

Ronald Reagan Presidential Library
Digital Library Collections

This is a PDF of a folder from our textual collections.

Collection: Dolan, Anthony: Files
Folder Title: Presidential Remarks: Toast at Dinner
Hosted by U.S. (Dolan-Penniman) 11/20/1985
Box: 38

To see more digitized collections visit:

<https://reaganlibrary.gov/archives/digital-library>

To see all Ronald Reagan Presidential Library inventories visit:

<https://reaganlibrary.gov/document-collection>

Contact a reference archivist at: reagan.library@nara.gov

Citation Guidelines: <https://reaganlibrary.gov/citing>

National Archives Catalogue: <https://catalog.archives.gov/>

(Dolan/BE)

November 13, 1985

7:30 p.m.

RR

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: TOAST AT DINNER HOSTED BY U.S.
GENEVA, SWITZERLAND
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1985

Mr. General Secretary, Mr. Foreign Minister, Mr. Secretary,
honored guests.

Before our arrival here, Mr. General Secretary, you and I both felt it our duty to sound a note of realism, to caution our countrymen and the world about false hopes and expectations
arising from these talks. It is in this realistic vein, we have conducted two days of intensive discussions.

We have considered some of the most vital problems facing the world today -- above all, the need for peace and freedom. On some we have made progress. On others we have identified work for the future. We have acknowledged the serious differences between us; at the same time, we both have acknowledged our grave
responsibility to work together to keep the peace.

Mr. General Secretary, as you know, we in the United States
are an optimistic people who believe in the capacity of the human race to accomplish good, to cause sweeping change. One of those most responsible for our national independence, Thomas Paine, said once -- and it is a favorite of mine -- "We have it in our power to begin the world over again." We Americans still believe
the peoples of the world can better their own and others' lives
if only they have the chance to live in peace and in freedom.
But they look to us now to act responsibly; they know, as do we,
that history has placed in our hands means of destruction so

terrible, so awesome, that their use could endanger the existence of all humanity.

The awesome power of modern weapons makes us answerable not only to our own, but to all peoples. Old dogmas and tired formulas cannot help. To stir passion or feed suspicion will only hinder. We must look beyond the narrow interests of the moment and confront the deeper, truer realities. If our discussions have helped this process, then I shall return to my country satisfied.

Mr. General Secretary, American presidents have met with the leaders of your country on many occasions -- in alliance against a common enemy, and less happily, in times of great tension in the world. Every meeting has stirred hopes among the peoples of the world that we will have the wisdom and courage to pursue peace vigorously and consistently.

It is difficult to move toward this goal in two short days. But I hope that our talks have been a step toward building a better, a more peaceful relationship, and thus I would consider them successful.

Here in Geneva we have planted seeds of hope for the future. The part of our work that begins tomorrow, when we leave Geneva, is as important as what we have achieved over the past two days. It is our job, and that of our associates, to ensure that these seeds grow and flourish, and that no opportunity for progress be lost.

Mr. General Secretary, our nations are our peoples; they are the ones who gain if we have done our work well. It is fitting, then, to conclude this occasion by joining in a toast to the Soviet and American peoples, those living and those yet unborn. May they live in peace and freedom.

(Dolan/BE)
November 13, 1985
7:30 p.m.

RR

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: TOAST AT DINNER HOSTED BY U.S.
GENEVA, SWITZERLAND
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1985

Mr. General Secretary, Mr. Foreign Minister, Mr. Secretary,
honored guests.

Before our arrival here, Mr. General Secretary, you and I
both felt it our duty to sound a note of realism, to caution our
countrymen and the world about false hopes and expectations
arising from these talks. It is in this realistic vein, we have conducted two days of intensive discussions.

We have considered some of the most vital problems facing
the world today -- above all, the need for peace and freedom. On some we have made progress. On others we have identified work for the future. We have acknowledged the serious differences between us; at the same time, we both have acknowledged our grave
responsibility to work together to keep the peace.

Mr. General Secretary, as you know, we in the United States
are an optimistic people who believe in the capacity of the human race to accomplish good, to cause sweeping change. One of those
most responsible for our national independence, Thomas Paine,
said once -- and it is a favorite of mine -- "We have it in our power to begin the world over again." We Americans still believe
the peoples of the world can better their own and others' lives
if only they have the chance to live in peace and in freedom.
But they look to us now to act responsibly; they know, as do we,
that history has placed in our hands means of destruction so

terrible, so awesome, that their use could endanger the existence of all humanity.

