DROP-BY BRIEFING FOR HISPANIC, LABOR AND
RELIGIOUS PRESS

DATE: Wednesday, September 14, 1983

LOCATION: 450 EOB

TIME: 11:30 a.m. (10 minutes)

FROM: Karna Small KS

I. PURPOSE:

To greet a large group of specialized press (many have never been to the White House) and highlight your views on Central America, the KAL 007 tragedy, as well as the optimistic outlook for the economy. Since this is Hispanic Heritage Week, we made an effort to include a large group of Hispanic editors in this particular group.

II. BACKGROUND:

As part of our effort to increase understanding of Administration principles and priorities, particularly with respect to Central America, we are planning a series of briefings for many press groups. Before you arrive, this group will have been briefed by: Ed Meese (domestic policy, family values), Tony Motley (Central America) and Rick Burt (KAL 007). And in the afternoon they will reconvene at the State Department for further briefings on Central America, human rights and refugees.

III. PARTICIPANTS:

The President
Karna Small
Approximately 100 editors, publishers, broadcasters

IV. PRESS PLAN:

White House Photographer
7 local camera crews
White House Press pool

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS:

As soon as you arrive in the holding room of 450 EOB, I will have the previous speaker end his presentation, you will be announced. You will give brief remarks and take 2-3 questions from the audience.

VI. REMARKS: Submitted separately by speechwriters

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: BRIEFING FOR HISPANIC, LABOR, AND RELIGIOUS PRESS
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1983

Good morning and buenos dias. It is a pleasure to have you here today. I understand that you've been briefed by my staff on some domestic and foreign policy issues. I'm happy you've got this opportunity to obtain this information firsthand. We are concerned that all Americans are fully aware of what we are doing and how it relates to them.

For those of you in the Hispanic press, I want you to know this concern is not something new, or some grand campaign strategy. Since my days as Governor of California, a State with a large population of Americans of Hispanic descent, I've been aware of the rich contributions your community has made, and is making, to our country. Within 24 hours of declaring my candidacy for President in 1979, I outlined a program that emphasized the importance of better relations among all of us in this hemisphere.

I said then, and have echoed since -- at Cancun; during my trip to Central and South America; and during my many consultations with the Presidents of Mexico -- that we in this hemisphere are all Americans. We worship the same God and we have enormous potential if we can build on those many things that bind us together.

Recently, I visited Hispanic business leaders in meetings in Florida and California. I was impressed by the optimism and enthusiasm I found. Their spirit and energy were reminiscent of Americans of an earlier age, when entrepreneurs turned an undeveloped wilderness into a dynamo of freedom and abundance. There is no better proof that the "American Dream" is alive and well than what is happening in the Hispanic community today.

Many Americans of Hispanic descent are moving into positions of influence and authority, not because of some quota, but because they are top quality individuals. Earlier this week, I appointed Katherine Ortega, a successful banker, as Treasurer of the United States. I'm certain that she, and the many others of Hispanic descent in this Administration, will continue to play an important role in building our economy.

I could recite a list of economic indicators, but, by now, I hope it's clear to everyone that we've turned a graveyard situation around, and the economy is taking off with new strength, confidence, and vigor. It's caught some of our critics by surprise. Only 3 years ago, some of the experts were saying it would take a decade to squeeze inflation out of the economy. We didn't know any better, so it didn't take us that long.

One word of warning, however. We cannot take economic expansion for granted. During the last decade, the growth of Government -- with its taxing and spending -- gave us double-digit inflation, sky-high interest rates, business stagnation, and unprecedented pessimism. That was just 3 years ago.

We've got our country back on the road to non-inflationary economic growth, but if we are lured back into the policies of tax, spend, and inflate -- policies that caused our problems in the first place -- everyone will be worse off.

Strengthening America's economy hasn't been our only challenge. We've accelerated our efforts to rebuild our military strength that was permitted to seriously erode during the last decade. We've done this not because we enjoy spending money. I can assure you, I don't want the Federal Government spending one cent more than is absolutely necessary for the preservation of our freedom and the maintenance of world peace. But, wishful thinking is a threat to peace.

The magnitude of our challenge was brought home to many Americans just 2 weeks ago when an unarmed passenger liner was willfully shot down by the Soviet Union, a massacre of 269 innocent people.

That gruesome episode unmasked the Soviet regime for what it is, a dictatorship with none of the respect for human values and individual rights that we in the Western democracies hold so dear. This brutal regime stamps out any dissent that might serve as a moderating influence. Worshipping God is considered a social evil. We cannot permit such a regime to militarily dominate the planet. This incident should reaffirm our commitment, and that of our allies, to rebuild our defensive strength.

