LUNCH WITH AMERICAN SECURITY COUNCIL FOUNDATION SUPPORTERS

DATE: December 20, 1983
LOCATION: Roosevelt Room
TIME: 12:00 noon - 1:00 p.m.
FROM: ROBERT C. McFARLANE RCM

I. PURPOSE

To express your appreciation to the American Security Council Foundation. To demonstrate that appreciation, you will present a watch to Gus A. Buder, Jr., who has for decades supported the concept of Peace Through Strength, and gold tie pins to others for their support of a strong and peaceful America.

II. BACKGROUND

The American Security Council Foundation's In Defense of America project is designed to help educate the American people about the threat we face from the Soviet Union's widespread use of propaganda and disinformation. The Foundation is planning to produce a film on the subject and will then purchase time on television stations around the country. In addition, the Foundation plans to remake two other films, one on Central American and the other dealing with the nuclear freeze issue.

III. PARTICIPANTS

The President, Robert C. McFarlane, Edwin Meese, Senator John Tower, Representative Bill Dickinson, John Fisher, President of the America Security Council, and 25 supporters of In Defense of America.

IV. PRESS PLAN

White House photographer. No press involvement.

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

Brief remarks by the President (Tab A).

Remarks by John Fisher, President, American Security Council Foundation.

-- Mr. Fisher will present you with a portfolio listing supporters of the American Security Council.

Senator Tower and Representative Dickinson will each deliver short remarks.

LUNCH

At 12:45 p.m., Mr. Fisher will stand up and present you with a watch, plaque and tie pin in appreciation for your efforts to build a strong America.

You will then present a watch to Mr. Gus Buder (82 years of age), on behalf of the American Security Council, in recognition of his many years of dedication to keeping America strong and at peace. Mr. Buder is perhaps the biggest supporter of the American Security Council.

You will then present 20 others in the group with tie pins, again on behalf of the American Security Council, in recognition for all they have done to keep America strong. They will file past quickly, shake hands, and return to their seats.

All others shake hands with the President.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: LUNCH WITH AMERICAN SECURITY COUNCIL
TUESDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1983

We're honored to have all of you here today. As you know, I've had some experience on the after dinner speaking circuit. So I'm well aware of how dangerous it is to make long speeches -- especially before the audience has had a chance to eat. My remarks are going to be brief because what I have to say is important but can be simply put.

You would not be here today if you had not already shown your willingness to make sacrifices and lend a personal hand in the struggle now going on in the world between totalitarianism and human freedom.

For those of us who have been part of it for the last quarter century, that struggle has sometimes been a very discouraging one. We can remember the sad circumstances of only a few years ago. Everywhere in the world, freedom seemed on the retreat. Soviet expansionism in Central America, Africa, Southwest Asia, especially Afghanistan, was unchecked. We had been getting lectures about our inordinate fear of communism. And we were afraid to broadcast the truth while the Soviets were flooding the world with propaganda.

I think that is turning around now -- there are insurgencies in a number of Soviet client states, the fissures in the Soviet empire are deepening and the United States is emerging as a consistent and strong defender of freedom and democracy.
