Biography

Biography

The Office of Media Relations handled all press contacts with the White House other than the actual White House press corps. It was created in the fall of 1981 from the Office of Media Liaison in the Press Office and the Television Office from the Office of Communication. The office had various names throughout the administration including: Office of Media Liaison; Office of Media Relations and Planning; Office of Media Relations and Broadcasting; Office of Media and Broadcasting Relations. The Office's staff, physical location in the White House and general functions remained exactly the same during these various name changes. For ease of use and to reflect their organizational unity the Library is naming this office: Office of Media Relations.

At the start of the Reagan Administration, Karna Small-Stringer was a Deputy Press Secretary under James Brady, the White House Press Secretary. After Brady was injured in the March 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan, Larry Speakes, another Deputy Press Secretary, was appointed Acting Press Secretary. In June 1981 Speakes was named Principal Deputy Press Secretary, officially taking over most of Brady's duties. In September, Small-Stringer was appointed as Director of a newly created office, Media Relations. This office combined the Office of Media Liaison (a unit of the Press Secretary's Office under Lou Gerig) and the Television Office function which was in the Communications Office. During her time as Director of Media Relations, Small-Stringer also did press and public affairs work for the Public Affairs Directorate of the National Security Council. In March 1984 she left the Office of Media Relations to perform the NSC function full time. See her NSC collection for material relating to work at the NSC.

Lou Gerig was the Deputy Director under Karna Small-Stringer for a period but soon left the White House. The Library does not have a separate collection for Mr. Gerig. His work product, mostly related to the old Office of Media Liaison, is part of this collection.