The awesome power of modern weapons makes us answerable not only to our own, but to all peoples. Old dogmas and tired formulas cannot help. To stir passion or feed suspicion will only hinder. We must look beyond the narrow interests of the moment and confront the deeper, truer realities. If our discussions have helped this process, then I shall return to my country satisfied.

Mr. General Secretary, American presidents have met with the leaders of your country on many occasions -- in alliance against a common enemy, and less happily, in times of great tension in the world. Every meeting has stirred hopes among the peoples of the world that we will have the wisdom and courage to pursue peace vigorously and consistently.

It is difficult to move toward this goal in two short days. But I hope that our talks have been a step toward building a better, a more peaceful relationship, and thus I would consider them successful.

Here in Geneva we have planted seeds of hope for the future. The part of our work that begins tomorrow, when we leave Geneva, is as important as what we have achieved over the past two days. It is our job, and that of our associates, to ensure that these seeds grow and flourish, and that no opportunity for progress be lost.

Mr. General Secretary, our nations are our peoples; they are the ones who gain if we have done our work well. It is fitting,

then, to conclude this occasion by joining in a toast to the Soviet and American peoples, those living and those yet unborn. May they live in peace and freedom.

CLOSE HOLD

Tony

*BEN
the two pains quote may be misinterpreted to endorse Communist revolutionary goals. hl*

from Ed Dyer

Document No. _____

WHITE HOUSE STAFFING MEMORANDUM

DATE: 11-12-85 ACTION/CONCURRENCE/COMMENT DUE BY: 11-13-85 at Noon

SUBJECT: PRESIDENT'S TOAST AT DINNER HOSTED BY U.S. IN GENEVA (11-20-85)

	ACTION FYI			ACTION FYI
VICE PRESIDENT	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	OGLESBY	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
REGAN	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
MILLER	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	RYAN	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
BUCHANAN	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	SPEAKES	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
CHAVEZ	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	SPRINKEL	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
CHEW	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	SS	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
DANIELS	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	THOMAS	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
FIELDING	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	TUTTLE	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
HENKEL	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	ELLIOTT	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>
HICKS	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	_____	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
KINGON	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	_____	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
LACY	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	_____	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
McFARLANE	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>	_____	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>

REMARKS: Please submit any comments/remarks directly to Ben Elliott by noon tomorrow. Thank you.

RESPONSE:

David L. Chew
Staff Secretary
Ext. 2702

(Dolan/BE)
November 12, 1985
7:00 p.m.

Received 9:0

1985 NOV 12 PM 7:24

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: TOAST AT DINNER HOSTED BY U.S.
GENEVA, SWITZERLAND
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1985

Mr. General Secretary, Mr. Foreign Minister, Mr. Secretary,
honored guests.

Before our arrival here, Mr. General Secretary, you and I
both felt it our duty to sound a note of realism, to caution our
countrymen and the world about false hopes and expectations
arising from these talks. It is in this realistic vein, we have conducted two days of intensive discussions.

We have considered some of the most vital problems facing
the world today -- above all, the need for peace and freedom. On some we have made progress. On others we have identified work for the future. We have acknowledged the serious differences between us; at the same time, we both have acknowledged our grave
responsibility to work together to keep the peace.

Mr. General Secretary, as you know, we in the United States
are an optimistic people who believe in the capacity of the human race to accomplish good, to cause sweeping change. One of those
most responsible for our national independence, Thomas Paine,
said once -- and it is a favorite of mine -- "we have it in our hands to make the world over again." We Americans still believe
the peoples of the world can better their own and others' lives
if only they have the chance to live in peace and in freedom.
But they look to us now to act responsibly; they know, as do we,
that history has placed in our hands means of destruction so

terrible, so awesome, that their use could endanger the existence of all humanity.

The awesome power of modern weapons makes us answerable not only to our own, but to all peoples. Old dogmas and tired formulas cannot help. To stir passion or feed suspicion will only hinder. We must look beyond the narrow interests of the moment and confront the deeper, truer realities. If our discussions have helped this process, then I shall return to my country satisfied.

Mr. General Secretary, American presidents have met with the leaders of your country on many occasions -- in alliance against a common enemy, and less happily, in times of great tension in the world. Every meeting has stirred hopes among the peoples of the world that we will have the wisdom and courage to pursue peace vigorously and consistently.

It is difficult to move toward this goal in two short days. But I hope that our talks have been a step toward building a better, a more peaceful relationship, and thus I would consider them successful.

