MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM:

ED ROLLINS ER

SUBJECT:

OHIO - POLITICAL BRIEFING

I. SUMMARY

Republican U.S. Congressman Bud Brown is waging a strong uphill battle against Democrat former Lieutenant Governor Richard Celeste in the Ohio gubernatorial race. An August Market Opinion Research poll showed Celeste leading Brown by a 50% to 40% margin. Brown, 55, is serving his ninth term in the U.S. House from Ohio's 7th District in west-central Ohio. Celeste, 44, a former director of the Peace Corps, came within 48,000 votes of defeating Governor Rhodes in 1978. The Brown campaign is stressing the need to elect a governor who will be an effective manager. Celeste will probably outspend Brown significantly, but the Republican is counting heavily on his grassroots organization which was so effective in his primary victory. The winner of the gubernatorial race will succeed Republican Governor Jim Rhodes who has held the governorship for 16 of the last 20 years. Rhodes is ineligible to seek a third consecutive term this year.

Republican state Senator Paul Pfeifer is showing noticeable improvement in his challenge to liberal Democrat incumbent U.S. Senator Howard Metzenbaum. Between July and the the beginning of September, Pfeifer cut Metzenbaum's lead from a 36 point (63%-27%) lead, down to a 15 point (52%-37%) lead, according to polls conducted by Market Opinion Research. However, despite Metzenbaum's high negative ratings, the Democrat incumbent has just begun to spend the $3 million he has raised to date, and could easily raise another $1 million if he felt it were necessary. Pfeifer appears to be running a stronger race than many observers thought he would a few months ago, but he still remains a long-shot against Metzenbaum.

Ohio's U.S. House delegation of 13 Republicans and 10 Democrats will be reduced by two seats because of reapportionment. Each party lost a seat in the redistricting process. Republican state Senator John Kasich has a good chance of defeating freshman Democrat incumbent Bob Shamansky in the 12th District (Columbus).

The Reagan-Bush ticket carried Ohio by a 52% to 41% margin in 1980.

V. DISCUSSION

A. THE GUBERNATORIAL RACE - 1982

Republican U.S. Congressman Bud Brown is locked in a tough race against Democrat former Lieutenant Governor Richard Celeste. Governor Jim Rhodes, who has held the governorship for 16 of the last 20 years (1963-71 and 1975 to the present) is ineligible to seek a third consecutive term.

Bud Brown first won his U.S. Congressional seat in a 1965 special election, after the death of his father who had represented the district since 1939. He has never had a serious re-election battle: in 1978 he was unopposed and in 1980 he won re-election with 76% of the vote. In the House, Brown currently serves on the Energy and Commerce Committee, the Government Operations Committee, and the Joint Economic Committee. Before entering politics, Brown worked in the family newspaper business, which still publishes a number of small town newspapers in Ohio. He has an undergraduate degree from Duke University and an MBA from Harvard.

In late 1981 Brown decided to pass up safe re-election to a tenth term in Congress to run for Governor. Brown won the Republican gubernatorial nomination in the June 8 primary with unexpected ease. In a four-man race, Brown's major challenger was Seth Taft, a former Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) Commissioner. Three months before the primary, polls showed Brown running more than 20 points behind Taft. Brown quietly established by far the most thorough grassroots Republican campaign organization in the state. He won the nomination over Taft by an overwhelming 54% to 22% margin. Brown carried 79 of Ohio's 88 counties. Brown's running mate for lieutenant governor is Jim Betts, who was soundly defeated by Democrat incumbent U.S. Senator John Glenn in 1980.

Democrat Richard Celeste won the Democrat gubernatorial nomination with 42% of the vote in a hotly contested race against State Attorney General William Brown who won 37% of the vote, and former Cincinnati City Councilman Jerry Springer, who placed a distant third. Celeste has maintained a position in the political spotlight for the past 12 years. He served as Democrat Governor John Gilligan's lieutenant governor from 1971 to 1975, he came within 48,000 votes of defeating Republican Governor Jim Rhodes in 1978, and he served as Director of the Peace Corps under President Carter. A native of Cleveland, Celeste is focusing much of his campaign activity in the Cleveland area where there is the highest concentration of Democrat voters in the state. Celeste is campaigning on traditional liberal Democrat themes. He blames the Reagan Administration for "Ohio's number one problem - unemployment," (Ohio's unemployment rate was 12.5% in August). Celeste also charges that Ohio's state finances are "in shambles." He promises to increase state government involvement to improve economic conditions in Ohio.

Brown's campaign is stressing the theme that Bud Brown will provide "strong leadership for the future of ALL Ohio." Brown places strong emphasis on the need for a strong "manager" to govern Ohio. He points to his experience as a successful small businessman and his effectiveness during 17 years in the U.S. Congress as evidence that he would be better able to steer the state through difficult times.

Brown's campaign concedes that while both campaigns originally budgeted approximately $2.6 million for the race, Brown may fall short of that goal, while Celeste is expected to be fully funded. Organized labor is expected to contribute significantly to Celeste's campaign. While Celeste concentrates his efforts on a high-dollar media campaign, Brown is depending mostly on grass-roots organization.

Market Opinion Research (MOR) is conducting the polling for Brown's campaign. Shortly after the June primary MOR found Celeste leading Brown by 16 points (53% to 37%). By the end of July, Brown had taken 6 points of Celeste's lead, and trailed by a 50% to 40% margin. Bud Brown is running a strong race against Celeste, but closing the final gap may prove difficult.

B. THE U.S. SENATE RACE - 1982

Republican state Senator Paul Pfeifer is waging a better than expected challenge against incumbent Democrat U.S. Senator Howard Metzenbaum. However, Metzenbaum is still favored to win re-election.

