SERIES 02: DEPARTMENTS, DIVISIONS AND BOARDS, 1967-1974 (13.3 l.ft., Boxes R52-R91)

This series consists of materials submitted to the Resources Agency by its various departments as part of the History and Archives Project. At the end of Reagan's second term, the various components of the State government were asked to submit reports issued during the Reagan administration to the Governor's Office. This series is divided into thirteen sub-series which reflect the components of the Resources Agency that submitted materials to the History and Archives Project. The sub-series consist of: Subseries A: Air Resources Board; Subseries B: Department of Conservation (including Subseries C: Division of Forestry; Subseries D: Division of Mines and Geology; Subseries E: Division of Oil and Gas; Subseries F: Division of Public Affairs; Subseries G: Division of Soil Conservation); Subseries H: Department of Fish and Game; Subseries I: Department of Navigation and Ocean Development; Subseries J: Department of Parks and Recreation; Subseries K: Department of Water Resources; Subseries L: State Water Resources Control Board, and Subseries M: The San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission. This Commission is an independent agency.

Some of the departments submitted only published information. Other departments also submitted lists of accomplishments during the Reagan administration, important decision memorandums, or other types of internal documents. The materials are arranged alphabetically by department, and then alphabetically by division. Many departments issue numbered publications or bulletins, which have been arranged numerically.

This series pertains to the Conference on California's Changing Environment held November 17-18, 1969 at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles. The conference topics covered the impact of air pollution, water pollution, landfills, and urban sprawl on the quality of life in California. The conference was designed to bring together government officials, academic researchers, representatives of the private sector, and representatives of environmental groups to discuss possible solutions to the variety of environmental problems facing California. These materials include the recommendations of the Citizen's Committee that organized the conference, financial records, attendance records, and papers presented at the conference.

This series consists of materials submitted to the Resources Agency by its various departments as part of the History and Archives Project. At the end of Reagan's second term, the various components of the State government were asked to submit reports issued during the Reagan administration to the Governor's Office. This series is divided into thirteen sub-series which reflect the components of the Resources Agency that submitted materials to the History and Archives Project. The sub-series consist of: Subseries A: Air Resources Board; Subseries B: Department of Conservation (including Subseries C: Division of Forestry; Subseries D: Division of Mines and Geology; Subseries E: Division of Oil and Gas; Subseries F: Division of Public Affairs; Subseries G: Division of Soil Conservation); Subseries H: Department of Fish and Game; Subseries I: Department of Navigation and Ocean Development; Subseries J: Department of Parks and Recreation; Subseries K: Department of Water Resources; Subseries L: State Water Resources Control Board, and Subseries M: The San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission. This Commission is an independent agency.

Some of the departments submitted only published information. Other departments also submitted lists of accomplishments during the Reagan administration, important decision memorandums, or other types of internal documents. The materials are arranged alphabetically by department, and then alphabetically by division. Many departments issue numbered publications or bulletins, which have been arranged numerically.