Here in Geneva we have planted seeds of hope for the future. The part of our work that begins tomorrow, when we leave Geneva, is as important as what we have achieved over the past two days. It is our job, and that of our associates, to ensure that these seeds grow and flourish, and that no opportunity for progress be lost.

Mr. General Secretary, our nations are our peoples; they are the ones who gain if we have done our work well. It is fitting, then, to conclude this occasion by joining in a toast to the Soviet and American peoples, those living and those yet unborn. May they live in peace and freedom.

(Dolan/BE)
November 12, 1985
7:00 p.m. SS

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: TOAST AT DINNER HOSTED BY U.S.
GENEVA, SWITZERLAND
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1985

Mr. General Secretary, Mr. Foreign Minister, Mr. Secretary,
honored guests.

Before our arrival here, Mr. General Secretary, you and I
both felt it our duty to sound a note of realism, to caution our
countrymen and the world about false hopes and expectations
arising from these talks. It is in this realistic vein, we have conducted two days of intensive discussions.

We have considered some of the most vital problems facing
the world today -- above all, the need for peace and freedom. On some we have made progress. On others we have identified work for the future. We have acknowledged the serious differences between us; at the same time, we both have acknowledged our grave
responsibility to work together to keep the peace.

Mr. General Secretary, as you know, we in the United States
are an optimistic people who believe in the capacity of the human race to accomplish good, to cause sweeping change. One of those
most responsible for our national independence, Thomas Paine,
said once -- and it is a favorite of mine -- "we have it in our hands to make the world over again." We Americans still believe
the peoples of the world can better their own and others' lives
if only they have the chance to live in peace and in freedom.
But they look to us now to act responsibly; they know, as do we,
that history has placed in our hands means of destruction so

terrible, so awesome, that their use could endanger the existence of all humanity.

The awesome power of modern weapons makes us answerable not only to our own, but to all peoples. Old dogmas and tired formulas cannot help. To stir passion or feed suspicion will only hinder. We must look beyond the narrow interests of the moment and confront the deeper, truer realities. If our discussions have helped this process, then I shall return to my country satisfied.

Mr. General Secretary, American presidents have met with the leaders of your country on many occasions -- in alliance against a common enemy, and less happily, in times of great tension in the world. Every meeting has stirred hopes among the peoples of the world that we will have the wisdom and courage to pursue peace vigorously and consistently.

It is difficult to move toward this goal in two short days. But I hope that our talks have been a step toward building a better, a more peaceful relationship, and thus I would consider them successful.

Here in Geneva we have planted seeds of hope for the future. The part of our work that begins tomorrow, when we leave Geneva, is as important as what we have achieved over the past two days. It is our job, and that of our associates, to ensure that these seeds grow and flourish, and that no opportunity for progress be lost.

Mr. General Secretary, our nations are our peoples; they are the ones who gain if we have done our work well. It is fitting, then, to conclude this occasion by joining in a toast to the Soviet and American peoples, those living and those yet unborn. May they live in peace and freedom.

(Dolan/BE)
November 12, 1985
7:00 p.m. SS

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: TOAST AT DINNER HOSTED BY U.S.
GENEVA, SWITZERLAND
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1985

Mr. General Secretary, Mr. Foreign Minister, Mr. Secretary,
honored guests.

Before our arrival here, Mr. General Secretary, you and I
both felt it our duty to sound a note of realism, to caution our
countrymen and the world about false hopes and expectations
arising from these talks. It is in this realistic vein, we have conducted two days of intensive discussions.

We have considered some of the most vital problems facing
the world today -- above all, the need for peace and freedom. On some we have made progress. On others we have identified work for the future. We have acknowledged the serious differences between us; at the same time, we both have acknowledged our grave
responsibility to work together to keep the peace.

Mr. General Secretary, as you know, we in the United States
are an optimistic people who believe in the capacity of the human race to accomplish good, to cause sweeping change. One of those
most responsible for our national independence, Thomas Paine,
said once -- and it is a favorite of mine -- "we have it in our hands to make the world over again." We Americans still believe
the peoples of the world can better their own and others' lives
if only they have the chance to live in peace and in freedom.
But they look to us now to act responsibly; they know, as do we,
that history has placed in our hands means of destruction so

terrible, so awesome, that their use could endanger the existence of all humanity.

