THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

July 8, 1983

MEETING WITH TOM CLAUSEN
PRESIDENT OF THE WORLD BANK

DATE: July 11, 1983
LOCATION: Oval Office
TIME: 1:30 pm (20 minutes)
FROM: Craig L. Fuller

I. PURPOSE

To give Tom Clausen an opportunity to request additional resources and a more active U.S. leadership role in world development.

II. BACKGROUND

A.W. ("Tom") Clausen, former head of Bank of America, succeeded Robert McNamara as President of the World Bank on July 1, 1981. Clausen has met or plans to meet with the leaders of all major World Bank donors to seek support for the Bank's lending operations in developing countries. Clausen's particular concern is his desire to raise additional resources for both the Bank's capital base, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD), and its concessional window, the International Development Association (IDA).

The following points are likely to be raised by Mr. Clausen:

1. The IBRD is currently operating on the basis of a $60 billion five-year (FY 82-86) lending program. Clausen believes an accelerated program is necessary so that the Bank will be in a position to respond to the increased lending opportunities which will accompany expected world economic recovery. In addition, Clausen cites the need to accommodate new borrowers such as China and Hungary and the increased requirements of both more advanced countries (e.g., Argentina, Mexico and Brazil) and those hurt by IDA funding constraints.

While we support a strong and effective IBRD lending program, we believe valid demands on IBRD resources can still be easily accommodated within the $60 billion program if the Bank allocates its resources more effectively and avoids lending in situations -- particularly in oil and gas development -- where alternative (i.e., private) financing is available.

2. Clausen is also likely to seek assurances that the United States will complete contributions to the sixth replenishment of IDA (IDA VI) in FY 84 and to argue for a large U.S. contribution to the seventh replenishment (IDA VII) which is currently being negotiated to finance lending for the period after July 1, 1984.

We are strongly committed to seeking full IDA VI funding by FY 84, i.e., one year later than was envisioned at the time IDA VI was negotiated. To this end, we have requested $945 million in FY 83 appropriations (Because the Congress provided only $700 million, a $245 million supplemental is being sought to provide full funding.) and $1,095 million in FY 84. Congressional approval of the full IDA VI funding by FY 84 will be difficult. We are, however, giving it our best effort and it is possible that favorable Congressional action on the supplemental may occur in the very near future.

3. Clausen is seriously concerned about the "low" level of annual U.S. funding ($750 million) which we are projecting "for planning purposes" for IDA VII. This would likely result in a replenishment about one-half the size being advocated by the Bank.

We believe the IDA VII funding ranges suggested are unrealistically high and do not reflect either donor budgetary constraints or the existing potential for employing IDA resources more effectively (i.e., concentration on Sub-Saharan Africa, and less for countries like India and China which have the creditworthiness to sustain IBRD and other alternative financing). We do not think funding in excess of $750 million is appropriate, nor would a higher level have any significant Congressional support.

4. Clausen is seeking a more active leadership role by the U.S. in world development.

U.S. economic recovery is our first priority. We feel that a strong U.S. economy will mean more importing from the developing countries and this will be much more significant than an increase in foreign aid.

5. Clausen has been actively supporting free trade.

We appreciate what you are doing to support our mutual interest in an open trading system for all countries.

6. A question you could ask Mr. Clausen:

What are your views on the general global debt situation and particularly Latin America?

III. PARTICIPANTS

Secretary Regan, Tom Clausen and Craig Fuller.

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

Tom Clausen will make a few points as indicated above and you will respond accordingly. There will be a brief photo session.

SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS : JULY 11 MEETING WITH WORLD
BANK PRESIDENT CLAUSEN

- The United States is committed to working to ensure that all countries, including the poorest, have the opportunity to participate fully in the process of economic growth and development.
- Free trade, unrestricted investment, open capital markets, and an overall economic environment which maximizes the opportunity for private enterprise are particularly important.
- We also recognize the value of an effective World Bank role in a market-oriented international system, and we are firmly committed to working constructively with you and other Bank members to increase the effectiveness of Bank operations. The fact that in the 12 months ending June 30, the Bank borrowed with our permission about $5.3 billion in the U.S. capital markets and in the Eurodollar market is one example of U.S. support.
- At the same time, we (and others) face serious budgetary constraints. These underscore the importance of achieving maximum developmental impact out of existing resources.

