $800,000 and $1.6 million, have been rejected by Lautenberg.

Fenwick has refused to accept money from political action committees and special interest groups. Fenwick's campaign placed a full-page advertisement in last Sunday's New York Times stating, "Millicent Fenwick can't be bought, that's why she needs your money."

Fenwick's campaign expects to raise a total budget of about $1 million for the general election.

Lautenberg is stressing his personal success story as a poor boy who made good, becoming a self-made millionaire by building a small computer data company into a huge corporation employing thousands of workers. Lautenberg claims that as a U.S. Senator he would use his business experience to help bring jobs and economic development to New Jersey. Lautenberg is an ardent critic of the Administration's economic program, and he is calling for the repeal of the third year of the tax cut.

Fenwick, on the other hand, has embraced the Administration's economic program as the "new direction" so badly needed after years of reckless spending and exorbitant taxes.

The Fenwick campaign is focusing on three major themes: Fenwick's government experience on the local, state and federal levels; her unquestioned reputation for honesty and integrity; and, her independent-mindedness, free from special interest influences, which will allow her to vote for what is clearly in the best interest of her New Jersey constituents.

To date the only available polling data on this race is a poll conducted by Steve Sallmore of Rutgers University shortly after the June 8 primary which showed Fenwick with a commanding lead over Lautenberg. Among all voters she held a 25-point lead (48%-23%). That lead increased to 28 points (52%-24%) among likely votes. The wide Fenwick lead in the polls will undoubtedly narrow as Lautenberg becomes better known. However, Fenwick has a widespread reputation for personal candor and irreverent charm. In fact, Fenwick is the basis for the Doonesbury comic strip character Lacey Davenport. Although the comic strip character has gained Fenwick even greater public recognition, her campaign does not see this association as an asset during the campaign.

Fenwick remains in a good position to defeat Lautenberg this November.

B. THE U.S. HOUSE RACES - 1982

New Jersey's U.S. House delegation will be reduced from 15 to 14 members because of reapportionment. On the last day of Democrat Governor Brendan Byrne's term, he signed into law a Democrat orchestrated redistricting plan designed to favor the Democrats. Republican court litigation failed to stop the partisan Democrat plan from taking effect. However, Republicans project that they could possibly break even in the New Jersey's Congressional races.

The Republicans begin with a one-seat loss in the state. The district currently represented by Republican U.S. Senate nominee Millicent Fenwick has been eliminated, with parts of her old district going into several newly drawn districts. The Democrat redistricting plan forced three Republican incumbent Congressmen - Chris Smith, Matt Rinaldo, and Cap Hollenbeck - to seek re-election in less favorable districts. However, polling data shows that Smith currently leads Democrat former state Senate President Joseph Merlino in the 4th District; Rinaldo leads Democrat former state Consumer Affairs director Adam Levin in the 7th District, and Hollenbeck leads Democrat Robert Torricelli, a former aide to Vice President Mondale, in the 9th District.

Republican incumbent House members Marge Roukema (5th District), Jim Courter (12th District), and Ed Forsythe (13th District) should all win re-election by comfortable margins.

In the 3rd Congressional District, Democrat incumbent James Howard is considered vulnerable. State Assemblywoman Marie Muhler easily won the Republican nomination to challenge Howard. In 1980, Muhler came within 1,100 votes of defeating Howard, who was first elected to Congress in 1964. This year Muhler will get maximum assistance from the National Republican campaign committees. Muhler is running a strong race and has a good chance of defeating Howard this year.

C. LABOR SECRETARY RAY DONOVAN

Labor Secretary Ray Donovan served as the New Jersey Reagan-Bush State Chairman during the general election campaign. Secretary Donovan and New Jersey Republican State Chairman Philip Kaltenbacher continue to have numerous disagreements over political matters within the state. Donovan will be in Georgia on Friday to award a Department of Labor grant, and to attend a fundraising event for Republican gubernatorial nominee Bob Bell in Atlanta.

BRIEFING REPORT: SAN GENNARO FESTIVAL
Flemington, New Jersey

The Second Annual San Gennaro Festival is sponsored by the Hunterdon County Italian-American Club. San Gennaro, the patron saint of the bay of Naples, Italy, it is said, guarded over the immigrants of the early 1900's as they passed through this bay.

The week long festival is expected to draw over 100,000 attendees. The proceeds of the fair raised from the rental of booths for food, rides and parking, will help to sponsor college scholarships for children of Italian heritage. In 1981, one senior from each of five public high schools received a $500.00 scholarship. This year's hope is to increase the amount given to each to $2,500.00.
