 The Cabinet Room

I. PURPOSE

This is the third session related to the development of the FY '84 budget. In this meeting, we will look at: (1) the potential for achieving additional management and overhead savings and the degree to which such savings would contribute to reducing the deficit; and (2) spending options among two of several major budget components.

Subsequent sessions will discuss: choices among additional major budget components; potential new initiatives; and a prospective analysis of political constraints and opportunities.

Following these sessions -- as previously noted -- your guidance on a set of basic issues will be sought and discussed with the Cabinet. Thereafter, the ordinary budget process will go forward -- with major issues and appeals brought to you for decision during the first weeks of December.

This meeting is not a decision meeting.

PRESIDENTIAL TAPING: MESSAGE FOR AD COUNCIL ANNUAL DINNER
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1982

Greetings to all of you at the Advertising Council's 40th Anniversary dinner celebration. I'm sorry I couldn't be with you at the Waldorf tonight, but believe me, our Administration appreciates the great job you are doing.

Mark Twain once said, "Many a small thing has been made large by the right kind of advertising." I might add, many American dreams have come true, thanks to your advertising campaigns. Your public service work provides an invaluable link between we the people, and our Government.

Since the Ad Council was founded in 1942, your campaigns have touched nearly every part of American life: education; health; nutrition; crime prevention; conservation; anti-pollution measures; and opportunities for minorities, to name just a few. And more recently, a favorite of mine -- and especially Nancy's -- your Foster Grandparent program.

You know those words, "The Ad Council" evoke for me the whole idea of what our American spirit and volunteerism are all about. In the past year alone, the media has given $365 million worth of free advertising for public affairs announcements on behalf of Government sponsored campaigns. I think that's a record you can be proud of and it's an example of private and community cooperation at its best. Believe me, each of you is indispensable, and all I'm asking is: keep doing what you do best.

I understand Frank Carey, Chairman of IBM, has received the Ad Council's public service award. Congratulations to you Frank, and to all of you who make this Council such a success. Thank you and God bless you all.

PRESIDENTIAL TAPING: AMERICAN ENTERPRISE INSTITUTE DINNER
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1982

Good evening, and thank you for this opportunity to take part with you again in your annual public policy week. Dr. Gray, congratulations on winning AEI's prestigious Francis Boyer Award. That award has been given to the most eminent and effective contributors in the field of public policy. You distinguish that select list.

I know a previous Boyer Award winner -- my good friend Jerry Ford -- has also joined you in this conference. Mr. President, I can think of no more appropriate participant in discussions on economic growth -- he left us with the low inflation, interest and unemployment rates we are struggling today to regain.

Economic growth is a timely subject, because this recession -- which many economists tell us began in 1979 -- is coming to an end. Inflation which soared into double digits between 1977 and 1980, is back down to 4.8 percent. By curious coincidence, that's exactly where it was when President Ford left office. Interest rates, which had climbed to 21½ percent, are now at 12 percent; the growth in Federal spending is down and the tax burden on families and business is being reduced. We believe that if this progress is sustained, it will create new opportunity, better productivity, more jobs and lasting prosperity.

When I stopped by at this dinner in 1980, you were honoring my late friend Bill Baroody, Sr., and the topic was the rebuilding of America -- but the themes then and now are essentially the same. Then as now, the principles of less government and more individual freedom must be used as a standard to judge every initiative as we guide our Nation through these critical first months of rejuvenation.

On behalf of all Americans, I thank you, the members and friends of the American Enterprise Institute, for encouraging the competition of ideas, and for assisting America's public policy makers, scholars, business people and press through your objective analysis of national and international issues. With your help I have every confidence America will seize this golden opportunity to bring about sustained growth and lasting economic prosperity.

Thank you very much, God bless you and good night.

PRESIDENTIAL TAPING: FREEDOMS FOUNDATION FILM
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1982

I can think of no better place than here in the Oval Office to introduce this film about the programs and activities of Freedoms Foundation. For it is here, ultimately, that freedom is challenged and must be defended. How we meet those challenges today is what Freedoms Foundation and this film are all about.

This is a unique film. It stars one of the true "superstars" of all time -- a magnificent American flag, twenty-five feet high by forty-two feet wide. One of the largest in the United States, it flies atop a high hill in Valley Forge, Pennsylvania, overlooking the national headquarters of Freedoms Foundation.

Legend has it that, not far from that hill, George Washington slipped away from his troops to walk alone through the snowy woods. It was a desperate moment for the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army. The nearby hills echoed with the sound of musket and cannon. Closer by, his soldiers huddled together against the bitter cold, their spirits as tattered as their uniforms.