We must and will continue to reach out for arms reduction agreements, to reduce the nuclear and conventional arsenals that threaten humankind. But, with a regime that callously shoots down passenger planes, demonstrating that their values are far different than our own, this is a great challenge -- one we must meet with faith, wisdom, unity, and courage. Perhaps if any good has come out of this tragedy, it is that the Western democracies better appreciate that peace will take more than gestures of goodwill and sincerity.

We are encouraged that, today, the Western Alliance is more unified than in many years. In this hemisphere, we enjoy a healthy dialogue with our neighbors, and a new level of respect has developed among us. In contrast, the Soviet Union is becoming increasingly isolated as the free people of the world become more aware of the nature of the Soviet regime.

Thank you very much. Now you may have some questions.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

September 13, 1983

MEETING WITH SENATORS HOWARD BAKER
(MAJORITY LEADER, TENNESSEE) AND
SENATOR ROBERT DOLE (R-KANSAS)

DATE: Wednesday, September 14, 1983

LOCATION: The Oval Office

TIME: 1:00 p.m. (15 minutes)

FROM: Kenneth M. Duberstein K.M.D.

I. PURPOSE

To impress upon Senators Baker and Dole the need for Senate floor consideration of the Administration's tuition tax credit legislation (S. 528) and to discuss possible legislative vehicles for this debate.

II. BACKGROUND

The Administration has worked diligently to move the tuition tax credit legislation through the Senate Finance Committee and to the Senate floor for debate by the full Senate. White House Legislative Affairs has taken the lead in this issue with assistance from the Departments of Education, Treasury and Justice.

Last Congress, after extensive debate, many difficult votes, and considerable delay, the bill was reported favorably from the Senate Finance Committee by a record vote of 11 ayes and 7 nays. White House and Administration officials labored successfully to resolve the anti-discrimination provisions in the Administration's bill which had become a key controversy.

While the Administration's bill in the 97th Congress was not officially reported from Committee until September 23, 1982, Administration officials indicated in a private meeting in July with Republican Members of the Finance Committee our interest in adding tuition tax credits to the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act (TEFRA). This suggestion was flatly rejected. Subsequent to the enactment of TEFRA, White House Legislative Affairs continued to make efforts to have a Senate floor debate on the tuition tax credit bill both before the autumn election recess and during the lame duck session. It became clear during this period that a number of Republican Senators did not want to vote at all on this measure.

The Administration's bill in the 98th Congress, S. 528, was reported favorably by the Senate Finance Committee in June, 1983. While several amendments were offered during the markup, the Administration won every important vote by a good margin. The bill again was reported favorably by a record vote of 11 ayes and 7 nays. The White House subsequently requested that tuition tax credits be considered as an amendment on the Senate floor to the withholding repeal legislation. The tuition tax credit coalition, at the request of the White House, approached both Senators Packwood and Moynihan to ask that they sponsor the amendment. Both responded that they would if asked by the White House and if Chairman Dole agreed that the withholding repeal bill was an acceptable vehicle. Dole rejected the idea.

Our strategy from the beginning has been to have the Senate floor debate on tuition tax credits as part of a "must" bill, i.e., one on which the House must go to conference. This is the only way that the coalition will have an opportunity to lobby House members on this issue. Normally, tax issues initiated in the Senate are offered as amendments to House passed revenue bills. There is a possible logical alternative for the tuition tax credit bill: S. 1285, the Math and Science bill. This legislation was reported in May from the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee (Orrin Hatch, Chairman and Ted Kennedy, Ranking Minority Member).

Revenue related measures which are due to be considered before the end of the year include the following:

- Federal Supplemental Compensation: This program expires October 1 and the Administration has recommended its extension.
- Debt Ceiling: The debt ceiling cap will be reached in October and an increase will be requested by the Administration.
- A year's end tax package is expected. This would address a variety of tax provisions, many of which expire December 31, 1983 unless they are extended.

TALKING POINTS FOR MEETING WITH SENATORS
HOWARD BAKER AND ROBERT DOLE

- I appreciate your coming down here today to talk about tuition tax credits and specifically the vehicle for Senate floor debate this Fall.
- As you know, I am committed to doing everything possible to see this program enacted.
- Bob, you have devoted a great deal of time both last year and this year in having this legislation reported from the Senate Finance Committee. I appreciate your efforts in this regard.
- I very much want to see this bill debated this fall on the Senate floor. I know it will be a difficult debate and a filibuster is likely.
- I strongly suggest that the Math and Science bill, S. 1285, be the vehicle for debate. I think this makes a lot of sense politically.
- Howard and Bob, I would like to have your thoughts on this.
