NATIONAL DRUNK AND DRUGGED DRIVING AWARENESS WEEK

DATE: December 13, 1982

TIME: 1:15 PM (15 minutes)
FROM: Craig L. Fuller

I. PURPOSE

To meet with the Drunk Driving Commission to receive their report and to sign the proclamation designating this National Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week.

II. BACKGROUND

Thanks to a growing public outcry and the efforts of concerned citizens and safety leaders, the problem of drunken and drugged drivers is gaining national attention. State legislatures are enacting tougher laws and courts are imposing stiffer penalties. Congress recently passed legislation setting Federal standards and providing incentive funds to assist in the crusade

The Presidential Commission which you appointed last April is reinforcing these efforts and encouraging greater preventive and corrective programs. The Chairman of the Commission, John Volpe, will present to you an updated report of the Commission's activities and by signing the proclamation you will show your personal support for continuing the momentum.

III. PARTICIPANTS

Secretary Lewis, Secretary Schweiker, John Volpe and members of the Commission (list attached).

IV. PRESS PLAN

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: DRUNK & DRUGGED DRIVING WEEK
PROCLAMATION SIGNING
MONDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1982

Good afternoon. For too many years, people approached the problem of drunk driving as if it were an unavoidable disaster like hurricanes or floods. Well, we have learned that is not the case. We have learned that we are not helpless.

Action can be taken when people are concerned enough. And people not only are concerned, they are mad. They want this slaughter on our highways to stop, and they want those who threaten the public safety to be held accountable for their actions.

Each year approximately 25,000 lives are lost in alcohol related auto accidents. An additional 700,000 persons are injured each year in crashes involving alcohol. Our loved ones are not being killed in drunk driving "accidents" and I put the word accident in quotations -- they are dying because some of our Nation's motorists have chosen to turn their vehicles into weapons. Citizen's groups, legislators, judges, police officers, people from all over the country, are saying: "That's enough -- get these killers off our roads and get them off now."

Last April, I appointed a Presidential Commission on Drunk Driving to explore the problem more fully and to work with State and local governments in developing effective programs. John Volpe, the Chairman of that Commission, has some encouraging information as a part of the Commission's interim report. Apparently a potential drunk driver, who knows he stands a good chance of being caught and prosecuted, is less likely to drive at all. For this deterrent to be effective, however, State and local law enforcement officials must make it clear that they mean business and that the drunk or drug-influenced driver will be a prime target for apprehension and conviction.

Clearly there is no single solution to the drunk driving problem. The Commission has noted several approaches, including a New York State program that is self supporting -- it pays for its expenses through fines levied on drunk drivers. We are going to give careful consideration to all of the Commission's findings and ideas, and we're going to look hard at what the Federal Government can do to help State and local governments combat drunk driving. Fastening that seatbelt is the best thing an individual can do to lessen the threat.

As we launch Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week, we do so with an increasing momentum. There is much to be done but the American people are beginning to see progress -- laws are changing and traffic deaths are declining in those States that already have strong drunk driving programs. In Maine the highway death rate has dropped to an all-time low and alcohol-related highway crashes have been reduced by 42 percent since stronger laws went into effect. In Maryland the highway death rate is at a 19-year low, due to strict enforcement of laws against drunk driving. I'm confident the future will see a sharper drop in traffic deaths as this country takes the strong steps necessary to make our Nation's highways safe again.

I also want to express my gratitude for the leadership and energy that many Members of Congress and others have shown on this issue, and I've asked them to join me this afternoon. Let us resolve to make National Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week the beginning of a national campaign that will not end until death by drunk and drugged drivers is brought under control. Together, with conscience and commitment, we can reduce the menace of these drivers and protect the lives of our fellow citizens.

Now, let me sign the proclamation...