(Regarding an IBRD Selective Capital Increase)

- We can support a limited SCI which is restricted to adjusting IBRD shares following the IMF quota increase.
- Moreover, we intend to participate in such an SCI to the extent necessary to retain the U.S. veto. Retention of the veto is important both for the Bank's creditworthiness and as an expression of U.S. commitment to the Bank.

(Regarding IDA VI)

- It will be difficult to secure Congressional approval of full U.S. IDA VI funding by FY 84. We are, however, giving it our best effort. House/Senate Conference action on the $245 million supplemental request is expected this week.

(Regarding IDA VII)

- The IDA VII funding levels suggested by the Bank are unrealistically high, and do not reflect either donor budgetary constraints or the need to better concentrate resources on areas (e.g., Sub-Saharan Africa) which lack alternative financing.
- We have been using $750 million as the annual planning level for outyear contributions to IDA. I do not believe an increase above $750 million is a realistic proposition.

MEETING WITH WILSON, COORS, HUME, BENDETSSEN, AND TELLER

MONDAY, JULY 11, 1983
OVAL OFFICE
4:00 p.m.

FROM: JAY KEYWORTH

I. PURPOSE

To discuss group's support for the New Defense initiatives and to receive their recommendations for follow-up actions.

II. BACKGROUND

These gentlemen have long been supporters of the concept of strategic defense and were early backers of the High Frontier project. They withdrew from active involvement in that effort when it began to focus exclusively on a specific technical concept. They have continued to meet together occasionally in order to remain current and to share views. They are likely to recommend parallel development of several promising technologies and will emphasize the need for special management, such as in the Apollo project, to mobilize and take advantage of the broadest possible participation by the nation's technical expertise. Their suggestions are thoughtful and generally consistent with the recommendations that are likely to emerge from the Defense Technologies Study Team currently working to define a research and development program for implementation in the FY-1985 defense budget. As a result of discussions with Keyworth and others, they are sensitive to the importance of letting that study team complete its urgent work without the added distraction now of having to consider or adapt to a new management arrangement. It is important to recognize their continued support and to encourage their maintaining close contact with OSTP, while assuring them that their specific concerns will be considered and taken up at the most propitious stage.

July 8, 1983

THE PRESIDENT'S NEW DEFENSE INITIATIVE
STATUS OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM DEFINITION
JULY 8, 1983

- o March 23 speech: Challenge to nation to move from emphasis on offense to emphasis on defense
- o Immediate focus on missile defense--the most difficult challenge and the greatest threat to stability.
 - o This missile defense is a new concept--defense of national territory rather than "site" defenses typical of older anti-ballistic missile technologies. Technology is not developed to carry this out.
- o Administration actions since March 23:
 - o NSSD 6-83 set research and development planning in motion.
 - o Defense Department is leading the process.
 - o Defense Technologies Study Team, led by Jim Fletcher and Harold Agnew, will recommend R&D plan by October 1, 1983--in time for FY-1985 defense budget.
 - o White House (NSC and OSTP) monitoring and guiding.
 - o National technical leadership being mobilized through DoD, White House Science Council. Beginning to attract interest in strategic defense from a new generation of scientists.
- o Anticipated research and development program by October 1, 1983.
 - o Approximately $1 billion program initially

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

TALKING POINTS FOR THE PRESIDENT

- o Have ordered an intensive study of both strategy implications and research and development needed to achieve a defensive technology.
- o Progress in this study and continuing advances in defense technology are very encouraging.
- o But can't succeed without participation of American science community and industry.
- o Crucial that we develop broad public support for this fundamental change in national strategy.
- o Solicit your views on how to arouse public interest, enlist Congressional support.
- o Solicit your views on how a defensive systems research and development program should be organized and led.

- o Establish multiple lines of R&D to encourage competition of concepts. Give less advanced technologies time to be explored and developed before narrowing to specific systems.
- o Identify some near-term tangible goals to maintain momentum and public support.
 - o For example, ground-based anti-satellite capability within a few years.

- 0 Critical to encourage broad participation and cooperation by Service branches, other agencies, and science community in this early stage. Program should evolve quickly over next few years; the time to settle on a more formal management structure will be as program takes shape.

- o Concurrent actions to develop senior Hill leadership (Tower, Warner, Cohen, Nunn, Cheney, Edwards, etc.) and the MX Commission (Scowcroft, Brown, etc.).
