PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: UNITED WAY CEREMONY WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1983

Well, thank you for this report and a special thanks for all you are doing. It's been said that it's in times of adversity that one's character is revealed. If that is true, we have much for which to be proud today.

The American people through their giving to the United Way and their many other demonstrations of kindness and generosity last year proved that they remain a humane and caring people. The good will that these figures represent is beyond doubt our greatest National Treasury.

In the early days of our Republic Jefferson suggested, "I deem it the duty of every man to devote a certain portion of his income for charitable purposes; and that it is his further duty to see it so applied as to do the most good of which it is capable." Jefferson like the other founding fathers clearly saw the relationship between voluntary charity, and the individual liberty we enjoy in this country. I believe if he were with us today he would be exceptionally proud of the outpouring of contributions in 1982. I know I am.

DeTocquiville, that young French aristocrat who chronicled his observations in Democracy in America, wrote that America will be free as long as it is good. This report is reason for confidence. So God bless you for all this magnificent display of Americanism.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: LUNCHEON WITH KEY SUPPORTERS WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1983

Welcome to the White House. A little more than 2 years ago we were in the midst of a political campaign. I want you to know that I am deeply grateful for all of your dedication then and all you've done since to help us accomplish what we set out to do. In a free society, change is not something achieved by one individual; instead it is a process that depends on teamwork and cooperation of like-minded citizens -- and, of course, you've got to be selling something the people want to buy.

Two years ago it wasn't my campaign that won the election, it was our campaign. And I'm pleased that you've been able to join me today for a discussion among friends of how far we've come, and how much further we've got to go.

Now I know you've heard that the Democrats have proposed an alternative budget. All they are asking for is a reversal of the 1980 election. They seem to believe we can go right back to the same pre-1980 policies and it won't bring back inflation and pull the rug out from under economic progress, or undermine our national security. Of course they'd like to blame all the economic chaos and uncertainty that prevailed among our people in 1980 on Jimmy Carter. Well, I've got news for them: No single individual could have caused all our problems. The problems from which we are just now emerging were the result of bad policies. The Democrats controlled both Houses of the Congress and all of the departments and agencies of the executive branch, as well as the White House, for 4 years. Their policies gave us devastating inflation, sky-high interest rates, confiscatory taxation, a fall in productivity, a drop in real wages, and the sense that our country was in the grips of a national decline over which we had no control. Our adversaries and friends alike began counting us out as a world power.

When we started on the road together in 1980, we were, first of all, concerned Americans. We promised the people to make America great again. To do it we promised not just to change people, but to change policies. We promised to get control of Federal growth; we've cut it by 40 percent. We promised to turn off the Federal tax vacuum that was taking more and more out of the working people's pay checks. We've put in place a tax rate reduction program that by the end of this year will have decreased their income tax rates by 25 percent across the board.

Even more important, in 1985 indexing will be in place to prevent the Government from using inflation to take more and more money from the people without even having to go through the formality of voting for a tax increase. And I can assure you, I'm not about to back down on indexing.

We promised to loosen the burden of excessive regulations that strangled business and prevented local and State government from doing their jobs. Under the able leadership of Vice President Bush we've cleared away useless and counterproductive regulations affecting almost every segment of our economy.

One of the areas of grave concern in 1980 was the declining prestige of our country. The 1970s were a decade of neglect for the security needs of the United States. Now, as much as some would wish that it weren't so, a country's influence, its ability to maintain peace and preserve its freedom, is dependent on its strength. One fellow who occupied this house back around the turn of the century said it well.

"The voice of the weakling ...," President Teddy Roosevelt said, "counts for nothing when he clamors for peace; but the voice of the just man armed is potent. We need to keep in a condition of preparedness ... not because we want war, but because we desire to stand with those whose plea for peace is listened to with respectful attention."

In 1980 we promised to make America great again. It's been a tough fight but, with your help, we've come a long way. Now I know when friends come to visit they've got something to say too, so why don't we just open this up for some dialogue.