The awesome power of modern weapons makes us answerable not only to our own, but to all peoples. Old dogmas and tired formulas cannot help. To stir passion or feed suspicion will only hinder. We must look beyond the narrow interests of the moment and confront the deeper, truer realities. If our discussions have helped this process, then I shall return to my country satisfied.

Mr. General Secretary, American presidents have met with the leaders of your country on many occasions -- in alliance against a common enemy, and less happily, in times of great tension in the world. Every meeting has stirred hopes among the peoples of the world that we will have the wisdom and courage to pursue peace vigorously and consistently.

It is difficult to move toward this goal in two short days. But I hope that our talks have been a step toward building a better, a more peaceful relationship, and thus I would consider them successful.

Here in Geneva we have planted seeds of hope for the future. The part of our work that begins tomorrow, when we leave Geneva, is as important as what we have achieved over the past two days. It is our job, and that of our associates, to ensure that these seeds grow and flourish, and that no opportunity for progress be lost.

Mr. General Secretary, our nations are our peoples; they are the ones who gain if we have done our work well. It is fitting,

then, to conclude this occasion by joining in a toast to the Soviet and American peoples, those living and those yet unborn. May they live in peace and freedom.

(Dolan) BT
November 12, 1985
6:30 p.m.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: TOAST AT DINNER HOSTED BY U.S.
GENEVA, SWITZERLAND
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1985

Mr. General Secretary, Mr. Foreign Minister, Mr. Secretary,
honored guests.

Before our arrival here, Mr. General Secretary, you and I
both felt it our duty to sound a note of realism, to caution our
countrymen and the world about false hopes and expectations
arising from these talks. It is in this realistic vein, we have conducted two days of intensive discussions.

We have considered some of the most vital problems facing
the world today -- above all, the need for peace and freedom. On some we have made progress. On others we have identified work for the future. We have acknowledged the serious differences between us; at the same time, we both have acknowledged our grave
responsibility to work together to keep the peace.

R Mr. General Secretary, as you know, we in the United States
are an optimistic people who believe in the capacity of the human race to accomplish good, to cause sweeping change. One of those
most responsible for our national independence, Thomas Paine,
said once -- and it is a favorite of mine -- "we have it in our hands to make the world over again." We Americans still believe
the peoples of the world can better their own and others' lives
if they only have the chance to live in peace and in freedom.
But they look to us now to act responsibly; they know, as do we,
that history has placed in our hands means of destruction so

terrible, so awesome, that their use could endanger the existence of all humanity.

The awesome power of modern weapons makes us answerable not only to our own, but to all peoples. Old dogmas and tired formulas cannot help. To stir passion or feed suspicion will only hinder. We must look beyond the narrow interests of the moment and confront the deeper, truer realities. If our discussions have helped this process, then I shall return to my country satisfied.

Mr. General Secretary, American presidents have met with the leaders of your country on many occasions -- in alliance against a common enemy, and less happily, in times of great tension in the world. Every meeting has stirred hopes among the peoples of the world that we will have the wisdom and courage to pursue peace vigorously and consistently.

I have that It is difficult to move toward this goal in two short days. But our talks have been a step toward building a better, a more peaceful relationship, and thus I would consider them successful.

Here in Geneva we have planted ~~the~~ seeds of hope ^{for} in the future. The part of our work that begins tomorrow, when we leave Geneva, is as important as what we have achieved over the past two days. It is our job, and that of our associates, to ensure that these seeds grow and flourish, and that no opportunity for progress be lost.

Mr. General Secretary, our nations are our peoples; they are the ones who gain if we have done our work well. It is fitting, then, to conclude this occasion by joining in a toast to the

Page 3

Soviet and American peoples, those living and those yet unborn.
May they live in peace and freedom.

Jimmy

President's Dinner Toast

(Second Night)

Mr. General Secretary, Mr. Foreign Minister, Mr. Secretary,
Honored Guests.

Jimmy A

~~For two days we have been engaged in intensive discussions.~~
We have considered some of the most vital problems facing the world today -- above all, ~~on~~ the need for peace and freedom. On some we have made progress. On others we have identified work for the future. ~~We have certainly made our staffs fulfill and over-fulfill their work plans.~~ Throughout our discussions, we have been realistic. Our discussions have been marked by realism; about our differences yes but

~~our differences yes but~~ insert B → we should have no illusions about the differences; on this point the

~~Mr. General Secretary, in the United States we believe that there is nothing beyond the capacity of the human race to accomplish. Our peoples can better their own and others' lives~~

~~if they only have the chance to live in peace and in freedom. But they look to us because history has placed in our hands means of destruction so terrible, so awesome, that their use could endanger the existence of all humanity.~~ new - this is not how to act responsibly; they know us do we that

The awesome power of modern weapons makes us answerable not only to our own, but to all peoples. Old dogmas and formulas cannot help ~~us~~ To ~~stirring up~~ passion or fear ~~suspicion and passion cannot help~~ will only hinder further

~~We must look beyond narrow interests and issues of the moment and consider deeper, truer matters.~~ confront the ~~If our discussions~~ deeper realities have helped this process, then I shall return to my country satisfied.