Faced with these thoughts, Washington dropped to one knee, resting his sword in the snow. And at that historic moment, the Father of our country bowed his head in prayer, seeking greater strength from within.

We should remember this moment in our history. We need to remember our great heroes and their dreams. If we lose sight of our past, we cannot hope to build a better future.

Unfortunately, we live in a world where too many claim to see no heroes; they see only a world filled with problems that can't be solved; a world where dreams, faith, ideals and patriotism are unimportant.

Well, I don't believe this for one minute. And I am willing to bet you don't believe it, either. Every day across our country, Americans are performing deeds of quiet heroism. They believe in themselves and in our country. In a thousand different ways, they work to improve the quality of life for all of us.

Their care and concern are found in every corner of the United States: in city junkyards converted into green parks, where neighborhoods meet and children play; in community centers, where teenagers serve meals to senior citizens; in schools, where men and women who work all day, spend their evenings helping new citizens learn our language and our ways; in schools, where teachers involve their students in the private enterprise system, helping ensure the future of our free society; and in corporate offices, where decisions are made to spend millions of dollars for an advertising campaign that promotes America instead of the company's latest product.

Yes, my friends, the spirit of Valley Forge is alive and well. Even today, we can find inspiration in that image of George Washington kneeling in prayer, captured so beautifully in this little statue.* This is a replica, actually, of the magnificent nine-foot tall bronze work of art that looks over the hills of Valley Forge at Freedoms Foundation. As a symbol, it can still serve as a source of strength to all Americans, even in today's world. But we need to do more -- to use our energy, our creativity, to remain confident that we can solve today's problems and build a better tomorrow.

This same determination prompted a group of concerned Americans to establish Freedoms Foundation back in 1949. They recognized that freedom requires constant vigilance. Over the years, I have watched Freedoms Foundation defend and promote freedom. I have seen the organization grow. And I have valued my association with it. Today I am proud to serve as its Honorary Chairman. I think you will understand why after you see the film.

Be open to its message. Support the Foundation's work. Let its magnificent flag serve as a banner of hope to all who love freedom throughout the world.

*It is suggested that for the purposes of this picture that the President place the replica of the statue which he received from the Freedoms Foundation on becoming our Honorary Chairman on the desk in front of him and that the camera zoom in at this piece in the script for a close-up of this statue.

PRESIDENTIAL TAPING: SALUTE TO VETERANS FOR NCAA FOOTBALL HALFTIME
NOVEMBER 8, 1982

I'd like to take this opportunity to tell all of you who have served in our country's Armed Forces just how grateful we are as a Nation for all you've done to protect the United States and preserve the freedom which we cherish so dearly. You can be proud that you are part of an elite group of men and women who wore the uniform and were willing to put your lives on the line to defend your families, your community, and your country.

All of us are safer and freer today because of the service you rendered, whether that service was in the First or Second World War, Korea, Vietnam or during those stretches of time when, like today, because of the dedicated men and women in our military forces, we were able to live in peace, secure from foreign threats.

As we go about our daily lives, relaxing at a sporting event, spending time with our friends and family, or just working in the yard, all of us, your fellow citizens, are grateful for what you've done to protect our way of life.

As President of the United States, I join all Americans in saluting you and offering you a very special thank you. We appreciate what you've done for us. We appreciate what you've done for America.

So thanks again, and God bless you.

PRESIDENTIAL TAPING: BETTE DAVIS THEATRE ARTS AWARD
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1982

Good evening to all of you attending the American Theatre Arts Award Dinner, and a special good evening to you Bette. Congratulations on receiving the ATA's Award for Lifetime Achievement in the Entertainment Arts.

Bette and I both were in the movie "Dark Victory" -- no, it wasn't about the last election. I say I was in the picture with Bette; I actually had fifth billing -- right under the gaffer. I played a fellow of no real substance who moved in a fast social set -- sort of the way the press sometimes portrays me now.

But Bette's role was one of her most memorable performances on the screen. She received an Academy Award nomination for playing Judith Traherne, a socialite unprepared for tragedy. The New York Times said that she played the part with eloquence, tenderness and heart-breaking sincerity. It was a moving performance and I felt honored to be on the same set with this great actress. And I'm honored to be on the same set with her tonight, even if it is by video-tape.

Bette once said about herself, "I was the first star who ever came out of the water looking wet." Well, wet or not, after 50 years one thing's for sure -- her talent hasn't even begun to run dry. Her performances still are as fresh as spring water.

Bette, I have to be going -- got an early call in the morning -- but I did want to add my congratulations to all the others you are receiving tonight. You have my warm best wishes -- and the best to you all.