The death of conservative Republican U.S. Congressman John Ashbrook last April considerably dampened Republican hopes of defeating Metzenbaum, one of the U.S. Senate's leading liberals. Ashbrook was almost certain to be the GOP U.S. Senate nominee in what promised to be a classic conservative versus liberal confrontation. With Ashbrook's unexpected death, caused by an attack of gastrointestinal bleeding, the race for the Republican nomination became a contest between state Senator Paul Pfeifer of Bucyrus and former Cincinnati City Councilman Walter Beckjord. Neither candidate had very high statewide name recognition, and Pfeifer, chairman of the state Senate Judiciary Committee, won the Republican U.S. Senate nomination by a 2-to-1 margin.

Senator Metzenbaum, a wealthy Cleveland businessman, lost his first U.S. Senate race in 1970, when he was defeated by Republican Bob Taft, Jr. Six years later however, Metzenbaum defeated Taft by a 50% to 47% margin.

Pfeifer's campaign went to the television airwaves this past summer to publicize Metzenbaum's extremely liberal voting record. Ads emphasized Metzenbaum's positions against school prayer, capital punishment, and the Balanced Budget Amendment; also his past support for the Soviet grain embargo, and his vote against the Administration's tax-reform bill, especially the provision extending unemployment benefits.

Pfeifer's campaign is greatly encouraged by the results of a Market Opinion Research poll showing Metzenbaum with only a 15% point lead over Pfeifer, (53% to 38%). This latest poll was conducted during the first three days of September, and showed a dramatic change from the July poll which gave Metzenbaum a 36% point lead over Pfeifer, (63% to 27%).

The National Republican Senatorial Committee (NRSC) has pledged $589,000 to the Pfeifer campaign, which has been earmarked almost exclusively for television. However, the NRSC contribution will make up the majority of Pfeifer's campaign budget. Although his campaign claims to have raised $225,000 in the past month, it currently has only $50,000 cash-on-hand. Pfeifer is now at a point where he must attract major financial support, if he is to remain a viable candidate. Metzenbaum is just beginning to unleash his campaign, which has a potential for spending as much as $5 million.

If Pfeifer is able to raise substantial funds during the next few weeks and convince enough voters that Metzenbaum is too liberal to represent Ohio, then the chance for an upset over Metzenbaum would become conceivable.

C. THE U.S. HOUSE RACES - 1982

Ohio will lose two U.S. House seats because of reapportionment, reducing its delegation from 23 to 21 members. Both the Republicans and Democrats each lost one seat in the redistricting plan. In the Cleveland area, Democrat incumbents Ron Mottl and Dennis Eckart were combined into the same Congressional district -- the 19th. Eckart opted to run in the adjourning 11th District, where incumbent Republican Bill Stanton is retiring at the end of his present term. Mottl, who was decried by liberals as "the only Boll Weevil with a northern accent," was defeated in the Democrat primary by Cuyahoga County Commissioner Edward Feighan by less than 1,000 votes. Mottl's defeat was most likely due to the fact that he was running in a district with only about one-half of his old constituents. Now Feighan is favored over Republican Richard Anter. However, Fred Lennon, former Ohio Reagan finance Chairman is raising money for Anter, and some movement has been seen in his campaign.

The eliminated Republican seat was represented by the late Congressman John Ashbrook. That district, which John's widow Jean now represents, has been divided and absorbed into a number of surrounding districts.

There are two Congressional districts currently represented by Republicans where the incumbent is not seeking re-election.

In the 11th District (northeast corner of Ohio) where Republican Bill Stanton is stepping down, a tight race has developed between Democrat Dennis Eckart, a freshman incumbent Congressman who was prompted to run here because of redistricting, and former Ashtabula County Republican Chairman Glen Warner. Although Eckart is currently favored, Warner is waging an aggressive campaign and could upset Eckart in November. In the 7th Congressional District (West-Central Ohio), which has been represented by GOP gubernatorial nominee Bud Brown for 19 years, Republican state Senator Mike DeWine is expected to defeat Democrat Roger Tackett, a county commissioner.

Freshman Democrat incumbent Congressman Bob Shamansky, who represents the 12th District on the east side of Columbus, is the National Republican Congressional Committee's number one Democrat target for defeat in Ohio this year. In 1980, Shamansky upset incumbent Republican Congressman Sam Devine, Ohio's Reagan-Bush State Chairman by a 53% to 47% margin. Republican state Senator John Kasich is running a well-organized highly effective campaign against Shamansky, and is given a good chance for victory.

Republican incumbent Congressmen Ed Weber (9th District), and Lyle Williams (17th District), who were once considered vulnerable, now appear to be in good shape for re-election.

Additionally, Republican incumbent Congressmen Bill Gradison (2nd District), Mike Oxley (4th District), Del Latta (5th District), Bob McEwen (6th District), Tom Kindness (8th District), Clarence Miller (10th District), Chalmers Wylie (15th District) and Ralph Regula (16th District) should all win re-election with little difficulty.

SUBJECT: OHIO TRIP - October 4, 1982

Enclosed are the cards/backup copy for the three Ohio events tomorrow.

There were a couple minor changes we'd like to bring to your attention:

On the Bud Brown reception:

- 1) We inserted the name of John Kasich (page 5). He's running for Congress in one of Columbus' two congressional districts.
- 2) We worked in the name of Brown's running mate, Jim Betts (page 6).

For the AccuRay remarks:

- 1) We restructured a paragraph on page 6 to reflect the final action by Congress before they recessed.

A fact sheet on the award is attached, as well as color fact sheets on Ohio and AccuRay.

We deleted the names mentioned at the beginning of all remarks since there will be seven Congressmen joining you at the AccuRay and veterans events, too many to mention. Also deleted were references to Governor Rhodes. It is not certain, at this time, whether he will be at any of the events.