Mr. General Secretary, American presidents have met with the leaders of your country on many occasions -- in alliance against a common enemy, and, ^{less happily}, in times of ^{great tension} ~~mistrust and~~

^{the world,} ~~bitterness.~~ Every meeting has stirred hopes among the peoples of the world that we will have the wisdom and courage to ~~provide the~~ ^{establish} ~~build a strong foundation for peace.~~

It is difficult to move toward this goal in two short days. But our talks have been a step toward building a ^{more} ~~firm~~ ^{peaceful} durable relationship, and thus I would consider them successful.

Here in Geneva we have planted the seeds of hope in the future. The part of our work that begins tomorrow, when we leave Geneva, is as important as what we have achieved over the past two days. It is our job, and that of our associates, to ensure that these seeds grow and flourish, that ^{and} no opportunity for progress ^{is} ~~is~~ lost. [Specifics to be provided.]

Mr. General Secretary, our nations ^{are} ~~have no greater treasure~~ ^{are the ones who} ~~than~~ our peoples; They ~~have the most to gain~~ if we have done our work well. It is fitting then to conclude this ^{occasion} ~~meal~~ by joining in a toast to the Soviet and American peoples, those living and those yet unborn. May they live in peace and freedom.

(Dolan)
November 12, 1985
6:00 p.m.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: TOAST AT DINNER HOSTED BY U.S.
GENEVA, SWITZERLAND
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1985

Mr. General Secretary, Mr. Foreign Minister, Mr. Secretary,
honored guests.

Before our arrival here, Mr. General Secretary, you and I
both felt it our duty to sound a note of realism, to caution our
countrymen and the world about false hopes and expectations
arising from these talks. It is in this realistic vein, we have conducted two days of intensive discussions.

We have considered some of the most vital problems facing
the world today -- above all, the need for peace and freedom. On some we have made progress. On others we have identified work for the future. We have acknowledged the serious differences between us; at the same time, we both have acknowledged our grave
responsibility to work together to keep the peace.

Mr. General Secretary as you know, we in the United States
are an optimistic people who believe in the capacity of the human race to accomplish good, to cause sweeping change. One of those
most responsible for our national independence, Thomas Paine,
said once -- and it is a favorite of mine -- "we have it in our hands to make the world over again." We Americans still believe ~~and~~ the peoples of the world can better their own and others' lives if they only have the chance to live in peace and in freedom. But they look to us now to act responsibly; they know, as ^{Do we} ~~we do~~, that history has placed in our hands means of destruction so terrible, so awesome, that their use could endanger the existence of all humanity.

The awesome power of modern weapons makes us answerable not only to our own, but to all peoples. Old dogmas and tired formulas cannot help. To stir passion or feed suspicion will only hinder. We must look beyond narrow interests ~~and issues~~ of the moment and confront the deeper, truer realities. If our discussions have helped this process, then I shall return to my country satisfied.

Mr. General Secretary, American presidents have met with the leaders of your country on many occasions -- in alliance against a common enemy, and less happily, in times of great tension in the world. Every meeting has stirred hopes among the peoples of the world that we will have the wisdom and courage to establish ~~any~~ ^{better} ~~avenues~~ ^{to} pursue peace ~~and establish~~ ^{more seriously and consistently.}

It is difficult to move toward this goal in two short days. But our talks have been a step toward building a better, a more peaceful relationship, and thus I would consider them successful.

Here in Geneva we have planted the seeds of hope in the future. The part of our work that begins tomorrow, when we leave Geneva, is as important as what we have achieved over the past two days. It is our job, and that of our associates, to ensure that these seeds grow and flourish, and that no opportunity for progress be lost.

Mr. General Secretary, our nations are our peoples; they are the ones who gain if we have done our work well. It is fitting then to conclude this occasion by joining in a toast to the

Page 3

Soviet and American peoples, those living and those yet unborn.
May they live in peace and freedom.